Argos Receive Tough Break In Game With Ottawa When Kent Suffers Torn Hip Muscles

Red Storey, Chuck McLean and Kent Will be Absentees Saturday

OTTAWA REINFORCED

Nicholson of Queen's and Hendrick of Calgary Join the Rough Riders

(By The Canadian Press)

After two straight victories in the Interprovincial Football Union, there deosn't seem to be an earthly reason why Ottawa Rough Riders should want reinforcements for the remainder of the schedule but they're getting them, and Ross Trimble doesn't turn anyone away from his camp.

Two new players turned out with the champions last night as they went through a long drill, concentrating on a forward-pass offensive that they'll unleash against Toronto Argonauts in the East's big game at Ottawa Saturday. The new men were Sid Kendrick, former Calgary Bronk outside, and Doug Nicholson, who played with Queen's University intermediates last season.

Unless they show something exceptional, it's doubtful that either can break into the lineup at this late date. But Trimble isn't taking any chances on turning away a potential star and Kendrick and Nicholson will be given every opportunity to show what they have.

Receives Tough Break

Argos received another tough break in their drill last night. They already had lost big Red Storey, the galloping halfback, and Chuck McLean for Saturday's game and last night they went at a scrimmage so fiercely that outside Roy Kent suffered torn hip mucles. He'll be out for 10 days or so.

The Argos were worked hard. Before the drill they were shown moving pictures of their play against Hamilton Tigers last night. They beat the Tigers 17-5 but they didn't look very impressive. Tonight will be their last practice of the week and if they aren't ready then, they'll never be.

Shaded only by the Argo-Rider clash this week-end is the Ontario Union game at Toronto between that League's leaders—Toronto Balmy Beach and Sarnia Battery. From the way the Beaches were lining up at the injury table last night, it might seem that they expect to field only a half-healthy backfield.

Seven Stars Injured

Seven backfield stars had injuries of some kind but only Bobby Porter, Jack Frizzelle and Don Crowe are doubtful starters, and Crowe will be in uniform if at all possible.

The Tigers also have been getting overtime workouts this week, but coach Art Massucci's problems weren't aided any by Teddy Manorek's decision to quit. Manorek is a policeman and had been having trouble getting out for practices and the games.

At Montreal last night Bill Hughes sent his club through an hour's chalk talk and a three-hour workout. It's do or die for Tigers or Montreal this week—and Hughes is determined that the Montreal team won't die for a while yet.

Red Dutton Denies Signing Players Eligible for Junior

Winnipeg, Oct. 17—(CP)—Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said here last night that Mervyn (Red) Dutton, manager of New York's National Hockey League Americans, had denied signing two hockey players still eligible to play junior.

"Red Dutton officially denied that either Vic Lofvendahl or Andy Branigan had been signed to professional contracts," said Sargent. The C.A.H.A. official said he had been in communication with Dutton who is conducting a training camp for the Americans at Port Arthur.

In a dispatch from Port Arthur, The Canadian Press said Tuesday that Branigan had been signed to a professional contract. Branigan, who played with Winnipeg Monarchs last winter and who still is eligible for junior hockey, is in Ottawa training with Springfield Indians, American league farm team of the Americans.

Lofvendahl, also still of junior age, played defence with Kenora Thistles last season when they reached the Dominion junior finals. Sargent said there had been reports Lofvendahl had been signed to play for Seattle Seahawks in the Pacific Coast league.

Dit Clapper Named As Bruins' Captain

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 17 (CP)—Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, veteran defence man, has been re-named Captain of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, Art Ross, general manager, announced today. Clapper, a native of Hastings, Ont., has served as captain during the last two years. He is starting his 14th season in the National League.

Bobby Bauer, right winger from Kitchener, and Jack Crawford; Dublin, Ont., rearguard, were chosen alternate captains.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 17—(AP)—Extra—Mickey Cochrane definitely is interested in that Cleveland job "if they decide to change managers." One Ohio paper said Northwestern showed Ohio State more fundamental football in one hour than the Buckeyes had absorbed in 40 practices. Wow! . . . where did Pat Comiskey lose his right hand sleep producer? He bounced 'em off old Henry Cooper's jaw for 10 rounds the other night and didn't dent it.

Get together, Gents.

Headline in one N.Y. paper today said: "Yale Alumni Back Miller in Grid Blast." Another said: "Yale Alumni Up in Arms Over New Football Policy." . . . One of the spots used for the draft registration yesterday was the Keeneland race track, near Lexington.

George M. Trautman, President of the American Association, is going around polishing up the medal they gave him for shooting a hole-in-one at Louisville. . . . Mike Jacobs, off to Boston to see Billy Conn fight Al McCoy, says they'll draw a $20,000 house. . . . Jack Corbett, former owner of Syracuse Chiefs is headed east from Hollywood with something up his sleeve—as usual. . . . Lou Arcaro, cousin of the famous Eddie, also has taken up the jockey business.

YOUTH GOING TO HAVE FLING WITH CANADIANS

JUVENILES TRY OUT

Complete Line From West Will be Kept Together in Montreal

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Oct. 17 (CP)—Youth is going to have its fling in the new scheme of things for Montreal Canadiens.

Canadiens are the last of the National Hockey League clubs to get a large scale school system underway, but now that the ball is rolling the men leading the team are taking no half-way measures in efforts to transform the club that finished so poorly in the past two seasons.

Listening only a minute to the exuberant Thomas Patrick Gorman who is aiding business manager Frank Patrick and coach Dick Irvin in shaping things up, and one gets a fair idea of the manner in which Canadiens are looking ahead.

"We've got three juveniles down here from Regina, each one of them 16 years of age," said Gorman. "They'll go to school in Montreal, and likely play in one of the junior teams here. They played as a line in Regina and we'll keep them that way, bringing them along gradually."

Line Kept Intact

The Regina lads are Ken Smith, Albert Tilson and Cyril Beigler. Gorman intends to bring them tomorrow to St. Hyacinthe, only a short distance from Montreal, to watch Canadiens go through training paces for a couple of days.

Another sign of the new trend is the fact that a 15-year-old, Floud Curry of Kirkland Lake, Ont., attended the team's school at St. Hyacinthe. Curry, a hefty of 151 pounds, impressed Irvin and the Habitant coach predicted that it would only be a few seasons before the youngster made a name for himself.

Seldom has a hockey club had such a talented array of leaders to shape its destiny as the Canadiens of 1940-41, for Gorman has led five teams to the Stanley Cup championship while Irvin coached Toronto to one title in his 10-year stay with the Maple Leafs, and was close many times. Patrick, an outstanding player, gained note as an organizer with brother Lester in the old Pacific Coast League. He also spent one season as manager of Boston Bruins.

N. H. L. Training Camp Notes

(By the Canadian Press)

There's no "soldiering" in the Toronto Maple Leafs camp at St. Catharines with L. Corp. Clarence Day in charge. Day, a member of the Toronto Scottish, N.P.A.M., is coach of the Leafs this year and is whipping the players into shape in good old army style.

Dead end kids: Bingo Kampman and Bucko McDonald of the Toronto Leafs make quite a pair. There's only one thing they would rather do, next to eating, and that is bash down opposing forwards from their defence posts.

Kampman and McDonald room together and the kibitzing is terrific. One night Kampman kept McDonald awake by extolling all the great deeds in a sporting way fashioned by men from Kitchener, Ont., which is Bingo's home town. Bucko finally fell asleep, then evened the score by waking up at 3 a.m. and munching apples in bed.

The old linament bottle is seeing plenty of service with some of the veterans with Montreal Canadiens, who are practising at St. Hyacinthe, Que. Coach Dick Irvin sat in the lobby of the hotel where the Canucks are bedded down last night and chuckled as some of them hobbled about.

"Heck," he said, "some of them are so stiff they can hardly move. I guess that must be new to a lot of them, who have been used to reporting and then settling down comfortably to work themselves into shape—by Christmas."

Five members of the Boston Bruins took time out yesterday to register for selective service with the United States' armed forces. They were Goalie Frankie Brimsek, Defenceman Johnny Crawford and the famed kraut line of Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart.

Crawford has applied for American citizenship while the kraut kids plan to file citizenship papers. Brimsek is Minnesota born.

Lester Patrick says his biggest headache so far this season has not been teaching men to play hockey or getting them to sign contracts but to straighten out the new Canadian and United States immigration and exchange regulations. He said last night he thought he had them all clarified and he started to draw up players' contracts for this season. So far, he has not announced signing anyone.

Frankie Eddolls, the chunky Oshawa, Ont., defenceman, is drawing raves from the Maple Leaf bosses at the St. Catharines camp—but Frankie won't be a Leaf this season. He's only 18 and the hockey rules say that a junior can't be signed to an N.H.L. contract. But book this fellow for future references as a defence star.

AIR FORCE HOLDS ANNUAL SPORTS DAY PROGRAM

Jovial Time Seen as Officers and Men Fraternize on Field of Sport

THE WINNERS

Trenton, Oct. 17 (Special)—Group Captain J. A. Sully and officers of high rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force enjoyed the fun and in turn supplied a great deal of hilarity for the 1500 airmen and visitors at the annual field and track meet held at the Trenton Air Station, yesterday afternoon.

The Officer Commanding entered into the spirit of the Field Day and entered two track events placing first in both. He won the race for Wing Commanders and officers of higher rank and also took the honors in the 45 years and over race.

The spectators were treated to a comical show when a field ambulance speeded onto the field with siren screaming, at the conclusion of the race for Wing Commanders and officers of higher rank. Wing Commander Duncan, who placed third in the race, was whisked away by the ambulance attendants on a stretcher while Wing Commander J. Maudsley, who placed second took off across the new sports field with the attendants in pursuit. Both men were suposed to be done in by their exertion during the race but Wing Commander Maudsley didn't appear to be tired as he led the attendants in the wild dash for freedom.

Air-craftsman M. A. Parsons of Security Guard was declared the all-round champion and also the field champion at the conclusion of the meet. Air-craftsman R. Murray of Central Flying School, won the track events.

Like Old Man River, Harry Ridley just keeps rollin' along when it comes to winning golf titles at the Belleville Golf Club. This year Harry rung up his seventh consecutive club championship after winning his initial club title in 1932. Harry Ridley is a consistent golfer of the highest class, playing the same steady game whether one up or one down. Jack Twigg, of the R.C.A.F., won the club handicap, while Will Abercromby, also of the Air Force, was runner up to both club champs, Abercromby being affected with an injured hand in both final matches. In the ladies group the club championship lies between Mrs. O. Waldorf and Mrs. Len Fozard and will be played over the week-end, while Games Captain Miss Helen Sulman won the ladies club handicap.

The Belleville Golf Club closed out a most successful season with a gala banquet in their clubhouse last evening. The awarding of prizes and the election of officers was the principal business on the evening's agenda. One of the chief topics of discussion by the Belleville golfers was the matter of ground rentals. It was pointed out that the Port Hope Golf Club pay a rental of $250.00 per annum while in Trenton the golf club's annual rental fee for their course is $200.00. The Belleville golfers feel their rental fee is considerably out of proportion to that of other clubs throughout the district, a matter the newly inaugurated officers will take into serious consideration during the off season. When it came down to the actual election of officers, however, that veteran of Belleville golfers, J. E. "Joe" Cather, was elected president. No more fervent disciple of the ancient and honored Scottish game of golf graces local courses, and perhaps causes more divots, than the same President Joe Cather. The Belleville Golf moguls made no mistake in their selection, as prexy Joe will have the assistance and goodwill of his contemporaries during his term of office. "Congrats, Joe."

Frank Boucher, of the famous Cook-Boucher-Cook New York Ranger front line, has been named as coach of the team he once starred with. Lester Patrick, who has guided the destinies of the Rangers for 15 years, yesterday announced his retirement to the front office of the Gothamites. No longer will the grey-thatched Patrick be seen leaning over the Rangers' bench and never again will Patrick don the pads to play with his beloved Rangers, as he did so nobly in Montreal during a Stanley Cup final game some years ago. However, it is safe in assuming Patrick will be loitering around the Rangers' bailiwick keeping a weather eye on his favorites. Bill Cook, of the same line, is managing the Cleveland Barons in the International League.

Do you remember when Bucky Walters, Cincinnati's 27-game winner, learned a year ago today that he had been voted the National League's most valuable player for 1939, by the Baseball Writer's Association.

The younger fry up around the Air Force will think twice before tossing out athletic challenges in the general direction of their Officer Commanding, Group Captain J. A. Scully. Yesterday was 'sports day' at the Trenton Air Base and Group Captain Scully showed the boys he hasn't lost any of his youthful athletic prowess as he won two track events with sufficient margin to prove it would be folly to attempt to evade "The Skipper" via the foot route. All-in-all it was a gala day for the airmen and officers, to say nothing of the 1,500 spectators who enjoyed the track and field meet and obtained some little insight as to the magnitude of the new athletic field that is now under construction. A-C. Milton Parsons was declared the all-around Sports Day champion, while A-C. Ed Murray walked off with the majority of the track events. The conventional aerial performances added much to the day's activities, especially for the interest and entertainment of the outside visitors, as every person entered into the spirit of the occasion to make it a success from every conceivable angle.

It seems as though the war conditions put a slight crimp in Jim Farley's aspirations to purchase the New York Yankees. Farley is enthusiastic about the whole thing, but the war conditions have made big money rather scarce, like hen's teeth, so to say. That is with the exception of Tom Yawkey, owner of the Boston Red Sox, who purchased the Louisville "Colonels" of the American Association recently.

Mush March, veteran forward of the Chicago Blackhawks, scored a hole-in-one while playing golf at Hibbing, Min., where the Hawks are fall training. March covered the course in a three-under-par 71.

SPORT SPICE—Although their baseball team is still in business, Oshawa has gone hockey mad with the announcement they are to have a senior O.H.A. club this winter. Many of their former stars are flocking to the colors, including Roy Covert, former Belleville puckster, Doug Maundrell, Carl Gamble and others who have played right here at the Hume Arena in years past. . . . Such well known American sport stars as Joe Cronin, Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Max Baer, Byron Nelson, the golfer, Bob Feller and others registered under the United States draft regulations yesterday. . . . Even Canadian hockey players with the Boston Bruins registered for selective service with the U.S.A. army. . . . Look for some new faces in local wrestling circles for next Monday. . . . After all, isn't it about time?

AVIATION SCHOOLS IN OPERATION AHEAD OF TIME

Air Minister Power Points Out Heat, Water and Roads Difficulties in Speed-Up

PROBLEMS OVERCOME

Backlog of Applicants for R.C.A.F. Stands at About 17,000 Men

Ottawa, Oct. 17 (CP)—Heat, water, and roads account for the chief difficulties which arise in the speedup of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Air Minister Power said at a press conference attended by a dozen newspaper reporters today.

In the rush to get training schools into operation ahead of schedule it is not always possible to get everything around the schools finished to perfection in time for the opening but as a rule those concerned make the best of things.

Instance Cited

As an instance of this Mr. Power read a telegram from M. A. Seymour of St. Catharines, Ont., president of the St. Catharines elementary flying training school in reply to a message from the Minister congratulating him on opening of the school last Monday.

Mr. Seymour said the school had no water, no sewerage and no heat but flying would start at nine o'clock in the morning.

The Minister said the water was turned on the next day and the steam-heating plant was also started although at first it would not be sufficient to heat the buildings. To make up for this, temporary heating units had been installed.

St. Catharines was one of four elementary flying training schools opened Monday and on the original program was not due to open until Feb. 17, 1941. The others were Hamilton, originally scheduled for the same date, Cap De La Madeleine, Que., and Godrich, Ont., both originally scheduled for March 3, 1941.

Two more elementary flying training schools are due to open Oct. 28, said the Minister. These are at St. Eugene, Ont., originally booked for March 31, 1941, and Portage La Prairie, Man., originally booked for April 28, 1941. On Nov. 11 two others will open at Regina, originally booked for April 28, 1941, and Edmonton, originally booked for July 7, 1941.

Total of Elementary Schools

These will bring the total of elementary schools operating by the end of 1940 to 16 out of the 26 projected. In all 46 out of the 83 schools contemplated in the plan will be operating by the end of 1940 against 36 originally contemplated for this year.

Mr. Power said in some places it was difficult to get roads built to the schools in time for the opening but the provision of heat and water services presented difficulty in nearly all cases The bombing and gunnery school at Mossbank, Sask., originally billed for opening Nov. 11, 1940, now was due to open Oct. 28, but might be delayed because of water and heat trouble.

On Nov. 11, also, the Service Flying Training School at Brantford, Ont., was due to open and the Dunnville, Ont., Service Flying Training School was booked for Nov. 25. Schools of the same type at Macleod, Alta., and Moncton, N. B., were to open sometime in December.

The Minister said he did not know when the Elementary Flying Training School at Quebec City would open.

"The only minister who cannot get to his home by air in winter is the Air Minister, myself," he remarked. "We have no winter airport at Quebec."

Strength of R.C.A.F.

On Oct. 8, the Minister said, the strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force was 2,218 officers, an increase of 41 in the first week of October; 23,960 airmen, an increase of 159 in the week and 3,872 civilians, an increase of 132 in the week.

The total for airmen includes 4,932 air crew men in training. In the first week of October, Mr. Power said, 2,286 applicants for enlistment approached Air Force recruiting centres and of these 815 were trade tested and 1,717 given medical examination. The backlog of applicants for enlistment who had been found suitable but not called was kept almost stationary at about 17,000. As men were taken on others were added to the list of men on call.

Mr. Power said about 5,000 of these were men wanting to enlist for general duties who had no special qualifications. The Air Force had a surplus of general duty men and was not anxious to add to the number on call.

King George Home-School Club Honors Entrance Class at Annual Graduation Banquet

Members of King George Home and School Club were hostesses last evening at the annual graduation banquet which honored the entrance class of 1940. The class was addressed by Mr. A. C. Wilkin, Principal of Queen Victoria School, whose words were an inspiration to all who heard him.

The school auditorium presented a gala picture for the occasion. Long tables were beautifully decorated in yellow and blue, while bouquets of colorful Michaelmas daisies and marigolds were artistically arranged by Mrs. Grant. The guests were served with every delicacy by their attentive hostesses.

Mrs. A. G. Greenwood, President of the Club, presided for the interesting program of the evening. Mr. H. R. Moorman proposed the toast to the King to which all responded by singing "God Save the King." Mrs. Greenwood referred to the occasion as the last official visit to the school of the graduating class and she trusted that they would carry with them in life memories of happy associations wth staff and pupils, with the teachings and example of their instructors to inspire them.

Toast to Class

The toast to the graduating class was proposed by Mrs. C. Hagerman who pointed out that this group of boys and girls would have to share the many and difficult tasks of post war work. Education and the experience of teachers and parents will all assist youth in carrying out their great work and she trusted that these scholars would keep on just as they had begun, becoming real men and women. Miss June Coulter responded to the toast, recalling the enjoyable years her class had spent in King George School. Through the training they had received they hoped to become faithful, capable and honorable citizens.

Miss Wedden presented to Douglas Ashley the gift of the Home and School Club as the student who had made the most progress in his work during the year.

Toast to School

The toast to Mr. Kells and the staff of the school was proposed in an admirable speech by Donald Riskin who expressed appreciation on behalf of his classmates for the wonderful banquet arranged by the ladies and to the teachers for making their "school day home" so happy and profitable. Mr. L. A. Kells, Principal of the school, conveyed the gratitude of the staff for the sentiments expressed in Donald's address and offered congratulations to the boys and girls on their success. He thanked the parents for their interest in coming to be with their children on this important occasion.

Mr. C. Brown introduced the guest speaker, Mr. A. C. Wilkin, whose address was most interesting and timely. Mr. Wilkin extended congratulations to the entrance class, to the principal and staff and to the Home and School Club for the fine function which they had sponsored.

Joys of Reading

Students should ever be grateful to their first alma mater, to those patient teachers who guided their early faltering steps along the paths of learning. Here was well and truly laid the foundation for their future success. In primary school for instance they learned to read and were thus given access to the greatest source of knowledge, all the books written dealing with every kind of knowledge, down the ages. Reading books is the greatest help in one's development, and the boys and girls were counselled to read well selected books suitable for their age, when at that age. At young manhood, the youth would find it difficult perhaps to read "Alice in Wonderland," yet the boy and girl who has poured over the pages of this classic when they were children will readily recognize allusions constantly used by public speakers. The adventures of Alice, moreover, teach one that for every difficulty there is a way of overcoming it.

The poets are well worth cultivating, especially those who stimulate the reader to action, for, while dreamers have wrought much in the development of the world, yet those who spend too much time in idle dreaming over what they might become, neglect their opportunities in the present.

Entering the collegiate, the students have in their hand that little golden key, which like Alice's, opens the gate into a wonderful garden. Here they will find fruit trees and learn that they must climb and reach for the best fruit; they will discover the most delectable nuts are those which required the greatest effort to reach the kernel; they will encounter bridges which call for mental balance if one would cross them. The speaker wished for them the same success in collegiate as they had already attained. At that time, ten years hence, things would be very different, and as Princess Elizabeth said: "When peace comes it will be for the children of today to make the world of tomorrow a better and happier place."

The presentation of entrance certificates was made by Mr. J. R. Pickering, Inspector of Public Schools, who reiterated the good wishes expressed by previous speakers. He referred to the address of Mr. Wilkin as one of the best graduation addresses he had ever heard.

"What have you boys and girls to expect from education?" he asked. "First of all, there is material success and this is the least important. Secondly is the right to expect wider horizons. The uneducated boy lives in a narrow world of here and now. To the boy who has studied biography, history, literature and science there is no such limit. He can live in all ages, travel all climes, soar through space. Thirdly, and this is the greatest of the three, he has the right to expect greater opportunities for service, for all progress has come from men who have dared to venture forth in new fields." He congratulated the students and wished them all success in their quest for truth.

Fine Program

Throughout the evening interesting entertainment added to the enjoyment of the guests. A vocal solo by Mr. Sam Turner, "Long Live the King," accompanied by Mrs. Turner, a piano solo by June Wardle, community singing led by Miss Smyth with Mrs. Veley as accompanist, a cornet solo by Ronald Moorman, and readings by Mr. Everett Smith, formed the delightful program. The appreciation of those present to all who had aided in the evening's success was moved by Miss H. Thompson and seconded by Mrs. W. Johns.

PAPER DENIES FAVORITISM IN 'SMEAR' STORIES

N. Y. Times Replies to Charge of Ed. J. Flynn Republicans Favored

LEAFLETS USED

New York, Oct. 17—(AP)—The New York Times, today replied to charges by Edward J. Flynn, National Chairman of the Democratic Party, that the paper gave front-page prominence to a story accusing Democrats of using "smear" tactics but "buried" on an inside page a story accusing Republicans of similar tactics. Flynn made the charges yesterday during a Press interview.

The Times said:

"The Democratic 'smear' document to which Mr. Flynn refers was given front-page prominence by the New York Times in its edition of Saturday, Oct. 12, for the reason that it contained a direct personal attack on Mr. Willkie because of his German ancestry.

"It used the expression 'his whole background is German,' and tried to give the impression that Mr. Willkie was pro-German.

"This attack on one of the candidates for the United States presidency was of outstanding news interest and, therefore, an important story. It also contained efforts to play upon Negro race prejudice.

"The Republican 'smear' pamphlet to which Mr. Flynn referred contained no direct personal attack on President Roosevelt, and thus lacked the news importance of the Democratic document. It also made an appeal to Negro race prejudice. The New York Times gave one column on page 16 to the Democratic "expose" of the Republican pamphlet.

"The nature of one document made it a front-page story; the nature of the other did not."

The New York Herald Tribune, replying to charges by Flynn that it failed to publish an article in which Columnist Dorothy Thompson explained why she was for the re-election of President, said today:

"Mr. Flynn is completely in error. The Herald-Tribune printed Miss Thompson's article 'explaining why she was for the re-election of President Roosevelt' on Wednesday, Oct. 9.

"It has never 'suppressed' any article by Miss Thompson. As stated in its columns, her article of Oct. 14, devoted 'to an incomplete and inconclusive discussion of the axis powers' attitude toward the American presidential election,' was regarded by the editor as 'taken by itself,' 'misleading' and 'tending to inject into the campaign an un-American issue." It was accordingly 'withheld from publication pending the full development of Miss Thompson's views on the subject.'"

Churchill Moves To Extend Life of British Parliament

London, Oct. 17 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill introduced a bill in the House of Commons today to extend the life of Parliament which, except for the war, would expire next month.

Under the Parliament Act of 1911, five years was made the maximum life of Parliament but this period was extended several times during the First Great War when the so-called war parliament existed for seven years, nine months and 25 days.

The present parliament was elected Nov. 14, 1935.

Mohawk Air Camp To be Used Again

This Camp Was One of the Largest in Canada During the Last War

Deseronto Oct. 17—After 21 years, the residents of this town will again hear the roar of many planes with the reopening of the Mohawk camp. Construction started on the camp a month ago is progressing rapidly and once again is beginning to look like a landing field.

The Mohawk Air Camp was one of the largest air training centres for the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Great War. Established in 1917, hundreds of Canadian airmen received their training at this base before going overseas. At the conclusion of the war, the camp was moved to Camp Borden.

Military authorities and engineers consider the field as being one of the most ideal locations for a landing field in this section of the Province. The long level plain stretches nearly four miles in length and nearly a mile in width. The land is shale with only a small amount of earth topsoil.

With Canada now the centre of aerial activity for the British Empire, the Mohawk camp will be another unit in the British Empire air training scheme but so far no information has been given out, just what type of training will be done at the new camp.

The historical plain is on the eastern edge of the Mohawk Indian Reserve and was used in years gone-by as the gathering place for the Indian bands.

During the last war, five squadrons of airmen were stationed at the Mohawk Camp, while another three squadrons were stationed north of Deseronto at Camp Rathburn. Nearly 1,000 airmen were stationed in and around the town during the time the camps were in full swing.

POLICE COURT

Nineteen cases were listed for trial before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., at today's session of Traffic Court held at the Court House. The majority of cases listed resulted in written pleas of guilty having been tendered before today's court proceedings. Of the 19 cases listed ten were presented by Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch, while five were enlarged for seven days.

For the theft of $1.76 worth of gasoline, it cost Michael Braun of Toronto, exactly $18.71 to get out of his trouble. Braun obtained six gallons of gasoline from McCauley's service station in Marysville on Tuesday and drove away without tendering pay. He was apprehended by Provincial Police and today pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining the gas under false pretenses. Amey Doreen, service station attendant, stated Braun had driven up and requested to have his gas tank filled up. "After stating he had no money, the man drove away and I notified the police", related Doreen. Upon the payment of the costs and the price of the petrol Braun was given a three months suspended sentence. The costs amounted to $18.71.

A local citizen was convicted of obstructing a police officer, to wit by making a false statement, which might mislead the police. A fine of $15.00 and costs was imposed "This man apparently befriended a friend resulting in his present predicament", pointed out Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson. O. E Butler, local barrister appearing for the accused man, held his client made his statements while "under a misapprehension".

Frank Whitton was fined $15.00 and costs, amounting to $26.75 in all, after pleading guilty to a charge of reckless driving, contrary to the Canadian Criminal Code. The charge arose out of accident north of Trenton in which a truck driven by Whitton crashed into a station wagon resulting in injuries to himself and a woman passenger in the station wagon.

Police Blotter

P. C. Wright apprehended a teenaged girl removing newspapers from a bundle left in front of Sills bookstore early today. At the time the girl assured the officer her parents paid for the paper by the week. Later Constable Wright was informed by Mr. Sills such was not the case. The officer obtained the name and address of the girl and the matter is still under investigation.

Jack White, Cannifton, reported the theft of his bicycle, which he left parked at the upper end of the main street while attending a movie last night.

Thirteen transients and one inebriate shared the cell block at the police station last night, this being the largest number of transients to seek shelter at the city hostel this season.

"HappyGang" RadioFavorites At Hume Arena Friday Night

Famous Entertainers Here in Person Under Auspices of Belleville Rotary Club

TICKET SALE HEAVY

Any idea the members of the Belleville Rotary Club may have had regarding the non-success of their venture in bringing that famous radio troupe of musicians and artists, "The Happy Gang" to Belleville on Friday night for the entertainment of the public, have been dispelled during the past few days with the rapid sale of the reserved seats and other sections.

Enthusiasm on the part of the rural and urban public is mounting and there has been a steady request at the temporary office in the old Eaton Groceteria building at 276 Front Street during the past few days for the pasteboards that will open a new vista of stage entertainment for the residents of this district.

The latest word from the troupe which broadcasts daily over a network of Canadian radio stations, is that the whole "Gang" will be here with a program that not only includes brand new numbers, novelties and skits, but a few of the famous "oldtimers" that weekly are being requested by radio fans of the country.

Kathleen Stokes, organ virtuoso, will be here performing on a Hammond electric organ, being installed for the purpose. Two grand pianos are being brought from Toronto solely for the accommodation of artists of the troupe. Eddie Allan, popular member of the "Gang" will be heard on his accordian, while that versatile member of the troupe, Bob Farnham, will laugh and sing his way into the hearts of the audience. Blaine Massey, master of the violin, will also take part while last but not least, Bert Pearl, master-of-ceremonies extraordinary, whose line of humorous chatter marks him as one of the outstanding artists of the air will lead the troupe into musical action.

Potential patrons are once again urged to secure their tickets as soon as possible and not wait until the last-minute rush at the Hume Arena box-office. The committee in charge have stated definitely that there will be no choice of reserved seats at the Arena box office on Friday evening. They will be given to patrons "off the top" and as they come. So those wishing to get a selection of seats are advised to see Rotary Club officials at 276 Front Street anytime today, tonight or tomorrow up until a late afternoon hour. The prices are: Reserved seats, $1.00 and 75 cents; general admission, 50 cents. Children will be charged 35 cents.

The entire proceeds of the show will be devoted to the Crippled Children's Fund of the Rotary Club. This worthy cause has been a source of activity of the club men since the inception of their organization twenty years ago, and much worthy work has been accomplished. However, the need is still great, and funds must be raised in order to bring at least a small ray of sunshine to childish hearts, which otherwise would be forced to go through life seriously handicapped.

But—On with the Show. Remember the date, Friday, October 18th, at the Hume Arena at 8.30 p.m. The "Happy Gang" will be there in person and all Belleville should turn out to hear these popular radio favorites and to contribute to a worthy cause.

DISTRICT TROOPS WILL PARTICIPATE

Troops Will Leave Kingston and Petawawa for Tactical Manoeuvres at Montreal

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 17 (CP). — Plans are almost completed at headquarters of Military District No. 3 here for the participation of troops from here and Petawawa in extensive tactical manoeuvres in Montreal district next Sunday with troops of M.D. No. 4, Montreal.

Lt.-Col. Leroy Grant, general staff officer at district headquarters, said the movement of troops from Kingston and Petawawa towards Ottawa would begin Friday morning. The Petawawa contingent will leave camp at six a.m. and the various units will leave at intervals to avoid congestion on the highway. Signallers from Barriefield will arrive in Ottawa simultaneously with the Petawawa troops. The Petawawa troops will be fed and slept at Lansdowne Park, the signallers at Connaught Ranges.

In the column leaving Ottawa Saturday morning will be 175 officers, 2,650 men, 350 motor vehicles and 48 motorcycles. The column will proceed to the Lachute district near Montreal. There they will be joined by troops of Montreal district. Feeding and sleeping arrangements Saturday night are being arranged by M.D. No. 4.

A combined parade of all these Canadian Active Service Force units, numbering about 5,000, will parade through Montreal Sunday. That night they will be housed in Montreal armories.

The troops from M.D. No. 3 will leave Montreal Monday morning, the Petawawa troops spending Monday night in Prescott and Brockville.

IS SUSPENDED AT OWN REQUEST

Robert Boothby, Parliamentary Secretary to Food Ministry, Awaits Investigation

London, Oct. 17—(CP)— Robert Boothby, parliamentary secretary to the Food Ministry, was suspended at his own request pending an official investigation of his activities in connection with payments made out of Czecho-Slovak assets in Britain.

The call of Prime Minister Churchill for appointment of an investigating committee was approved quickly by the House of Commons.

Mr. Churchill said that after the German occupation of Prague the question arose of payment of claims against Czech assets in Britain and Mr. Boothby became chairman of a committee pressing for payment.

He said evidence had been placed before the government indicating Mr. Boothby had a financial interest in one large claim. Thus appeared to be inconsistent, Mr. Churchill said, with statements by Mr. Boothby to a former chancellor of the Exchequer.

Committee Will Report

Mr. Churchill told the House he did not consider it fitting to call for Mr. Boothby's resignation since that might prejudice the issue in the eyes of the public and declined to go into details of the matter until it was investigated by a select committee.

A government motion in parliament asked for a committee to report on "whether the conduct of the honorable member was contrary to usage or derogatory to the dignity of the House or inconsistent with the standards which parliament is entitled to expect from its members".

'PRAYERS HELPED' BATMAN DECLARES

'Offering to St. Anthony' Made by Brigadier General Sansom's Batman on His Appointment

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 17 (CP).—Four tall tapers burn in a little French church near Trafalgar Square as an offering of devout thanks for the appointment of Brig. E. W. Sansom to command the Canadian 3rd Divisoin.

They were lit by his batman, L. Cpl. Albert Mayotte of Ottawa, who promised in his prayers last Sunday that "if my boss gets the promotion I'll make an offering to St. Anthony."

A few "in the know" had been expecting word of Brig. Sansom's promotion for several days and the rumors had reached Mayotte's ears. Prayers followed and the sequel came this morning when London papers published the news that the French-Canadian's boss had received the appointment.

Mayotte appeared before Brig. Sansom today with an unusual request for two shillings. He told of his promise to St. Anthony and suggested that "as you were the one who got the promotion perhaps you should buy the candles." Brig. Sansom readily agreed.

As he hurried away to the church the batman admitted the new general's long military experience and ability had something to do with his receiving the appointment but said with emphasis that "You can bet my prayers helped".

Mayotte, a member of the Governor General's Footguards, joined the Canadian Active Service Force on an understanding with the then Col. Sansom that he could be his batman. He will proudly return to Canada with the new division commander.

Top-Grade Egg Price Very Strong

Toronto, —Prevailing light supplies gave top grade eggs prices another fillip of 1 cent to 2 cents per dozen on the Toronto open produce market. Butter remained firm.

Good demand effected ready absorption of the small volume of current receipts on the egg market. Top grades in both sections rose briskly as offerings of these grades were scarce, while the lower grades showed more moderate advances in the graded division.

Steady clearance in small offerings of fresh and storage stocks kept prices firm at previous levels on the butter market. The fair volume of buying was to cover immediate requirements. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids traded at 27 1-2c a pound. Prints moved through retail channels at former prices.

Action on the wholesale cheese market leaned to the quiet side. Available supplies were still light and prices were unchanged. Last week's exports out of Montreal amounted to 16,886 boxes, bringing total shipments since the first of May to 861,442 boxes compared with 582,352 boxes, in the like period of last year.

Italian Communique

"The Commander of the submarine Toti which sank an enemy submarine of Perseus type reported (yesterday) in Bulletin 131 is Capt. Banzino Banzini.

(The Italian claim of sinking a submarine has not been confirmed by the British Admiralty.)

"The English cruiser torpedoed by a torpedo plane reported in Bulletin 130 is, according to the English Admiralty announcement, The Liverpool.

"This cruiser is 9,300 tons, armed with 12 cannon of 152 millimetres, eight of 102 millimetres, with six torpedo tubes and three aircraft and a catapult.

(The Admiralty announced the Liverpool was damaged. She reached port safely.)

"In North Africa, encounters between patrols were favorable to us. Our planes bombed enemy aviation field at Fuka, Quassaba and Daba and enemy preparations in the zones of Maaten, Bagush and Matruh. Despite violent enemy aircraft reaction excellent results were obtained. All our planes returned.

"Enemy aviation violently bombed the City of Tobruk with explosive and incendiary bombs, causing damage to some installations and to forty-five dwellings and destroying nine sheds. There were no victims. Several bombs dropped on Derna caused neither victims nor damage.

"In East Africa one of our bands attacked an English post southeast of the Daga River Post. The enemy fled hastily abandoning arms, munitions and supplies.

"Our aircraft bombed military installation in Perim Island and an aviation field at Ghedaref. Over this last field one of our formations also carried out a surprise attack from a low altitude, destroying 11 planes located there blowing up a munitions dump and destroying a truck.

(British communiques so far have made no reference to these actions).

"Another aerial formation attacked two large ships escorted by a warship in the Red Sea, hitting one seriously. Enemy aircraft which intervened were met by our bombers, which succeeded in bringing down one plane of the Blenheim type, and probably one of the Gloster type.

"Enemy planes bombed Dierdawa, Decamere, Tessenei, Kassala and Gondar, causing one death and several injured in the latter place only. There was slight damage. Successive raids on Diredawa and Harar were dispersed by our chasers which put the enemy planes to flight before they were able to drop their bombs".

COLD OCTOBER

A few minutes after the fourth alarm wailed, air-raid wardens patrolling the streets and rooftops whistled a shrill secondary warning which means "raiders overhead".

In earlier attacks, Nazi airmen who worked their way through outer defences dropped tons of bombs in the so-called "home counties" surrounding London and on the outskirts of the capital. There were no reports, however, of bombs falling in London proper.

Next to London, the raiders seemed to be making their most determined stabs at the West England coast. One coastal town reported German planes overhead for a second time shortly after lunch.

Nazis Shift Tactics

The renewal of massed daylight raids was a shift in tactics for the Germans, who recently have been using fighter planes as bombers singly or in small groups.

Dozens of bombs were unloaded on the shopping district of a southeast town by 12 Nazi planes after a dog fight high above the clouds. Several buildings were demolished and 10 persons were injured.

Other raiders were reported over west England towns as the attacks fanned out over a wide area.

As reports of last night's raid on London came in, the attack appeared to be heavier than at first believed, but still comparatively light. About 16 districts of the capital reported damage.

Part of one road on the outskirts was devastated by a heavy bomb. Houses on a corner were reduced to rubble and the road was covered with debris. It was feared five deaths resulted and that other persons had been injured.

A large number of German planes passed over the Kent coast this afternoon headed toward London. Clouds hid the raiders, but the roar of many motors indicated a great formation.

There was a brief raid alarm in the capital, but no action was visible and it was believed the raiders had been quickly turned away.

The first of the daylight alert in London, which followed one of the quietest nights the capital has had since early September, ended quickly without any sound of aerial activity. It was followed soon after by another alarm, which also ended after a short time.

Formations of planes could be heard flying overhead during the second alarm and in several sections of London the "urgent danger" signal was sounded by the whistles of the air raid wardens.

A force of German planes was reported crossing over the Kent coast during the second alarm.

Anti-aircraft batteries opened up on the raiders—fighter bombers—as soon as they came within range.

Most of the German planes were turned back, although a few seemed to have penetrated the defences and reached London. There were, however, no immediate reports that bombs had been dropped.

Only Few Penetrate Defences

A cold October rain hampered Nazi air operations during the night. Only a few raiders succeeded in piercing the curtain of rain and shrapnel which protected the city, and the others, turning away, poured bombs on the surrounding countryside. Three German bombers were shot down.

Two hospitals were hit in the southeast. A nurse was killed and several persons injured.

The Government said "Reports indicate, however, that the general extent of the damage is slight and that there have been only a small number of casualties."

British bombers, meanwhile, attacked naval bases in Germany, the Nazi-held Channel coast and an important oil target in central Germany, it was announced.

Even after the moon broke through the mists over London late in the night few bombs fell. Informed sources in Berlin claimed hundreds of Nazi warplanes had taken off for London, but the British said several hours later "they must have got lost, for they definitely are not over London or

Few Dwelling Houses Hit

The all-clear ending the night alarm sounded comparatively early in London. At Liverpool a bomb smashed a surface shelter, killing and wounding an undetermined number of persons. Bombs also were dropped on Merseyside, the shipbuilding and dock area of Liverpool. Other raiders ranged over Wales, Scotland and scattered sections of England.

"In a few London districts a number of dwelling houses were demolished, causing some casualties, including several persons killed," the Government said. "Only a few industrial buildings were affected."

The Air Ministry denied a Nazi claim that a British troop train was bombed yesterday with at least 300 casualties. The Ministry said that the only incident to which the German account could possibly refer was an unsuccessful attempt to hit a freight train near the Welsh border.

Trade in Streets

A shower of incendiary bombs fell in some sections of London last night, but most fires were controlled quickly.

A fireman sent to a fire caused by an explosion found one of the wrecked houses was his own. He feared his wife was in the house at the time and was killed.

In another section, it was believed an entire family of a father, mother and three children was killed as the result of a direct hit on a shelter.

Five others were killed and a number injured when a bomb hit a public shelter in a recreation ground in London's outskirts.

It was announced that the settling room of the London Stock Exchange was open for business.

Traders were not able to use the Stock Exchange for ordinary business yesterday, but buying and selling orders were entered by traders in the street.

ARMS SHIPMENTS

plies was banned at the same time the Burma Road was shut.

No assurance was given Japan concerning continuation of the Hong Kong closing until the Burma Road agreement was reached, it was said, and since that agreement has not lapsed it remains within the discretion of the Governor of Hong Kong to rescind his closure order.

(The Tokyo Press reported from Hong Kong that the Japanese Consul General there had advised the British authorities that Japan regards the closing of the Hong Kong route as entirely separate from the Burma Road agreement. He was said to have made it plain that the Japanese interpreted the Hong Kong closure as "effective indefinitely".)

Reports reaching London said the Chinese government had a fleet of several hundred trucks waiting near the Yunnan Border for the order to move the moment the Burma Road is re-opened to traffic.

Chinese sources said however, that it was unlikely the trucks would move in big concentrations because of the danger of bombing by Japanese warplanes operating from newly acquired bases in neighboring French Indo-China.

(Japanese military authorities in Indo-China announced yesterday that their bombers would make "the utmost effort" to keep the Burma Road closed to the expected flow of war supplies from the United States and other sources. They indicated, however, the attacks probably would be made only after the supply trains had passed across the border from Burma into Chinese territory.)

Japan Bank in London Closed

The Japanese Bank of Chosen prepared to close its London office Saturday because of "slack business" and it was understood that the big Japanese firms of Mitsubishi and Mitsui were closing the banking side of their businesses here.

The decision to close the Burma Road for three months was reached by the British Government in order to give Japan an opportunity to end her quarrel with China by agreements.

Informed spokesmen in London said after the closing that the action had been nullified by Japan's encroachments in Indo-China and by her joining Germany and Italy in a military alliance.

The road, completed since the beginning of the war between China and Japan in 1937, makes a tortuous 2,000-mile connection between Rangoon, Burma and Chungking.

From Rangoon to Lashio, near the Chinese border most of the route is covered by rail. From Lashio a motor highway winds through rugged mountains to Kunming, capital of Yunnan province, which is linked with Chungking and the Yangtse by highway.

BUFFALO BOAT

time of 87.485 miles per hour. On the return jaunt, Forman bettered this mark, racing over the finish line at the speed of 88.67 miles per hour. The former mark held by Cooper and made over the same course in 1938 was 87.485 m.p.h.

The course, laid out by Prince Edward Yacht Club officials on their regatta main course in the Bay of Quinte near Vandusen's Cove, was officially checked by representatives of the American Power Boat Association. Official timing devices operated by A. P. B. A. officials clocked the flying "Voodoo" as she sped over the course to a new record.

Two years ago "Pops" Cooper thrilled the entire power-boat racing world with his remarkable record made over the same course. That mark has stood despite several attempts by the finest drivers on the continent to lower it. To Charley Hamblin goes the credit of achieving this feat and the record is likely to stand for some time. The mark will be recognized as an official world's record, A. P. B. A. men stated.

"Voodoo" in racing boat parlance is of unorthodox construction. A superstructure, that houses the driver gives her a top-heavy appearance but her tremendous power plants contain speed sufficient to send her over the water at a record-breaking clip. She bowed to Cooper's "Tops III" at the regatta here a year ago, but ran away from the world's champion in the final heat.

'QUAKE FELT AT EL CENTRO

El Centro, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP).—An earthquake of moderate intensity, accompanied by a deep rumble, was felt here at 2:18 a.m. (6:18 a.m. E.D.T.) today. There were no reports of damage. Although there were numerous aftershocks following a heavy earthquake in the Imperial Valley May 18, this was the first in several weeks.

Snows, McIntosh Reds Will Command High Price this Season

That Snow apples and McIntosh Reds will command a much higher price before the season is completed than that at which they are offered for at the present time was the predicion of Mr. Chas. Higgins, well-known orchardist of the Trenton district, while attending Belleville market on Thursday morning.

"Not only is the crop much less than last year, but the rainy weather throughout the early part of the summer was responsible for a great deal more scab on these two varieties than is usually present," stated Mr. Higgins. Mr. Higgins said that in 1939 approximately 80 per cent of his Snows went No. 1, but this year, scab and other conditions were so bad that the percentage was almost reversed with 80 per cent of this variety going as domestic and culls.

Late apples such as Spys and Talman Sweets were very good, however, said Mr. Higgins, while another vendor stated that his Sweets were exceptionally good this season.

Considerable difficulty is being experienced by orchardists acquiring skilled help for picking this year's apple crop, it was learned. "Workers are demanding at least $2.00 per day and in some cases $2.25 for this type of labour and help was scarce even at this figure," said Mr. Higgins.

CANNING OPERATIONS NEARLY COMPLETED

With Tuesday night's frost ruining all tomatoes remaining on the vines, canning operations at the Canada Packer's factory on Albion Street, are practically concluded for the season stated officials this morning. The canning of tomatoes and corn was definitely finished it was learned but there was still a possibility of the factory remaining in operation to process pumpkins not yet touched with the frost and also for putting up apple juice and "pork and beans". These plans were only tentative, stated officials and unless carried out the factory must be considered practically closed for the season.

FORMER ORPHANAGE

Picton, Oct. 17 (Special)—Trapped in the upper storey when flames cut off their escape, six people were forced to flee in their night attire through windows and fire escapes shortly after 2.30 this morning when fire totally destroyed the Picton Manor, a half-mile east of the Prince Edward county town on the Glenora Road. The loss was estimated at $15,000 and was covered by insurance. Garages and cottages adjacent to the house were saved.

The building is the former True Blue Orphanage and was recently converted into a modern tourist hotel and summer resort by its owner, Mr. Thomas Leary, Toronto barrister.

Mr. and Mrs. Leary were absent at the time of the fire, the origin of which has thus far been undetermined. Miss Dorothy Leary, a daughter who was resting in an upstairs apartment, awaiting the coming of belated guests, was aroused by the crackling of the flames. Awaking the five guests in the house at the time, she assisted them in making their escape. Some were forced to drop a considerable distance to the ground to safety.

Had it not been for Miss Leary's presence of mind, the guests stated, in all probability more serious consequences would have resulted.

Colonel H. Manhard, R.C.A.F. engineer at the Picton Airport, a guest in the Manor at the time, was awakened by a crackling noise. Attributing it to squirrels in the trees outside, he dismissed it, and went back to sleep. Miss Leary, hearing a similar noise arose to investigate and found the lower floor of the Manor a mass of flames. Escape by that route was cut off and she immediately aroused her guests who made their way to safety through windows and by fire-escapes. The blaze is believed to have started on the west side of the lower part of the building.

Little Benny's Note Book

We had lemmin merrang pie for desert, being exter swell, and finely there was only one slice left, and I was looking at it without saying anything and pop was looking at me looking, saying, Well, there's one lone surviving piece of pie bravely awaiting its fate, and as usual youth will be served. How about it, Benny? he said.

Well, I'm not sure, I said, and pop said, Search your inmost sole, it's an important matter at your age.

Maybe he has no more room for land sakes, ma said, and I said, Oh sure, I've got room all right, there's no use lying about it. Only I think maybe I guess I better not take it for the sake of my conscience, I said.

Ye gods he really has got moral scruples, this is terrific, pop said, and ma said, Such nonsense, he's got his conscience all mixed up with a full stummick.

No I haven't either, ma, I know my conscience when I see it, I said. I'm thinking about the last time we had lemmin merrang pie and there was only one piece left. Mr. and Mrs. Hews were here for dinner and ma asked Mr. Hews if he wanted it and he said no thanks, and she asked Mrs. Hews and Mrs. Hews said no thanks, and then ma and I reelly wanted it but I didn't feel like sounding conspicuous with everybody elts sounding so polite, so I said no thanks too, but it was a lie and it's been kind of acting on my conscience every time we have pie, so now if I really tell the truth and admit I want it but dont take it anyways, maybe my conscience will be even, I said.

Yee gods, pop said. As usual where man's conscience is involved, there is a lack of logic in the result, he said, and ma said, Of all things such an idea. I'll just put the pie on his plate and let nature take its course, she said.

Let it run riot, pop said.

Wich it did.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Scatterbrain"

Just about as delightful comedy treat as has reached the screen in months and months is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre—Judy Canova in "Scatterbrain."

In it Judy, playing a mountain farm girl, is mistakenly signed up for a movie career and makes good by the aid of some unique antics and talents. Such antics include a knack of scrubbing the cabin floor in hot rhythm with two scrubbing brushes tied to her feet.

Her talents range from hot yodelling to hard-boiled coloratura soprano singing, with a general knack of creating sympathy by being on the slow end of most of the gags which are tossed around in this picture with the profligacy and subtlety of a burlesque show.

Miss Canova, who is definitely a new picture personality for Hollywood is in some very playful company: Alan Mowbray, who is given free reign with strong farcical reactions as a movie director; Eddie Foy, Jr., ditto, as a movie scout.

Practically every one in the picture act as though they were ordered to have a good time, with expenses paid and a bonus to boot and the result shows up in the delightful chuckles with which the audience receives their efforts.

The film has been directed with the same freedom from plot dictatorship that marks such happy efforts in the past as Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard in "The Ghost Breakers" and should tally up as one of the best audience pictures of the month.

Chief credit should go, I'd say, to Judy Canova, who clearly demonstrates what I've suspected, that she is a first-rate comedienne, and actress of varied talents and a sympathetic personality that gets the home-bodies as well as the sophisticates.

John Wayne in an excellent adventure story of old California entitled "The Man from Monterey" is also now showing at the McCarthy, making the show a double-header of great fun and action-packed entertainment from start to finish.

"The House Across the Bay"

Highly emotional drama and honest-to-goodness thrills are in store for filmgoers when they witness Walter Wanger's new film production, "The House Across the Bay," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen, with George Raft and Joan Bennett heading an imposing cast of Hollywood topnotchers. This new picture not only introduces a new romantic team composed of Raft and Miss Bennett, but it brings the beautiful Miss Bennett forward in one of her most varied and exciting roles to date.

Miss Bennett, in a word, looking more ravishing than ever, plays a straight dramatic role—and she does it stirringly and brilliantly. In addition, the star with the brunette tresses does her first dancing on the screen—a new type of rhumba which required tireless practice and intricate studio rehearsals. Miss Bennett's dancing equals her acting, which is another way of saying that the glamorous star has added another laurel to an otherwise long list.

As for George Raft, his impersonation of Steve Larwitt, a latter-day gentleman of means and ambitions, is as deft as it is clever. Raft knows how to fill his screen characterizations with life - like qualities, with punch and drama, with humor and imagination.

Others who contribute stirring and unforgettable portrayals in "The House Across the Bay" are Gladys George, Walter Pidgeon, June Knight and Lloyd Nolan.

"Calling All Husbands"

A film packed with love, laughter and thrills will greet Belle Theatre audiences today when Warner Bros.' new comedy-romance, "Calling All Husbands" starts its local run. George Tobias, Lucile Fairbanks and Ernest Bates lend their capable talents to the supporting cast.

The picture is a rollicking comedy of homelife at its funniest. Ernest Truex plays the part of a hen-pecked husband who one day gets a hold of some apple cider and after drinking a few too many finds that it gives him the courage to say "No" to his usually displeased wife, played by Florence Bates, for the first time since they were married.

Britain's R.A.F.

A special extra attraction on the same program will be the exhibition of the newest issue of the March of Time, presenting "Britain's R.A.F." Here is a particularly stirring subject done in the best March of Time manner, and will be viewed with interest and pride by everyone in the British Empire.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Ranger and the Lady"

Roy Rogers, whose particular cinematic forte is American history, is currently cast in another absorbing drama of frontier days, "The Ranger and the Lady," which is scheduled at the Capitol theatre.

The Republic picture places Roy in Texas with the Rangers, in the days when Sam Houston journeyed to Washington on a political mission, leaving his territory in charge of men who proved to be crooks and scoundrels.

One of these men, General Augustus LaRue, arbitrarily sets a tax on all wagon trains using the Santa Fe trail, and orders Captain Colt (played by Roy Rogers) to enforce this order.

Captain Colt knows that if he refuses, he will be relieved of his command and will thus be in no position to combat LaRue's outrages.

Among the first of the wagon trains to be taxed is the train owned by Jane Tabor. When Jane refugees to pay the tax, Colt places her under arrest and brings her before LaRue. LaRue, who is very susceptible to the ladies, comes under the spell of her beauty and Jane succeeds in persuading him to allow her the monopoly of the Sante Fe freight lines, excluding all others, and using his Rangers to back up the monopoly with force. Jane secretly is bent on deposing LaRue, who framed the death of her father, and plots to use her feminine wiles to place him in a vulnerable position. Captain Colt, however, misunderstands her motives and believes she has struck a sordid bargain with LaRue in order to protect her own interests.

Upon this gripping situation is built the spine-tingling action of the film, which features, in addition to Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Jacqueline Wells, Si Jenks and Henry Brandon, and on the same programme "Mickey the Kid."

A picture which boasts of six stars is Republic's "Mickey the Kid," and all of them are well-known to theatre goers.

Also unique in another way, "Mickey the Kid," has a triple lead composed of favorite actors. Little Tommy Ryan, star of "Tenth Avenue Kid," and "Orphans of the Street," turns in another of his fine performances as the homeless waif. Bruce Cabot has appeared in more pictures than he can remember, and the same may be said of Ralph Byrd, known for his "Dick Tracy" performances, as well as many feature roles.

Three others, stars in their own right, top the excellent supporting cast. Jessie Ralph, veteran of stage and screen, is seen in a character role as Tommy's aunt, while comedienne Zasu Pitts plays the part of her maid and companion. The feminine lead is handled capably by June Storey, pretty young starlet who has risen fast since breaking into the movies.

Checkerboard Love

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XVII.

December had come before Victor Quinn had the opportunity to find out what his prophecy regarding Judge Castle's wedding gift to his children was worth. It came with the unexpected appearance in the Parville office of Jeffrey himself. After an enthusiastic greeting, his first question was: “Is my father at home?”

“No,” Victor returned in some amazement. “He went up to the city on business . . . plans to return tomorrow. Evidently this is a surprise. Did Mrs. Castle come with you?”

“No,” Jeff answered shortly. “She's at home. We did get back rather unexpectedly, at that. Olive wanted to rest up and I thought I'd run out to see how everybody is . . . get a report of your stewardship.”

“That's easy,” Victor laughed. “My talent is all wrapped in a napkin and I'm ready to travel. That's a little over your head, I know. I must say that married life seems to agree with you.”

He had been appraising Jeffrey closely since that young man had posed in a chair with graceful ease. He was faultlessly attired and had a healthy outdoor coloring. But Victor thought he detected an expression on his face, lines at the corners of his mouth that never had been there before.

“All right, I should say. When do you plan to settle down in harness? You don't have to give me any particular notice, you know.”

“No rush about that, Vic. It's going to take me a little time to get straightened out . . . settled, I mean. How's our old friend Miss Annie? Did she get well?”

“As a matter of fact, I haven't. Been out a few times to visit them.”

“I must run out and say hello before I go back. Mother's in town, I suppose?”

“So far as I know.”

“Guess I'd better jog out there and give her a shock.” Instead of following up his suggestion, Jeffrey lighted a cigarette and sat smoking moodily, staring at the wall in front of him.

“I am. For me. Look here, Vic came so evident that Victor was constrained to break the silence. “Looks as if you're doing some heavy thinking,” he suggested.

“I am. For me. Look here, Vic . . .” Jeff still was staring at the wall. “. . . what sort of a deal did you make with those folks?”

“They expect to take care of me when I come back.” Victor said it quietly without taking his eyes from the other man's face.

“I see. Then you could stay on here . . . indefinitely.”

Instead of replying directly, Jeffrey observed: “I had only one letter from the old gentleman while I was gone. It caught up to me in Honolulu. Most of it was a panegyric . . . devoted to you. I wasn't surprised, knowing your efficiency of old. I could see that my absence wasn't disrupting the scheme of the Parville universe.”

“Don't be an ass!” Victor retorted sharply. “Look at me, if you don't mind, and tell me what all this drivel is leading up to.”

“Think not? You're not married, Vic. But you must have some imagination. Do you fancy you'd trade your wife's affection for the sake of a noble gesture?”

“I'm afraid I'm not acquainted with that sort of . . . affection will do, I suppose. You're trying to tell me that Mrs. Castle is standing by her determination to remain in the city. I recall that you mentioned it before you went away.”

“But good Lord, Jeff! A man's self-respect counts for something! Surely a woman . . . there I go again. You've had to thresh out all that yourself.”

“What do you think? The respect stuff doesn't get any place, either. If I must have a career, what's the matter with good old Harrison Products? Olive has fixed that up for me. Nice berth and a fair income, guaranteed not to interfere with the cocktail hour. There's another argument Olive puts up,” Jeff went on. “I'm not sure it hasn't some merit. If we came here, we'd have to live with the folks. For a time at least. Olive insists there isn't any house big enough for two families, although there's scads of room at home. That would start a row, too. You'll have to give the girl her due. She won't consent to living in her own home, either. She is starting out on an apartment hunt today. That's all settled, too. You know, Vic,” Jeffrey admitted wryly, “things would be easier for me if I didn't love my wife. But I do.”

“Naturally. Then it's all settled, so far as you're concerned. Well, if there's anything I can do to smooth your path, you know I will. After all, nobody's going to expect you to break up your married life for the sake of your parents. That doesn't make sense.”

“You can do a lot for me and for Father, too, if you'll stay on here. At least he'll never be able to throw it up to me that I left him in the lurch. I've supplied him with a substitute who will go much farther than I ever can. You like it well enough here, don't you?”

“Hmm . . . m. The way you say that makes me want to ask you another question. And just because of that, I won't.”

“Thanks. You're on the wrong track as usual. I'd have to think it over pretty carefully from a professional standpoint, Jeff. If your father likes my work sufficiently, I can see that he might be good enough to let me inherit what law practice he has. If and when he retires from the bench, his active days probably will be over. By that time, I'll be a small-town lawyer. The situation would be entirely different if you were going to take over. You're in the family. I can see where it might be much more to my interest to get back in the city where I might some day get a shot at the big-time stuff. Not that I don't appreciate what you're trying to do for me . . . and have done. This has been a very valuable experience.”

He broke off at the sound of the outer door opening. Someone was entering from the hall. Victor, from his seat behind the desk, saw the visitor first. “Come in here,” he hailed cheerily. “An old friend of yours is here.”

Jeffrey looked uneasily at the door as steps approached, then jumped to his feet with a delighted: “Miss Annie, as I live and breathe! How are you, old dear?”

“Oh, Jeffrey!” She stood speechless for a moment as he held both her hands in his, smiling down into her brimming eyes. “Jeffrey Castle!”

“Let go. I want my handkerchief,” she commanded brusquely. Victor hurried forward and placed a chair for her. “Thanks,” she said in a muffled tone as she used her little square of linen. “I thought I would drop in for a minute and get my breath before I went on home.”

“Glad you did, Miss Annie. I had quite a shock myself when this man walked in on me. Looks pretty good for an old married gent, don't you think?”

“About half an hour ago. I haven't been out to the house, in fact; dropped in here first on a chance that Father might be around. Vic says he's in the city until tomorrow.”

“Did Mrs. Castle come down with you?”

“Fine. Vic's looking fairly topside, I think. How has he been behaving himself, Miss Annie?”

“Nicely.” Affection and pride were plain in her face as she looked at Victor.

“Betcha he's had the Parville Gretchens fluttering since he struck town.”

“Girls, you mean? I don't believe he's even looked at them, Jeffrey. He works all the time. After he had been here a few days I couldn't find anything to do. You're here to stay now, aren't you, Jeffrey?”

There was such a wistful appeal in Miss Annie Dodds' face that Victor suddenly looked away. “There,” he said to himself grimly, “is a sample of what he's going to do.”

Papers Pay Little Attention

Dispatches from Chungkung, provisional Chinese capital, said a number of trucks from the northwest provinces were being sent to the Burma Road and a fleet of 1,000 trucks also was being maintained to transport war material from Soviet Russia.

London newspapers gave comparatively little attention to the scheduled re-opening of the road in their early editions, limiting themselves to a few paragraphs.

There was evidence in financial circles, however, of increased tension in British-Japanese relations.

ROMANCE MARKS NASCOPIES CRUISE

Two Weddings Performed on Ice-Breaker in Arctic Area

(By R. K. Carnegie, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 17—(CP)—A tale of romance in the Arctic was unfolded here today by Maj. D. L. McKeand on his return from a 12,000 mile cruise through the eastern Arctic as commander of the ice-breaker Nascopie.

Two weddings were performed aboard the Nascopie during the trip. One of the bridegrooms was Corporal Robert Warren Hamilton of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, known as Paddy throughout the service and by all who have travelled in the far north. The other was P. A. G. Nichols, a Newfoundlander who has spent many years in the sub-Arctic as manager of trading posts. Peculiarly, both married American girls.

In 1937, after three years in the most isolated of all Mounted Police posts, Craig Harbor, little more than 500 miles from the North Pole, Paddy was at the landing place when the Nascopie anchored in the harbor.

Paddy and his companion officer spent a day reading scores of letters, the accumulation of a year, which had been dumped in their laps. Most of it was “fan mail” from blonds and brunettes across Canada and United States to these exceedingly colorful bachelors.

Lure of North and of Love

Paddy was due for a furlough so he came out in the Nascopie. He remained a year in southern Canada but the lure of the north held him and in 1938 he was on his way back to Craig Harbor, still single, a happy, laughing hearty man delighted to be once more in the north.

When the Nascopie left Montreal she carried several tourists, one of them beautiful Dorothy Boehmer, a librarian from Sherrill, N.Y. She and Paddy quickly became friends and by the time the Nascopie reached Churchill they were engaged. Paddy went on to Craig Harbor and Miss Boehmer back to Sherrill but each night the Northern Messenger Broadcast News to the Arctic the radio waves carried Miss Boehmer's love to “Corporal Hamilton at Craig Harbor.”

This year Miss Boehmer boarded the ship at Churchill and met her fiance at Craig Harbor. They were married by Bishop A. L. Fleming of the Anglican diocese of the Arctic as the Nascopie headed eastward from Craig Harbor. When the ship reached Pangnirtung the couple left the ship for Corporal Hamilton is now stationed there.

The other romance began in 1938. When Miss Boehmer left the ship at Churchill that year, Marion Buell of Rochester N.Y., took her place. She met Nichols, who had been in the north five years. They became firm friends before they parted. Later while he was at Cape Smith on Hudson Bay and she was at Rochester, he proposed to her by wireless and she accepted. They were married this summer by Rev. J. H. Turner, Anglican missionary, as the Nascopie crossed Hudson Bay.

All sang “For the beauty of the earth” and Mrs. John Reid offered prayer. Miss Ruth Rose read 103rd Psalm and the children sang a “Thanksgiving chorus. A Temperance exercise by a number of the members was most interesting. Master John Reid read an appropriate selection. Mrs. Cyrus Summers took charge of the study period based on Thanksgiving. The offering amounting to 40 cents was gathered by Misses Eleanor Johnson and Grace Dunham. The service closed with a hymn.

Several folks from Mount Pleasant attended anniversary services at Salem and Burnbrae on Sunday.

The funeral of the late Mr. James Hutchinson was held at Lindsay on Monday, October 7th. Mr. Hutchinson died at Vancouver on the Friday previous. He is well known here, having spent some time with his son Frank at Anson.

In the Red Cross drive the polling division of Mount Pleasant Rawdon contributed $107.25.

Mrs. Edgar McKeown, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Miss Eileen MacMullen, Mrs. Cyrus Summers, Mrs. John Holmes and Mrs. Frank Smith attended the sectional rally of the Woman's Missionary Society at Cannifton United Church on Thursday, October 10th as representatives of Mount Pleasant Rawdon W.M.S.

At the later church Rev. A. J. Wilson, Toronto, editor of the Outlook was guest speaker. They returned home by way of Algonquin Park.

The Weaver, Rose, Holmes and Phillips families of Mount Pleasant attended a shower Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pyear in honor of their daughter Helen.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Curry, Consecon.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver and Lois, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith and Eleanor recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Telford Bridgenorth.

Several from Mount Pleasant enjoyed motor trips during the nice weather and report the scenery grand. Some visited Kingston while others travelled by way of Bancroft.

Flying Officer H. Warren of Trenton was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warren.

A large number of Rawdon folk attended a shower Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Johnson, Wellmans, in honor of their daughter Carlyn and her husband, Mr. Hubert Andrews. The young couple received many lovely gifts.

Hoards United Church held a very successful fowl supper at their church on Thursday evening, October 10th with a large crowd in attendance.

Dr. C. S. Reddick, pastor of the church was chairman for the occasion.

Campbellford male quartette contributed four numbers. Mr. Arthur Duncan of Stirling sang a comic number and presented a reading.

Rev. Maxwell of Campbellford, Rev J. E. Beckel of Rawdon circuit and Dr. Beaudreau of Burnbrae all gave brief addresses. Master Neil Hubble delighted with two songs with his mother as piano accompanist.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen contributed two humorous readings. Dr. Beaudreau delighted with several piano solos.

The ladies of Hoards served an appetizing supper with chicken, pie and cake the main items and all did ample justice to the good things furnished.

Flotilla of German Destroyers Flees Into Brest Harbor

Results of Bombing Germany Revealed in Report

German Troops Were Embarked, Taken Off Ships

Nazis Forced to Abandon the Invasion Ships by "Ferocity of RAF Attack"—First Acknowledgment by Air Ministry Nazis Had Tried to Cross the Channel—No Hint of German Casualties

LONDON, Oct. 18 (CP).—Authoritative aviation sources disclosed today that Royal Air Force bombers frustrated a German attempt at seaborne invasion of England Sept. 16, forcing the Nazis to abandon the invasion ships "by the ferocity of their attack".

"After German troops were loaded onto their ships preparatory to braving the channel crossing, R.A.F. bombers sped over and made their departure impossible by the ferocity of their attack," these quarters declared.

The Air Ministry News Service, quoting reliable neutral sources in a long survey of damage inflicted on the Germans, made this brief reference to the invasion attempt:

"There is evidence too of the value of the R.A.F.'s determined attacks on invasion ports. One report states that on Sept. 16 many German troops embarked but were later taken off the ships.

"The invasion plans were not adopted because of the sustained offensive by the R.A.F., whose extraordinary accuracy in bombing incidentally has been much admired by the Dutch."

On Sept. 16 the R.A.F. communique told of a direct hit on a German warship, severe damage to an oil tanker and supply ship and the sinking of three supply ships and damage to others.

Also attacked that day were concentrations of war supplies, barges and shipping at Hamburg, Wilhelmshaven, Antwerp, Flushing, Ostend, Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne and Le Havre—virtually the entire invasion coast of Germany and the occupied low countries and France.

News Given Official Status.

Whether the pounding of Germany's invasion facilities was believed sufficient to cause the Nazis to give up their long-range plan, the aviation sources would not say.

The succinct account of the British success was given official status by the Air Ministry News Service which first reported it.

The service quoted "a reliable neutral source" as saying that "on September 16 many German troops were embarked but were later taken off the ships because of the sustained offensive by the Royal Air Force".

It was the first official acknowledgment that Nazi troops had tried to cross the channel.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Tropical cyclones! An interesting feature of these very destructive storms, or hurricanes is that in their centres (the "eye of the storm") the calm may be so complete that a match may be lighted in the open. This in spite of the fact that not so far away the wind may be lashing around a 60 to 100 miles an hour. Another interesting feature is that the temperature humidity and wind are practically the same everywhere at the same distance from the centre of the storm. The wind is especially dangerous at sea due to its extreme gustiness and on land because it carries along a load of debris.

TWO MILLIONS MAY FIND JOBS

Prediction Made of Expanded U.S. Business and Industrial Activity

Washington, Oct. 18 (AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted today that United States business and industrial activity in 1941 ,influenced largely by National Defence spending, should expand to the extent of employing at least 2,000,000 more persons than in 1940.

Such an increase, when coupled with prospective enlargement of the armed forces under conscription, should, the Bureau said, reduce American unemployment rolls —which it placed at between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000—by about 2,500,000 persons.

These forecasts were contained in the Bureau's annual outlook report on economic conditions for the year ahead.

The Bureau said its forecasts were based on the defence program as now projected and upon the assumption that the war would continue.

The Bureau said industrial exports to Great Britain should increase. It is believed, the Bureau added, that Britain has sufficient buying power to finance any possible purchases of industrial products in the United States during 1941.

British Diplomats in Balkans Will Hold Conference at Istanbul

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 18 (AP)—Preparations for a conference of British diplomatic representatives in the Balkan countries were reported being formed here today as the Turkish radio voiced new defiance to the Axis powers and their aspirations in the East.

Word of the impending conference was circulated following the arrival in Istanbul of George W. Rendel, British Minister to Bulgaria.

The British Ministers to Yugoslavia and Greece are expected to join Rendel and Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British Ambassador to Turkey, in the next few days.

Newest "Heaven" Used Personally By Father Divine

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—There was rejoicing today up Harlem way over Father Divine's new "heaven", the finest yet, standing like a feudal castle on a knoll 425 feet above the Hudson River in exclusive Tarrytown, N.Y.

This newest "heaven" which has a 25-room turreted stone residence and 70 acres of landscaped grounds and orchards, is directly across from the estate of the Duchess of Talleyrand, the former Anna Gould and daughter of the late Jay Gould, railroad builder. She has been livng there since her return last year from a 40-year residence in France.

John Lamb, Father Divine's white secretary, said the negro spiritual leader would use the new home as his personal residence. An operating staff of 30 to 40 "angels" will move into the house as soon as furnishings are obtained.

Deeds on file at White Plains show that $36,000 in cash was paid for the estate, occupied until a year ago by Leo S. Bing, New York real estate operator. The House was built 10 years ago by Bing's brother, Alexander, who was said to have spent $300,000 on it and $200,000 on the grounds.

Father Divine and his disciples bought the estate from William Evers of Tarrytown, real estate man who purchased it from a California corporation for $27,000 last Sept. 28.

British and German Long-Range Guns Duel Across Channel

Dover, England, Oct. 18 —(CP)—British and German long-range guns duelled across the 22-mile Strait of Dover today while bad weather kept the rival air forces in check.

Soon after daybreak the big British guns began firing through a blanket of mist at the Nazi-held coast in the Calais region. Shortly before noon the German artillery took up the challenge and began retaliatory fire. Bursts of shelling from both sides came at intervals of about 20 minutes.

Large Fleets of Munitions Trucks Roll Over Burma Road into China

Rangoon Burma, Oct. 18—(CP)—Traffic along the frontier re-opened to arms shipments to China last night, rose steadily today as fleets of munitions trucks, long in readiness, moved into Chinese territory.

A British army officer said he had never seen a larger assemblage of trucks.

Burma's large Chinese population organized demonstrations to show their appreciation of Britain's decision to defy Japan and re-open the road.

4 German Destroyers 'Retreat Precipitately' Before British Ships

German Claim Nazis Scored Torpedo Hit on British Warship Refuted — No Damage Sustained by Any British Ship — British Bomb Falls Near Enemy Destroyer

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that a flotilla of German destroyers "retired precipitately" without damaging any British vessel when British ships attempted to engage them 100 miles southwest of Land's End yesterday.

This refuted a German communique which claimed the Nazis scored a torpedo hit on one of the British warships. The Admiralty said: "No damage was in fact sustained by any of our ships."

The German force, consisting of four destroyers, escaped into Brest, France, in the fading light of day, the Admiralty said.

German aircraft made two attacks on the British warships but "obtained no hits" and British bombers sped to counter attack.

A bomb was seen to fall close to the bow of an enemy destroyer, the Admiralty said, but the results could not be ascertained owing to gathering darkness.

British Statement

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Admiralty and Air Ministry issued the following statement Friday:—

"Yesterday morning a force of German destroyers was sighted and reported by an aircraft of the coastal command. The enemy flotilla consisting of four ships was steaming west of Brest. Visibility was low. British light forces in the vicinity proceeded at high speed to intercept and endeavor to bring the enemy into action.

"During the afternoon visibility cleared and soon after 4 p.m. one of our cruisers engaged the enemy at extreme range in a position about 100 miles southwest of Land's End.

"The enemy retired precipitately upon being engaged. Our forces gave chase but the enemy in the failing light were able to escape into Brest. During the pursuit enemy aircraft made two attacks on our ships but obtained no hit and bombers of the coast command of the R.A.F. attacked the enemy.

"A bomb was seen to fall close to the bow of one enemy destroyer but the results of the attacks could not be ascertained owing to the gathering darkness.

"Today's German high command communique not only states an action between German destroyers and British cruisers and destroyers took place at the entrance to the Bristol Channel, but claimed the German forces scores a torpedo hit on one of our warships. No damage was in fact sustained by any of our ships."

SEVEN CONVICTS STILL MAINTAIN SITDOWN STRIKE

Perched on Roof of Chapel of St. Vincent De Paul Penitentiary at Montreal and Won't Come Down

GUARD STRENGTHENED

(By William Stewart, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Vincent De Paul, Que., Oct. 18—(CP)—Perched on a prison chapel roof for more than 18 hours in an unexplained "strike," seven hungry, rain-drenched convicts danced and slapped their arms today to keep warm in a steady, soaking drizzle. Later the rain turned to snow and a stiff wind began to blow.

The seven men, unarmed and clad only in prison garb, made a sudden dash and climbed to the roof of St. Vincent De Paul Penitentiary chapel late yesterday. There was no explanation from prison officials for their action, which occurred just as the men finished work in the yard of the big penitentiary.

There apparently was little chance of the men escaping. Thirty feet separates the chapel roof from the high outer wall, which forms a square about the prison buildings. The penitentiary is on Ile Jesus, adjacent to the Island of Montreal.

Huge Searchlights Used

Throughout the night huge searchlights on a catwalk atop the prison wall, along which strode guards armed with rifles, were focused on the men who danced about and shouted to spectators: "We're well, but we're hungry."

Shivering in their light prison clothing, the convicts ignored commands to descend and sang popular songs, such as "The Prisoner's Song," and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." One voice a spectator commented, was "a darned good baritone."

Today, after an early morning rain began to fall steadily, there was no singing. The prisoners jogged up and down on the roof or huddled together about a ventilator. Just across the yard smoke belched from the chimney of the prison furnaces.

Sent Back to Montreal

One of the convicts was reported to be Marcel Avelin, who perched for 13 hours on top of a 138-foot chimney a year ago at Kingston penitentiary. Avelin's "sitdown strike" was in protest against his transfer from St. Vincent De Paul to Kingston. Some months later he was sent back here.

Germans Fine Belgian District 3,000,000 Francs

Brussels (via Berlin), Oct. 18—(AP)—A fine of 3,000,000 francs (approximately $100,000), payable Nov. 1, has been levied by German authorities on the Dison district in Liege Province for alleged acts of sabotage, reportedly on the increase throughout Belgium with the return of many refugees from France.

War prisoners in the Dison area who were released several weeks ago were ordered re-arrested after five German military telephones were found cut.

At Florence and Phillipeville in Namur Province near the French border 17 former Belgian war prisoners were placed under arrest after more than 40 had been picked up for questioning. German authorities introduced more stringent measures to avert sabotage, punishable by death.

Rome Communique

Rome Oct. 18—(AP)—Friday's Italian High Command communique: "The commander of the plane which torpedoed the British cruiser Liverpool is Air Capt. Massimiliano Erasi.

"In North Africa our air formations successfully renewed, despite unfavorable weather conditions, bombardments of air fields at El Daba and Mersa Matruh. They hit the flying field El Di Kheila at Alexandria and enemy fortifications and motorized columns along the Mersa Matruh-El Daba road. All our planes returned.

(British advices indicated the raid on Alexandria was unsuccessful. One of the Italian planes was hit and badly damaged by anti-aircraft fire.)

"In East Africa our planes bombed the air field and Port of Aden, causing big fires at both objectives.

SAN ANTONIO MAYOR WOULD GIVE BRITAIN 'FLYING FORTRESSES'

Halifax, Oct. 18 —(CP)— "Resolved that our country give all possible aid to the British Empire and let it be in the form of flying fortresses" was the text of a resolution received yesterday by Mayor W. Nazi Bomb Demolishes 2 Condemned Structures

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—Demolition workers found today that a bomb dropped during the night had done their work for them on two condemned structures.

"This is the first time Jerry has done us any good," one of the laborers said.

Incendiary Bombs Believed Cause Of Two Explosions at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Oct. 18 (AP)—Two explosions, which police said apparently were caused by "incendiary bombs," early today wrecked a two-storey brick building where several Italian language newspapers are printed.

Fire quickly followed the blasts. The flames swept through the structure into an adjoining plant.

The blasts, about 4:30 a.m. EDT, shattered windows of homes near the publishing buildings, in the heart of a populous Italian district.

After questioning Forte and making an investigation, Detective William Martucci said:-

"He had no labor trouble and got no threats. We are inclined to believe from what we have seen that this was started by incendiary bombs."

The flames spread quickly after the almost simultaneous explosions. Racing through the Metropolis building, the fire ate through the walls into an office building but firemen brought the fire under control before there was much damage to the building.

Fire Marshal Jacob Clinton said the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been notified.

Several Factories, General Post Office In Berlin Bombed

Rail and Water Transport Affected And Great Industrial Plants Over Wide Area Successfully Hit by R. A. F. Bombers—Five Ships Sunk At Hamburg—Aluminum Works Closed for Weeks After a Raid

London, Oct. 18 (CP).—The Royal Air Force's "master scheme of bombing Germany", the Air Ministry News Service said today, has "partially wrecked several war factories in Berlin, almost gutted the Berlin general post office and seriously affected rail and water transport as well as damaging great industrial plants over a wide area."

The information service said its statement was based on fresh information drawn from "reliable neutral sources".

The News Service's review of the R.A.F.'s achievements was issued after a night during which the offensive against Germany was suspended. "Last night owing to unfavorable weather conditions all our bomber operations were cancelled," said a communique.

Fire Burned Many Hours.

The News Service summary said that "fire started by R.A.F. bombers during an attack on the Lehrter railway station (in Berlin) apparently burned for many hours and smoke from it covered a large area of the capital."

"One traveller, setting out from Berlin for a town in the Rhineland, had to spend three days instead of the customary twelve hours on the journey," it declared.

On the Mitteland Canal traffic "was interrupted for five days after the destruction of two sluice gates", and on the Dortmund-Ems Canal "the east wall immediately north of the old aqueduct has been broken", said the service.

At Hamburg, the News Service said, "five ships are said to have been sunk in the harbors during one raid. At the time this news was gathered only seven out of the seventy-five cranes on the quay were working."

The News Service added that "confirmation has been received of damage done to petrol and synthetic oil plants at Politz near Stettin."

BOMBS OR RATS?

London (CP)—The air-raid shelter was solid enough. The young woman was sure of that. Timidly she asked the air raid warden: "Are you quite sure there are not rats in it?"

British Communique

London, Oct. 18—(CP)—The Air Ministry, and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communique Friday:

"Last night the enemy's air attacks were again directed principally against London but a number of bombs was also dropped in a town of the midlands and on Merseyside. There were isolated attacks in several other parts of the country, particularly in the south.

"Houses in many parts of the London and suburban areas were hit but the total damage both to dwelling houses and to industrial buildings was not severe.

"Reports of casualties are not yet complete but there is no indication that the number is large.

"In the town in the midlands houses were damaged but only very slight damage was done to industrial buildings.

"On Merseyside the attacks bore a similar result, the damage being almost entirely confined to dwelling houses, a number of which was demolished. In both areas fires were started but were speedily put out and the casualties, though few, included some persons killed.

"In several other parts of the country a number of houses has been damaged. Reports indicate, however, that the casualty figures have been small and that taken as a whole the damage has not been heavy.

"In yesterday's attacks four enemy aircraft were destroyed. Three of our fighters were lost."

SOME MUNICIPALITIES MAY CHANGE DATE OF ANNUAL ELECTION

With approximately five of the municipalities of Hastings County holding elections in December, and the balance in January, a number of the latter are seriously considering changing their dates to conform with the December elections, a county official stated today.

The change is considered important inasmuch as in the forthcoming nominations and elections, ratepayers will be asked to decide on the question of two-year terms for municipal officers.

SMALLER LOTS FOR READIER SALE

Five hundred and twelve Hastings County lots and properties, an increase of over one hundred per cent over last year will be placed on the block at the forthcoming County Treasurer's Sale of Lands for taxes.

The increase is mainly due, county officials said, to the fact that a number of county municipalities have partitioned large lots into smaller parcels of land, and are taxing them individually. Those lots not disposed of at the tax sale, and at the adjourned sale will follow the usual procedure, it is expected, and be absorbed by the municipalities involved.

FAULTY FIREPLACE GIVEN AS CAUSE

A faulty fireplace is given as responsible for a fire which burned through the floor and caused other damage at the home of Mr. Frank Edgar, Cannifton Road, at an early hour on Friday morning. Upon answering the alarm, firemen found it necessary to rip open the fireplace to get at the seat of the blaze but, before the flames were extinguished, the fire had eaten through the flooring and joists directly under the fireplace. Slight water damage was effected while the fireplace was also damaged as a result of the blaze.

NAMES ADDED

In the recent installation of officers of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, the names of Financial Secretary L. McMillan, Recording Secretary M. A. Phillips, and Treasurer J. Smith, were inadvertently omitted in the published report.

FORTY MISSIONARIES ORDERED HOME

Don Phillips of Marmora pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving on No. 37 Highway north of Tweed on Tuesday night. He was fined five dollars and costs.

Harry Sherman of Toronto appeared on a charge of fraud. The case arose out of a charge laid by Chief Hayes that the accused was operating punch boards throughout the district. He was employing young girls to operate the boards under the pretence that the funds were to be used for Red Cross purposes. He was apprehended by Chief Hayes who seized several punch boards and the money contents of same. The accused was fined twenty dollars and costs, a total of thirty-seven dollars and seventy-five cents. The boards were ordered confiscated by the court and the money will be given into the funds of the Receiver General of Canada. Sherman was strongly reprimanded by Magistrate Lloyd.

Police Blotter

Today's session of city police court was short and extremely pointed. Two inebriates quickly admitted they had imbibed two freely of "giggle soup' and were fined the conventional ten and costs by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. A non-support case was held in camera and the entire proceedings were concluded in less than ten minutes.

An observant motorist saw a truck sideswipe a parked motor car on the market square and drive off without investigating damage. The motorist obtained the licence plate number of the truck and after ascertaining a nasty gouge had been inflicted to the side of the parked vehicle, the man, whose name was withheld by police, reported the incident late last night.

An automobile driven by Mrs. G. K. Graham, Sidney Township, struck a fire hydrant on Front Street yesterday afternoon resulting in damage to the fire plug. Mrs. Graham notified police and Utilities Commission employees remedied the damage, which caused a slight leak to the hydrant.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1938 model Nash coach last night. The vehicle was bearing Ontario licence plates number 6-C-195 when stolen.

An inebriate and 11 transients shared the cell block at the police station last night, while otherwise both city and Provincial Police reported "all quiet in the annals of crime."

16 British Youths From Argentine Greeted in Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 18 (CP)—After travelling all the way from Argentina to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force, 16 British youths and one French National. received a friendly greeting from James S. Duncan, Deputy Minister for Air Thursday.

Receiving the youths in his office Mr. Duncan found out he knew a number of their families. For three years he worked in Buenos Aires and came in contact with many farmers and ranchers.

It is from farming and ranching families of British origin that these would-be airmen come. All of them, except one, are British subjects.

Mr. Duncan said it was an illustration of the solidarity of the British peoples throughout the world that these young men should offer their services in a time of crisis. Their expenses on the trip to Canada were paid by a committee of British subjects in Argentina.

Prior to leaving they underwent a medical examination to determine their prospects of passing the stringent medical tests for admission to the air force. As soon as they receive a medical examination here those who pass will be shipped off to the air for Manning Depot at Toronto except for the French member of the party who will go to Quebec.

Moncrieff, president of the company, who has secured leave of absence to serve in the Explosion Division of the British Supply Board, and secretary-treasurer R. H. Martin of the Royal Canadian Air Force, with handsome presentations prior to their departure for their new posts.

The presentations, made by Manager Girling, took place on different days with Mr. Montcrieff being the recipient of a handsome club bag and Mr. Martin, a gold cigarette case. Both made appropriate responses of appreciation and regret at leaving the environment of years in which they had made many happy associations.

Mr. Moncrieff is scheduled to report at Ottawa on Monday while Mr. Martin is a member of the R.C.A.F. having been called up a few weeks ago. Both executives have been connected with the company since its inception here years ago.

He sprang into local prominence during the last few years with his untiring efforts at organizing and bringing the Belleville Beaches to their present fine condition.

University Women's Club Hears Address By English Visitor

The first regular meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and District was held in the Collegiate Library on Thursday evening.

The President, Mrs. W. J. Doyle, presided. Plans were made to have Dr. Turville, Federation President, come to Belleville next month to address the club.

Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. G. M Taylor, B.A., of Manchester, England, who, with her children, recently came to Belleville for the duration of the war. Mrs. Taylor chose as he subject, "Domi Militiaeque," and gave a very realistic account of the exigencies of the war as she experienced them before leaving England and the contrasting peacefulness of life in Canada since her arrival here.

On behalf of the members of the club Miss Irma Panter, thanked the speaker for her most interesting address.

MRS. LENA WRIGHT, (Marmora)

Marmora, (Special) — After months of suffering patiently borne Mrs. Lena Wright, beloved wife of George Wright of Marmora, passed away at her home on Wednesday evening in her 74th year. Deceased, who was born in Trenton, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Pickles. She was of a very industrious nature and noted for her cooking. Of a friendly disposition and neighborly ways, she was well thought of in the community in which she spent the greater part of her life.

Torch Club Initiation Held by Members meeting of the Torch Club of the local Y.M.C.A., the charter members of the club were initiated. The executive had been taken through the ceremony previously by the leader, Mr. Geo. Dudgeon, and Mr. Ed. Shortt of the "Y" staff. During the night's ceremony the parts were handled by the executive. Supper and a business meeting, President Ben Ogilvie presiding, preceded the initiation, Les Pickering led the sing-song with Gord McClelland at the piano, and Ted License was Sergeant-at-Arms for the evening.

The next meeting of the club will take the form of a Hallowe'en party, details of which are in the hands of Frank Foley, social chairman.

It might be interesting to note the serious tone which from time to time governs these older boys and young men, as reflected in the statement of purpose and preamble adopted by the club on the recommendation of their executive: "Whereas an unusual challenge is before us due to the conditions under which we find ourselves forced to live, and whereas this challenge offers us an equally unusual opportunity to develop beyond the measure of stature ordinarily attained by boys and men of our age in normal times, the Torch Club of Belleville Y.M.C.A. accepts as its purpose to endeavor, through a varied program to bring older boys and young men to a fuller stature of manhood and so far as it may in our power lie, to bring mankind closer to the ideal manner of life as exemplified in the teachings of Jesus Christ."

This looks like an organization which can wield a real influence on the older boys and younger men of our city and one which deserves the backing and support of all boys and men who have public welfare at heart.

Capacity Audience Expected to Greet Famous Radio Favorites—Arena Doors Open 7.30—Curtain Rises 8.30

COME EARLY

Tonight's the night. The one and only night that residents of this city and district will have the opportunity to see the famous radio favorites, "The Happy Gang," in action here. They will appear at the Hume Arena, where they will stage two hours of music, mirth and melody as only the "Happy Gang" can stage it, and all indications now point to them playing to a capacity audience.

The Arena doors will open at 7.30 p.m. sharp and the curtain will rise on the opening number at 8.30. Reserved seat holders are requested to be in their seats as early as possible in order to facilitate the work of Belleville Rotary Club officials in handling the large last-minute crowd that is expected to throng the box-office.

Officials announced last night that seats being held at the temporary office in the old Eaton groceteria at 276 Front Street and not called for before six o'clock tonight will be disposed of as soon as possible.

The seat sale has been more than gratifying. Rotarians announce and hundreds of them have been sold. However, there are still a few choice reserved seats left and these may be obtained at 276 Front Street today up until six o'clock tonight. Patrons are again urged to secure their seats here as there will definitely be no choice of reserved seats at the Arena Box Office.

The stage is all in readiness and all is set for one of the finest entertainments ever provided for residents of this city and district.

As has been before stated, the entire proceeds of the show will be devoted to the Crippled Children's Fund of the Club. The need is urgent and funds are necessary.

As a large crowd is anticipated at the box office, patrons are urged to arrive at the Arena early. Remember the time—box office opens at 7.30 and the show starts at 8.30.

Curing Air Raid and War Wounds By Use of Plaster Costs Demonstrated

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—A dramatic new method of curing air raid and war wounds by use of plaster casts was demonstrated to the New York Academy of Medicine, Thursday.

The plaster immobilizes the wound, covers it so that it can be neither moved nor dressed after the first time, keeps infection out and by enforced rest for weeks produces some near miracle recoveries.

This technique was announced as the greatest contribution to wound care since the first Great War showed how to keep down infection by "debridement" and the Carrel-Dakin antiseptic solution.

The plaster treatment, originated by Dr. H. Winnett Orr of Lincoln, Neb., was exhibited today by three New York University medical scientists as the outstanding new medical advance of the present war. The exhibitors were Dr. Harrison S. Martland, Dr. Benjamin H. Jablons and Dr. Eugene M. Katzin of Newark, N.J.

Orr's ideas apply to the most serious type of war wounds, where bones are broken. But his belief that immobility and rest would cure was so unorthodox that the medical world refused at first to try it out.

The last war proved that every wound was infected, and doctors said that covering a bad wound with plaster would insure the infection freedom to become virulent and fatal.

Contrary to expectations, almost none got serious blood poisoning. The medical world was so amazed physicians visited Spain to see if Spanish soil lacked the usual virulent germs which cause blood poisoning.

Great Britain, the Academy was told, is using the Orr method.

Hitler's War Motives Senseless Ambition Says Premier Campbell

Charlottetown, Oct. 18 (CP)—While the implications of Hitler's Balkan moves are obscure, they reflect an apparent "admission of the failure of an immediate direct attack on Great Britain," Premier Thane Campbell declared last night in a radio address. He spoke over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network in one of a series of addresses sponsored by the Senate War-Co-operation Committee.

Hitler's war motives were senseless ambition, violence and barbarity and oppression, the Premier said, and events of the past few months gave rise to growing confidence that "these shall not prevail against the spirit and resources of the British people."

"The almost miraculous accomplishment of the retirement from Dunkerque, though in itself a loss of position and vantage, was the first event which inspired the beginning of this new confidence," he said. "The defence of London and the rest of Britain against terrific air attacks has intensified our hopes of ultimate victory."

In Canada, "we frequently become impatient at the apparent slowness with which Canada's war effort is mobilized. It must, however, be obvious that no government in this ultra peace-loving democracy could have secured public approval for years of aggressive military preparation in peacetime. And the change from a peace-loving regime to a state of total war naturally involves inevitable delays. It is apparent, however, that enlistment, training and material production are proceeding apace."

King Sends Message To People of Malta

Valetta, Malta, Oct. 18 (CP)—The King, in a personal message sent from Buckingham Palace to the Governor of Malta, Thursday congratulated the people of Britain's Mediterranean fortress on "the fortitude with which they face the constant air attacks of the enemy."

The message read:—

"My best wishes to the forces under your command and the people of Malta for their well-being and my congratulations on the fortitude with which they face, under your courageous leadership, the constant air attacks of the enemy.

"The people of Great Britain, now subjected to the same ordeal, think of them with sympathy and admiration."

Walter Pidgeon, Joan Bennett and Lloyd Noland are the principals involved in this scene from the romantic melodrama, "The Home Across the Bay," at the Belle, with "Calling All Husbands," and the newest issue of March of Time, "Britain's R.A.F."

Collegiate News

B.C.I.V.S., Oct. 18—There was a rugby game on Thanksgiving—good crowd, good support, good cheering, good game. (Read last Tuesday's paper—we can't improve on it.) Awfully sorry about that knee accident, Goldie—tough to sit on the sidelines in your senior year—Bart Warren says that apparenty conflicting reports in this column about the aim and object of cash receipts at rugby games and tea dances are both right—there are expenses (mostly black and red)—after those are met, there will be something done for some war service group—more details later.

On Thursday evening, October 10, several members of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, who are registered in the Commercial Course of the B.C.I.V.S. Night School were delightfully entertained in the school's model appartment at the conclusion of the evening's classes. Miss Saunders and Mr. Archibald assisted Miss Brown in arranging this informal gathering and Mr. MacLaurin dropped in to meet the guests and welcome them to the school.

Scoop! Contributed by M.C.

The play to be enacted two evenings on November 13th and 20th by the Green Room Club, has been chosen. It is to be "What a Life" and we are inclined to agree with the author. Rumors floating 'round claim Meribeth Stobie will be "the girl" and Ralph "Dress Suit" Atyeo will be "the hero." The Red Cross Units in the school will be in charge of the sale of tickets and the "John White" group will sell candy at the play.—One of their famous candy sales is scheduled for Thursday noon, October 31, by the way.—The rugby team certainly proved its statement that it would "molder" the Cobourg team when it defeated them 23-0 at the fair grounds on Thanksgiving Day — the team was ably supported, too.—XIII B have sold $117.00 worth of War Saving Stamps (But XI B have sold $132.50 of stamps to date as well as $85.00 worth of certificates.)—Our time-tables have been adjusted again—poor things, they're worn out! Under the new plan both girls and boys in Grades XI, XII and XIII will receive five periods weekly of military training. No longer does school begin at 9 a.m. and dismiss at 4 o'clock, but under the new regulations it begins at 8.45 and "dets out" at 4.10—and starts at 1.15 in the afternoon, too.

Tuesday this system went into effect and at 3.37 p.m. over 200 girls had collected in a questioning, seething mass in the girls' gym. Miss Allison outlined the plan for military training, first aid and signalling and Mr. MacLaurin confirmed the plan.

The next day the girls appeared on the campus along with the boys. Officers were appointed to approximately the same positions as they held in the "Girl Cadettes" earlier in the year. The girls, generous as always, readily give the boys the praise they deserve for the rapidity with which they settled down to the "New Plan," as it has been nicknamed; they are already doing fine work.

Wednesday in Assembly Mr. MacLaurin announced that classes going from one class-room to another would assume a brisk walk more suited to a collegiate body receiving five weekly periods of military drill. The school, with a painted, do-or-die appearance, went through their paces with great vigour in the morning, but it was not hard for a searching eye to notice some slight difference in the afternoon—guess we used up too much energy in the morning, or somethin'.

Red Cross Activities

The John White Unit

On Wednesday night, it was decided that this unit would have another of their superior candy sales. All the school knows the quality of the candy, so we only have to ask you to save your money until a week from next Wednesday. There will be two sizes five and ten cents; so no one can have any reason for not buying. The girls elected to supervise the candy sale are: Stella Morton, Dorothy Poste, Mildred Bertram, and Phyllis Clapp. The cause is most worthy, and the candy can only be described in superlatives, so get a supply for Hallowe'en.

M. R.

The "Susannah Moodie" group of Red Cross met in Miss Saunders' room on Wednesday. A pair of seaman's socks were handed in by Gwen McElrath. They are twenty-eight inches long in the leg! What about the short-legged seamen?

Socks are to be knit now by only experienced knitters. Apparently the Red Cross is getting tired of ripping out.

Wool for mitts was handed out also with instructions contributed by Miss McPherson.

Plans for the sale of tickets for the school play were gone over and everyone is dusting off his best salesmanship manner and putting it to work.

W. J.

ENEMY'S VAIN BOAST RECALLED

Hitler's greatest moment of exaltation probably was when he boasted last June that before the end of summer he would dictate peace terms to Britain at Westminster after marching through the streets of London. That was at the time of the collapse of France. At that time he could remember his glorious march into Warsaw over the ruins of Poland and his appearance in the Low Countries.

Since that boast was made in the spirit of a madman who would swallow and engulf the world, his exuberance has ebbed. The realization that he had a mighty task on his shoulders and on the shoulders of his millions of soldiers and of those of his new-found ally, Signor Mussolini, has come to him. He has never had so mad a vision since that time.

Today he has to resort to the pounding of the City of London by bombs and turning attention to the Near East. But he has signally failed against Britain. He met a people who can stand more than Hitler calculated. His disappointment and that of the Germans is indicated in the savagery of their attacks on the British capital which is also the greatest city and capital in the world.

He has in his blitzkrieg a one-gear war machine which cannot negotiate the sea and which cannot brook delay. It collapsed because he could not use his armies and had to trust to his warplanes to make a way for his non-sea-going Huns whom he hoped to put in propelled barges and push off for England. Here the Hitler plan blew up because the British are a different type than the maniacal Hun thought they are. They have endurance and patriotism that know no yielding.

Meanwhile R.A.F. fliers keep raining destruction upon the communication lines of the enemy, and have blasted his war factories, striking only at the effective points which will break down the war machine of the Hun. Safely riding the waves are those ships which give Britain her world supremacy on the sea. They and the R.A.F., with the heroic armies and civilian workers in Britain and the women and children have foiled his plot.

So he turns his blitzkrieg chariot to what he hopes will open up the way for aggression elsewhere.

But he has felt the sting of failure. Hitler and his armies cannot be the same as they were. They have met reverses along the seacoast of the North Sea and the English Channel. Glutton as he is for territory, he must bear the fate of the glutton, his appetite which will destroy him. He must keep on trying to devour while he thinks there is time for he knows a long war is fatal to him. So he turns attention to Rumania whom he has beguiled and juggles before his eyeballs, agloat with envy and rapacity, visions of the riches of the Near East. There, with his brother in international crime, Mussolini, he may try to redeem his name.

Outside Europe the sands of time are running relentlessly against the aggressors while strength for Britain is piling up at a rate which will supply the preponderance of munitions and mechanism which are required to run the brace of dictators into the ground and bury Nazism and Fascism forever.

THE NEW YORK TIMES ON COLONEL LINDBERGH

Two pointed paragraphs sum up the verdict of the New York Times on Colonel Lindbergh and his latest broadcast speech. They are sufficient to deal with this man's expressions in regard to the war and to his attitude which runs so counter to all the feelings of the people of the United States. Lindbergh who won the acclaim of the world for his flight across the Atlantic and has been the recipient of the kindliest regards and gifts of many peoples has in recent months expressed himself in a view so opposite to the ideals of the democratic peoples that his name has lost any attraction it ever had, just as he has lost every sense of balance which it seems should be possessed by one brought up under democratic institutions and laws.

The land of Britain which befriended him in his tragic hour some years ago and gave him and his family a refuge from the world is still the land of the same kindly people who have ever offered asylum and retreat to those in trouble. That land manifests its high idealism today and its steadfastness to international morality and the rights of the individual and nations in its determination to crush the crime of Nazism and Fascism in world affairs. Colonel Lindbergh in his attitude which does not distinguish between the British and the Germans in this war has shown no sense of gratitude to the British people for he has utterly failed to appreciate what Britain is doing for the world. His judgment on world affairs is tragically wrong. In his earlier broadcasts he mentioned Britain but in his latest he has confined himself to speaking to the American people.

The New York Times which has ever been a champion of the British and Allied cause against German aggression deals with him in a few words and gives, it may be assured, the typical American attitude towards Colonel Lindbergh. The Times' words are:

"Colonel Lindbergh prefers to shut his eyes to the terrible events of the past six months, and to shut his mind to their horrible meaning. He still assumes that there is no difference between the British and the Germans in this war. He still believes that it is immaterial to our national defense, or to our future as a free nation, whether Britain or Germany wins.

"The American people long ago rejected the conception of the war which Colonel Lindbergh is trying to implant in their minds. But as they read this latest speech they will feel it is more than even a tragedy that a gifted young aviator should be wasting his talents in this way."

Persistent Sore on Lower Lip May Be Cancer

A few years ago I came across three cases, two men and one woman, with a sore on the lower lip that failed to heal under the usual treatment. Fortunately I read an article in one of the medical journals stating that these "persistent" sores were often due to the rays of the sun. By having the woman wear a wide brimmed hat and use heavy rouge on the lower lip, the sore headed rapidly. With the two men, keeping out of the sun's rays cleared up the sore in a few days.

I am mentioning these cases because there may be some who quite naturally worry over a sore on the lip that does not heal rapidly because a persistent sore on the lip in the middle-aged is often cancer. As a matter of fact, cancer of the lip is not common in women.

The history of cancer of the lip is the appearance of an ulcer which is thought to be a cold sore and is sometimes covered with a scab. "More commonly there is a tumor or lump in the lower lip with a tendency to have a raw or bleeding surface. The sore and lump increase in size and never heal of themselves."

Dr. H. B. Hunt Omaha, in the Nebraska State Medical Journal states that any persistent "sore", "fever blister", "crack", or "lump" on the lower lip which does not heal in three weeks must be considered cancer until an examination of a small piece of the growth under the microscope proves that it is not cancer. Sunburn should be avoided, as shown by the large number of cases of cancer of the face found in the farming population. Aside from sun burn, other cases of cancer of the lower lip are due to repeated burns from short cigarettes, short-stemmed pipes, very hot foods, overhanging, irregular or very sharp upper teeth, and frequently chapping or cracking by wind, weather and sun.

Dr. Hunt states that the use of radium or Xrays, correctly administered by an expert, are as effective as surgery in the early treatment of cancer of lip and leave a better appearance — cosmetic result — than does surgery.

Remember the advice. A sore on the lower lip that does not heal in three weeks should be suspected of being cancer.

Churchill Tops As A.M. Walker

London—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill has maintained the custom of British premiers to take early morning walks but he has been out even earlier than the late Ramsay MacDonald who set a record for such strolls.

One morning Mr. Churchill was seen plodding along Whitehall apparently all alone but a few yards behind was a watchful detective.

On thing was missing—the Churchillian cigar. The Prime Minister does not smoke at 6:30 a.m.

No Better 'Ole For this Couple

Somewhere in Midlands, England—(CP)—Nature has provided Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Freeman with one of the finest air raid shelters in the country. It is an historic hermitage, formerly a resort for tourists, covered by 40 feet of solid rock and with 30 feet of rock on three sides and a steep descent to a glen in front.

"The Germans pass over here but they don't trouble us," said Mr. Freeman, a retired postman. "If there is a better bomb proof shelter than ours anywhere we haven't heard of it."

Stern Air Chase Ends in Victory

London—(CP)—This is the story of a night chase over Britain that ended in victory for the Royal Air Force pilot of a Blenheim fighter.

On a clear night the pilot saw bombs drop near a town in the northwest and a few minutes later, among the stars, he saw one which seemed to be moving. It was a light showing from a Heinkel.

Whether the Nazi pilot knew he was being followed will never be known but he led his pursurer first into the heart of the Midlands and then back up towards the Yorkshire Coast before heading home.

Forty miles out to sea, the Blenheim pilot who had been going "full bat" and at the same time keeping the Heinkel in sight for at least an hour, told his station he thought he would have to give up the chase. He was told that as he had gone so far he might as well let off his ammunition with a long shot.

He fired his front guns from about a quarter of a mile and to his great surprise found himself gaining on the Heikel. He continued to fire, finishing his ammunition, and was then able to come up alongside to let his gunner pour in a broadside that sent the Heinkel crashing into the sea.

LOOT OF A CONTINENT ROLLS TO GERMANY: HOW THE ROBBERS WORK

By The Diplomatic Correspondent of The London Times

Day by day the Germans are plundering the countries they have enslaved. They make no bones about it. It is unfitting Dr. Ley has declared, that Poles should presume to have the same standards of life as the Germans. The standard of living of the Dutch must be lowered, writes the Deutsche Volkswirt, if the conquered country is to supply Germany with food. We Germans, says the Volkischer Beobachter in the true Goebbels style, have as much interest in the French harvest as the French themselves. The economic system of Europe must be organized, says Dr. Funk, to guarantee to the German people the highest possible standard of well-being.

Everywhere the purpose is the same, to turn the enslaved peoples into helots in the service of the German Herrenvolk, the lordly ones, the master bullies.

The promised golden age is one in which all other nations will be placidly agricultural, hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Nordic engineers, mechanized warriors and men of science. That is for the future. But for the moment there is no pretence at laying the foundations even for that cheerless future. The Germans' chief concern so far has been to plunder and to stock their own granaries at the expense of their oppressed peoples.

In every country which they have overrun they have commandeered outright nearly all the food reserves and have ordered the slaughtering of much of the livestock. During September 16 to 22, alone, Germany took more than 17,000 sheep from Denmark, 15,000 for immediate slaughter, 2,000 for grazing. More than 11,000 head of cattle are similarly being taken from Denmark to the western districts of the Reich.

Holland lost nine-tenths of her large butter reserves in a week. Out of 28,000,000 poultry in The Netherlands 22,000,000 are being killed this Autumn. "The slaughtering of pigs in Holland," says the Kolnische Zeitung, "is being accelerated." The meat which cannot be sold in Holland will be sent to Germany, "where more storage space is available," a neat way of saying that Germany will take the lot, as she has begun to do.

Only the other day came the German wireless boast that Germany had taken 43,000,000 kgs. of early potatoes from Holland within three month—whereas the wireless added, Holland's exports of early potatoes to all countries in the world amounted to no more than 27,000,000kgs. in a normal three-months period. From the enslaved countries as a whole Germany has added 2,000,000 tons of wheat to her own reserves; and has just demanded 780,000 tons from France.

These are only a few of the statistical examples that have come recently of a process that is general and continuous. From Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and now from both halves of France, comes evidence of general decrees for the commandeering or the slaughtering of stock. From Norway Germany takes 200 tons of fish daily. From Belgium she takes all the available eggs, and Belgian producers have been warned of penalties should they try to sell without a German-controlled license.

Exports of herrings from several countries have been prohibited; all are to go to Germany. Out of the Bohemian Protectorate the Germans are taking wheat by the wagon load. Even the depleted Polish stocks are systematically raided.

The story is often told of how Blucher, fresh from Waterloo, looked at London from the dome of St. Paul's. "Was fur Plunder!" he was heard to mutter under his breath. What a city to plunder—the Germans of today say it aloud as they gaze round their oppressed countries.

Their manner of getting what they want varies from place to place. In Bohemia and in Poland in the first days they used the methods of loot pure and simple. Wheat and other food were piled high on wagons and driven away. Elsewhere they have used forced labor, forced sales, forced prices.

Sometimes there is a show of bartering. The Germans always speak of their bartering system as though it recaptured the simplicity and the brotherly spirit of the days when Solomon sent measures of wheat and measures of pure oil to Hiram, King of Tyre, who returned him cedar trees and fir trees, according to his desire. What often happens in these totalitarian days is that the Germans take what they want and promise to pay for it in machinery or in services later at their own price and in their own time. Even before the war many Balkan countries found that German barter was one-way traffic.

For the people in the oppressed countries there is now no possibility of protest. The German debt, the promises to pay, can run up endlessly. The Germans accordingly let them run up. They take goods from Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Norway and France, and in return give German bonds, or paper money in the local currency based on German bonds. Their promises give the transaction a legalistic form, but it is no more than a confidence trick.

At the moment its effects are disguised. Shopkeepers and industrialists in the oppressed countries sell goods to Germans on demand, and in return they receive either paper money in their own currency or else Reichskredit-kassenscheine (Reich credit office vouchers), which they can pass through their own Central Bank, and in return are given money in their own currency. The seller is left believing that he has not done so badly. True, he is short of food and consumers' goods like all the rest of his countrymen, but he has money for his wallet and can buy whatever is going.

What he as yet only dimly realised is that the money is insubstantial and inflationary. In essence what is happening in every enslaved country is that the Germans are taking goods out as fast as they can and are putting only paper money in. All that is behind the new money is a bundle of German bonds (which in normal times the Central Banks would not have touched with a barge-pole) or German promises to honor the issue in the day of victory. It is sheer inflation.

Nor is that all. The deception is greater. In all the oppressed countries the Reichsmark is over-valued; more goods can be bought with it than it is worth. Recently decrees have aggravated the disproportion by pushing down the value of the local currency, while at the same time prohibiting any compensatory rise in prices. A German concern, using doubly or trebly over-valued marks, can therefore purchase goods for a mere song and shares in local industries for a trifle.

The result in the unfortunate countries concerned is that even the little which seems fairly good is deceptive. The whole economy is on thin ice. A crack or a thaw and the whole thing collapses. Meanwhile Dr. Schacht and Dr. Funk hope that by filling Germany with goods they will put off the day of uncontrolled inflation at home.

Germans can manipulate money and credit. They cannot manipulate food. There are no fake Scheine to take the place of the supplies they have taken out of the oppressed countries.

Proof of the lack already developing is seen in the comparative rations for the Germans and for the people under their control. The ration cards do not tell all the story, for many of the oppressed people find that they cannot buy even the amounts to which they are limited.

What the ration cards show is that Germans are deliberately under-feeding the people whom they declare are under their protection. In almost every commodity the amount of food is less outside the Reich than inside. In some instances those "protected" are given less than half of what is allowed to the Germans.

German Pilots Go Anti-Nazi

London—(CP)—The Daily Sketch in its column "Inside Information" tells of a German airman who baled out somewhere in England and floated down to earth wearing a fur coat and carrying a suitcase full of personal belonging.

"He explained to the startled soldiers who arrested him that he was an anti-Nazi and had been given a 'suicide' job to do," the paper said, and added:

Disclosures he made to intelligence officers included: 'Luftwaffe' morale has been undermined by the heavy losses the R.A.F. is inflicting and the devastating British A. A. fire; pilots protesting against 'suicide' bombing attacks are told retaliatory measures will be taken against their relatives.

"Dissatisfied Nazi pilots have been taken back to Germany from France as prisoners, and Gestapo agents have now been drafted into all airdrome grounds staffs."

Less Damaging Than Expected

London—(CP)— German bombs are causing less damage and less loss of life than might be expected, according to a Home Office leaflet on emergency protection in factories.

"It is generally imagined that in the case of a direct hit the building and its occupants are doomed," the leaflet stated. "This is not supported by the evidence obtained from a study of recent air raid damage.

"There have been many cases of light 50-kilogram (about 22 pounds) bombs detonating on the thin corrugated roofing of single-storey factory buildings with little damage other than to the roof covering, and with very slight casualties.

"Similar bombs detonating on the floor of the shop removed the floor covering over a wide area but did surprisingly little damage to machines. One heavy bomb, 250kg (about 110 pounds), exploding on the floor, caused only local damage to machines and personnel.

"There is very little danger of serious structural damage from a near miss. Very heavy bombs, 500kg (about 220 pounds), falling within 33 feet of a workshop with corrugated iron walls did not more than strip the sheeting from the steel work."

The leaflet urged that water, electricity and gas services be duplicated to prevent complete stoppage of work by a bomb.

STRUCK GOOD BARGAIN

Middlewich, England (CP) — School children in this Cheshire town needed seed potatoes for their wartime allotment. They repaired a farmer's gates in the school workshop and were repaid with a good supply of potatoes.

All Canadians' Glorious Story Is Not Written

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

R.A.F. Fighter Station, Somewhere in England—(CP)—The adjutant, Flying Officer Peter D. MacDonald of Halifax, N.S., tossed a little index book across his document-laden desk and, heaving a sigh of regret, leaned back in his swivel chair.

"I'm terribly sorry," he apologised, "but I'm afraid that's the only written record we have of the All-Canadian Squadron. And about the only thing it shows is what boys are still with us and what boys we lost over there." He tilted his head to indicate France and for a moment lapsed into silence as he aimlessly polished his already gleaming spectacles. Then he cleared his throat and added:

"Of course, what happened over there seems to have happened a very long time ago. Our outfit have written new history since their return to England. Their activity in the Battle of Britain, especially around London, has been reported, I suppose, so I don't have to tell you what they have done lately.

"And yet, they did a great deal of good work in France, as you probably know. But we have nothing except that little book to record their bravery over there. That part of their history, I suppose, will have to remain unwritten for a while. It is really too bad, because the people back in Canada have every right to be proud of a grand bunch of boys. I shouldn't call them boys, because they are men, the very best type of men."

Motioning for us to examine the little yellow book, he lapsed into silence again.

Just Cold Facts

The book was well-thumbed, mainly from the entering of so many names, ranks, numbers and other cold facts of official records. But it told nothing of the hell through which the squadron have lived and fought prior to and during the hectic days of Dunkerque.

It told nothing of the terrific odds against which the young Canucks battled in the smoke-blotched skies day after day; told nothing of the scores of German planes they pared from the overwhelming formations that blasted Dunkerque beaches swarming with British troops waiting to be evacuated.

But it was during those bewildering days that the squadron really made for itself the name that has spread throughout the R.A.F. The legless Squadron Leader Douglas Bader was in command.

Accurate information regarding the number of planes brought down by the All-Canadian group is not available, and for this the adjutant again apologised.

"I can't honestly tell you how many enemy planes they brought down," he said, "because we lost some of our records when we left France. You know, of course, we were forced to leave there in a bit of a hurry."

But Fine Record

He took back the little book and began reading out names and the fate of the personnel. Many of the 25 originals have gone now. Six were killed, three missing, three prisoners of war and at least six were wounded. Some of the wounded were able to return.

"He is still with us," he would say after reading a name. Then he read more, adding quietly, "killed," or "missing," or "wounded."

"We got a pretty bad knock over Dunkerque," he said, "and that's where many of our casualties were suffered."

But if the squadron lost heavily there, they gave more than they got, for the incomplete records show that they were credited with at least 25 enemy planes in that section alone.

The adjutant was asked to explain tiny asterisks alongside the names of Pilot Officer Lidstone McKnight of Calgary and Flying Officer G. P. Christie of Montreal.

"Oh, I should have told you about those," he said. "We add those to indicate they are holders of the D.F.C."

Blow for Blow To Get Victory

London—(CP)—Britain must return "blow for blow" with harsh and iron determination," writes Lord Queenborough in "Monthly Message" publication of the Royal Society of St. George.

Every further breach of international law and civilized practice by the enemy must be ruthlessly countered," Lord Queenborough writes. "Our native traditions of fair play and generosity to an opponent are deeply ingrained in us. To abandon them, even now is hard and distasteful.

"To cling to them in the face of the enemy's open and loudly proclaimed brutality and treachery is to add to our own dangers and offer advantages to the enemy which he will not fail to grasp.

"We no longer have the right to follow our inclinations—in the name of our own life we must return blow for blow, with harsh and iron determination."

A successful card party was held last evening in St. George's S.S. Hall, when the prize winners for euchre were Mrs. Parry, first, Mrs. Welch, second, Mrs. Lazenby, third, Mr. J. Exley, men's first, Mr. Hill, second and Mr. Dewey, third. Mrs. Brower won the prize for lone hands.

Mrs. Ronald Waite, North Front Street, was hostess last evening to her euchre club at their opening party for the Fall season. Prizes were won by Mrs. Waite, first; Mrs. Carrie Cole, second and Mrs. H. D. Sharpe, third.

Miss Kathleen McPherson and Miss Marjorie Lashbrook were hostesses at the former's home last evening at a delightfully arranged crystal shower in honor of Miss Helen Potter, bride-to-be. About twenty-four guests were present, members of the staff of Queen Alexandra School and other friends of the guest of honour. An enjoyable evening was passed at the conclusion of which dainty refreshments were served.

On Friday of last week a happy event took place at the home of Mrs. Cecil A. Smith, Wallbridge, when some twenty young ladies were entertained in honour of a recent bride, Mrs. Grant Millar (nee Miss Laura Sine) as the gathering presented her with a tea towel shower. The initial part of the evening was devoted to progressive euchre, following which a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess. The evening terminated with all wishing the bride much happiness, while Mrs. Millar graciously thanked her many friends for their beautiful gifts and thoughtfulness.

The evening was spent in community singing and readings. During the evening Mrs. Wesley Sharpe read an address to the newly-wedded couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Long in a few well chosen words thanked their friends for the lovely and useful gifts. At the conclusion of the evening a tasty lunch was served.

GILEAD W. M. S.

The October meeting of the Missionary Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Ralph Lawrenson with eighteen in attendance and was opened with a hymn. Mrs. Wilfred Hutchinson read Psalm 103 for the scripture lesson and several of the members led in prayer.

Roll call was answered by each one repeating a verse with the word faith.

Mrs. Guy Leavens read a letter asking for discarded silk garments to be sent to makers of rugs for war purposes. The old garments are made into useful articles and sold to help pay the war debt. Mrs. Leavens then led in the rest of the program. Solos were sung by Mrs. W. Clare and Mrs. Fred Yorke. Miss Ruth Livingston and Miss Annie Clare sang a duet. Readings were given by Mrs. Soles, Mrs. Clare, Mrs. Balcanquel and Miss Florence Huffman gave a chapter from the study book. The president urged that givings be speeded up as the need is just as great in war time as it is in peace time. The watchword closed the meeting. Lunch was served.

Learning by Rote Has Its Advantages

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

We hear and read so much against memorizing at school that we might suppose it a sin for a pupil to learn anything by heart. Some teachers, indeed, fear they might be scolded by their bosses if they were ever caught having their children learn anything by rote.

Although the child might easily slip through the modern primary grades without having to commit anything to memory with a purpose, the student in high school and college won't last beyond the first mid-year examinations if he has not practiced long and hard on memorizing facts and symbols.

What would happen to the student in medicine, law or engineering if he had not disciplined himself in the art of learning things by heart? Even the student of "education" whose professor rails against memorizing will be a failure unless he has done considerable boning in the course.

Memorizing Important

Curious how carelessly some speakers and writers refer to memorizing by school children. While they appear to condemn the learning of anything by heart, they really mean, as a rule, only to condemn such learning that is meaningless or useless to the child. A few extremists, of course, would condemn the memorizing of anything with a purpose. They would have the child memorize without knowing that he is doing it, as having a tooth pulled without feeling it.

You and I believe, on the contrary, that any item of fact or skill worth using is worth keeping and worth learning and practicing, to remember it. We believe that incidental learning of items which will be used over and over again for years is often very unreliable, such as the basic addition and subtraction facts and the spelling of certain words.

What the ultra-modern school has forgotten is memory. Rightly it has put emphasis on meaning. Now let it balance this with memorizing in order to capitalize on the meaning. I would suggest the slogan, "After meaning, memorize," and I wouldn't quibble too much over the meaning of some very essential items like 8 and 5 are 13, 7 from 16 leaves 9. In contrast with prevailing practice, I would have the child memorize such basic fact before using it in a concrete problem. Then I should like to have him use this fact which was correctly learned, in numerous verbal problems, to help him hold fast to it.

RARE ELEGANCE pervades many of the new American fashions A slim afternoon suit is of patterned black silk damask. The jacket top is collarless, with tiny jewelled buttons down the slim front. With it is worn gloves of black suede with enormous cuffs of lynx that cover half the straight sleeves of the jacket. When clasped, the gloves form a muff.

JUST ABOUT the cleverest notion of the week is the idea of clips by day that become earrings by night. A little attachment does the trick. Done in rhinestone clusters.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wise Spouse Realizes Need of Little White Lies

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I married one of the best of men and I love him dearly—except when he sings. He has absolutely no ear, and is perfectly happy when he's a half tone off the key, and throwing everyone else off the key, enjoying it as if he were enthralling an audience at the Metropolitan.

"We have a very nice home and my husband is the soul of hospitality. He invites his men friends around for what he calls a 'Beer and Sing'. I make some sandwiches and the occasion would be perfect if he'd let the others sing. But he insists on leading, and then he goes sharp, flat and haywire. Sometimes the tune escapes him entirely, but he continues just as happily as before.

"The boys all like to come to our house and I like to have them, and it's never any trouble to fix the little supper they enjoy so much, put out the ash trays and sometimes play their accompaniments. But the singing of my husband is maddening.

"He asked me once if I didn't think it was a mistake he hadn't gone in for professional singing instead of insurance. I couldn't resist telling him if he had, he would have to double the insurance on his own life. He asked me if I didn't like his voice, and I told him frankly that it was the most terrible voice I have ever heard, that he had no ear, and that personally I preferred the croak of a bullfrog. Since then he has sulked and is not the same person.

"I've given him every opportunity to say something nasty about me—my housekeeping, my interior decorating (I've never done any outside my own house)—but he won't take me up. He just goes on being a martyr, suffering silently and we've never had a 'Beer and Sing' at the house since. How can I get him back on his own trolley?

"Too Frank Wife".

Why did you do that, my dear? You might have criticized anything about him—his face, his figure ,his hair, if any —even the way he conducts his office; but his poor little talent in which he took such pride—never, never! That was fatal!

Don't you know that married people never should tell the straight, unvarnished truth about anything in the way of talent the other half feels he or she may have. Unfortunately, it's too late for you to say you were telling a tarradiddle when you made those horribly frank comments on your husband's singing.

It might be a kill-or-cure experiment, but in your place I believe I'd take a chance and invite in all the "Beer and Sing" crowd as a surprise party for your grieving husband. They might say they'd missed the singing parties and missed him so much they decided to come over anyway. He may sulk for a little while but I think you may be able to thaw him out. And then, for goodness sake, don't indulge in any more frankness.

This advice is also true of your friends, in-laws and aquaintances, when they ask you what you really think about something, whether it's talent real or fancy, their golf game, a new shade of lipstick, or if you think little Mary or Jimmy is spoiled. Never the truth, the whole truth, nothing but —unless you're prepared to go into the doghouse.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Courtesy Returns Dividends

Courtesy is like a boomerang. Every courteous word that you say and every courteous deed that you do returns to you.

Watch yourself for a week and see if this isn't true. Think courtesy in your heart, in your spirit. Then let these thoughts express themselves in kind words and acts to other people. This is just another way of saying the old truth: Manner is the spirit; manners are the expression of the spirit.

Be considerate all times not when it happens to be convenient to you or when you want to impress people. Keep this ideal close to you; don't take it on and off, as you do your gloves.

If it has been your habit to do and say only what pleases you, you will undoubtdely pass through a period of being self-conscious. But keep practising this ideal of courtesy, and see what happens. If you're honest with yourself, you will admit that the more you practise courtesy, the more you'll find that you are liking yourself better, and that people are liking you better.

Wherever you go and with whomever you are, be courteous—to your family, to your co-workers, to people who serve you in any capacity, large or small, in shops, in the movies.

Remember to do the little kindnesses, to express the little courtesies. Make it your wish to please others. If someone is rude or thoughtless to you, overlook it, and repay the rudeness with your courtesy. You'll find that practically always your courtesy will defeat their rudeness.

You'll find also that, in this week in which you are trying to be ideally considerate to other people, you will tap inner fonts of graciousness that you never before even suspected existed. These discoveries will make your life pleasanter, will add a special beauty to your life, will be the lubricant that will make the social machinery run more smoothly.

If at the end of this trial week you do like yourself better and other people better, you will transform your conscious effort into the habit of mannerliness. And this means that you will be developing a fine character, a source of pride and delight to you, and a heart-warming response in your family, your friends, and in all other friends with whom you come in contact.

Drink Not Eat Juice Cocktail

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one is served a tomato juice cocktail preceding a dinner, and it is packed in a bowl of ice about midway up the glass, is it proper to drink it from the glass or to eat it with a spoon?

T.

The tomato juice cocktail is drunk from the glass. Since people vary as to what condiments they prefer to add, we may sip the cocktail with a spoon first, and then, after we have aded what we wish to add, drink it.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Shyness

Judging from some letters I have received, a previous column of mine seems to have been interpreted as advancing a theory that any shyness in a child is abnormal. I didn't intend it to create this impression.

Shyness has many meanings. The word shy is used correctly to describe a child, or person, who is easily frightened, or keeps away from others through sensitiveness; one who is inclined to shrink away through bashfulness. To be shy also means to avoid a person or thing through caution or timidity; or to be fearful of committing oneself. Obviously, every child has phases of shyness. He would be abnormal if he didn't.

The point I sought to make in the previous column, and wish to emphasize now, is that habitual, long enduring, shyness is abnormal.

I have known parents who were unable to see the difference between occasional spells of shyness and habitual shyness. They failed to realize that their child was withdrawing more and more within himself, becoming more and more sensitive, with the result that the child's social development was halted. When this condition or tendency continues to grow, the child's character becomes warped and his whole life affected.

It is plain from his biographies that Adolf Hitler's character is the product of the shyness he developed in his early years and from which he continued to suffer in his young manhood until it made him a bitter, frustrated individual determined to force persons to pay attention to him.

His home was not a happy one, and it is in homes where there is strife between the parents, or homes where there is only one child or children who have no regular contacts with others of their own age, that we find most cases of abnormal shyness.

To illustrate how other children help youngsters to get over their shyness, I'll cite something that happened the other day at the Quintuplet nursery. A stranger visited us. When the five girls were presented to him, Annette was suddenly overcome with shyness and hung back. She tried to hide behind the other in a way foreign to her usual conduct. Immediately, Emilie, always very observant and critical, spoke to Annette in French: "Annette is shy, and it isn't good for the Quintuplets to be shy."

Properly, Emilie should have waited until later, then taken Annette aside to speak to her about this. But she didn't, and her remark was effective, for Annette collected herself, came forward, and there wasn't a sign of any further embarrassment in her conduct during the rest of the visitor's stay. Incidentally, he did not understand French, and the drama of Emilie's prompting probably was lost upon him.

Parents can do a great deal to protect their children against abnormal shyness by providing them with the regular daily contacts with children of their own or nearly their own age from their earliest years. That is, contacts in which they have freedom to develop their personalities, to develop socially.

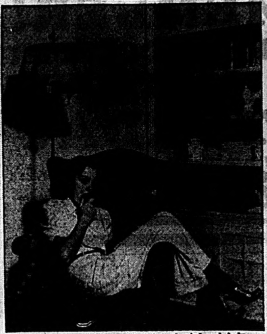
"Easy Does It" In Wrinkle War



Every worker must have relaxation of mind and body.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Moments of communion with the wrinkle cream won't accomplish much for the woman who is always tired. If you're a drive-yourself wife and mother, sit down and think things over. You create the atmosphere of the home, and upon your well being depends the happiness of your family.

Things will wag along just the same if you steal a few hours of self-indulgence now and then. Learn to work with as little strain as possible; the best way to do that is not to take life too seriously or pay too much attention to trivial matters. Have confidence that the future is going to be brighter and easier. Hopefulness is a wonderful influence toward the cultivation of good looks.

Relax

Every worker must have relaxation of body and mind to make up for the wear and tear of labor. Without it there will be tension that puts horrid lines in the feminine face and ties the nervous system into hard knots. It is necessary for mental health, upon which beauty is dependent to a degree far greater than most of us realize.

Cast out unpleasant memories of the past: dwell upon the joyous ones. Whenever possible do a flop. Lie down; close the doors of your mind as well as your eyelids, relax every fiber of your body. Don't forget that you are more important than the house to which you are a slave. Keep fit, keep young, keep sweet.

Make up your perfume mind and stick to it. Buy scents in small containers, try them out. Keep on seeking until you find one that gives joy to your soul and pleasure to your nose, and then don't change.

It is a mistake to use several perfumes. Have sachets of the same odor as your toilet water, place them in hat, glove and handkerchief boxes. Keep perfume in an atomizer. After the daily bath spray the arms and throat. It is not a good idea to apply perfume to the hair; that's too much of a good thing.

As clothes have gone old fashioned, so have perfumes. Mignonette, lilac, rose, violet, jasmine are popular.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT is the thing with coats this year. An interesting model is of brown wool with narrow bands of black wool, a black wool hem flounce and set-in black wool yoke outlined with bands of black fox.

WHILE there may be sudden and disruptive situations to cope with on this day yet there are auguries of surprising successes with strenuous developments, the outcome of which depends upon a keen grasp of circumstances with due acumen and strategy. Shrewdness, diplomacy and subtlety, especially in transactions with groups, fraternities, political bodies or business corporations engaged in secret or confidential enterprises. Peculiar, strange or irregular circumstances may culminate in curious entanglements or intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves intrigued into a year of surprising, unforeseen and strange involvements, which may be complex and confusing. Relations with groups, secret organizations or large corporations of problematical purpose should be handled with shrewdness, finesse and vigilance. The prospects are not entirely portentous but call for sagacity, clever understanding and caution. Be wary with strangers and doubtful propositions.

A child born on this day may be active and aggressive, possibly erratic and audacious, but may have a strange faculty for solving peculiar or perilous entanglements. It may have deep feelings and intuitions.

Merits of Boarding School Offset Being Away From Home

Shall I send my child to boarding school?

There are reasons for sending a child to the local public schools and there are also reasons for sending a child to private school—entirely apart from any financial considerations, writes Millicent Taylor in the Christian Science Monitor. Sometimes within the same family it is best to send one child to the public school, another to a local private school, and yet a third away to boarding school.

For many, such decisions are being made right now. If boarding school is being considered, let us list a few of the gains we may expect for Jack or Betty in the years they are away at school—gains that may be chalked up to balance the disadvantages of their being away from their own home and family.

1. On their arrival at school they literally and to an extent figuratively leave their parents behind. They are "on their own"; they are themselves, and not sons or daughters of someone else. They can no longer rely upon family prestige or be dragged down for lack of it.

2. They must solve their own problems and recognize their own opportunities. A thousand adjustments, some of them fundamental, are made by these children, often rather self-centred when they come before they settle down as a group to harmonious school life. For one, Mother has always borne all the responsibility. For another, Dad has perhaps been too strict, and a tendency to deceive must be overcome by the child. For another, over-indulgence has given the child no aid in building habits of self-discipline. And so it goes. These things are quickly revealed in boarding school, where educators are dealing with the child not only during the school day but all around the clock.

Good Resolutions

3. Sometimes a child has long wished to "turn over a new leaf"—be more reliable, more affectionate, more steady, more responsive; but years of being the other kind of child keeps him from doing this at home. He is shy about it. The picture his family and friends have is one that has grown distateful to him, yet he has not quite the courage to erase it in front of them all. At boarding school he may leave that picture behind and start painting a new one. And having painted the new one, it is easier during vacations at home to show it to family and friends until at last the old one is gone forever.

4. Few modern homes are as orderly in their daily schedule as is the average boarding school. Regular times for getting up and going to bed, uninterrupted hours of study, of play, regular meals, simple sturdy clothes and not too many, treats that are not too frequent nor capriciously granted—these are among the ways of life the child thrives on. The well-conducted boarding school is the epitome of orderly living. Most children are better for a planned schedule. It helps them to feel a sense of security.

First Responsibilities

5. For many children, actual responsibility for their own possessions, their own rooms, their laundry lists, their contact by mail with their parents are new and growth-producing experiences. Keeping on the strict dormitory-tidy list is at first real progress for some.

6. Regular study hall can be of vast worth. Many a time the college freshman who comes from a good boarding school is head and shoulders above the rest when it comes to knowing how to study, and often does; but the boarding school, with its full quota of day and evening study groups, has the best opportunity of all.

7. Learning to live with others, learning to maintain a cheerful spirit not only during the school day but at meals, in leisure hours in the dormitory, and in sharing with one's roommate—these are important character builders. And with all this, boaring school fun and friendships become a part of one's life—making one's 'old school' a precious and enduring memory, well won.

So, even though some boys and girls are sent to boarding school solely that they may enter one of the great colleges in an integrated social group rather than as individuals from some distant home town the real worth of boarding school life, according to those who out of their experience have provided the above seven points, is far more genuine and lasting.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON
(Mme. Qui Vive)

8-7
Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Chin, Chin, Double Chin

One chin is enough for any woman. She has no desire to have the one she was born with go tandem. The sad truth is that she invites it to come along and make itself at home. It is created by the good things of the table that are stored away in the form of adipose tissue. If she has no regard for her figure, not caring two cents whether or not it looks like the spreading chestnut tree, she should have respect for the countenance that stares at her from the looking glass. Twin chins are no beauty bargain.

One thing she must not do and that is to hunch up her shoulders, pull her chin down toward her chest. Muscles are relaxed, and fat cells have a free hand when fibres lose resiliency. By holding her head on the level, turning her head from side to side with a strong muscle pull—whenever she has a few minutes to devote to her beauty home work—she can work off the facial suet.

The double chin must be caught young. Permitted to go its wilful way the fullness increases, the outer skin is stretched and, even if the fat cells are disintegrated, the flesh is loose and crinkled. Terrible.

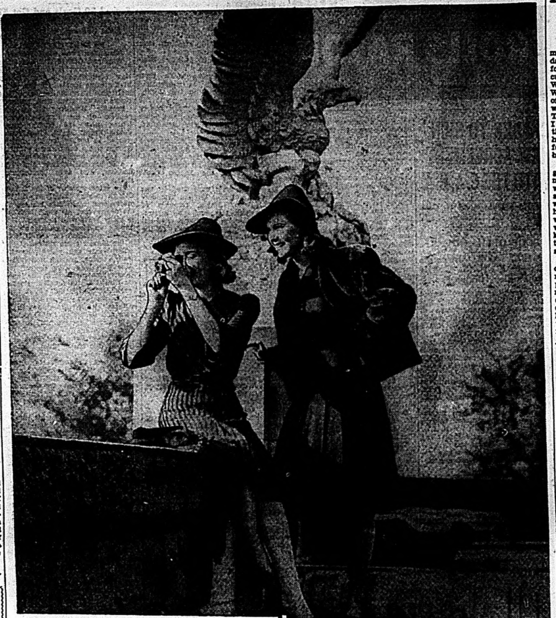
Massage is effective. It must be the right kind, of such movements that the adipose structures are crushed, the underlying muscles strengthened and the outer skin tightened. It should be continued for several months. Facial operators can do this presto. When the flesh is full, flabby and wrinkled beneath the chin, the neck looking like crepe, about the only remedy is plastic surgery, which is expensive and which must never be considered unless the surgeon is a man of high standing in the brotherhood of medicine.

Always have a clean skin surface when using oils or cream. Use soap and warm water freely so the flesh will be warm. Have the skin surface very dry. Apply a heavy cream with flattened fingers, starting at the collar bones, working up to temples and forehead.

Pick up the flesh under the chin, roll it between thumb and finger. Use both hands. Start in the centre and work upward and outward. Tilt the chin slightly; keep the muscles relaxed. After the nipping and pinching, place the finger tips at either side of the chin, smooth up along the jaw lines to the ears.

The next movement is a brisk hammering and tapping to make the blood streams hustle about their business. While the cream remains on friction with an ice cube. Let the emollient stay on overnight. In the morning use cold water freely, then sponge with witch hazel or your favorite astringent.

Two Costumes With A Future



Here are previews of the new Fall fashions. The camera girl is wearing a softly tailored frock of spun rayon and striped flannel. It is characterized by fine detail rather than obstrusive trimming. A model like the frock above is likely to be the backbone of a wardrobe and always look just right. Her friend wears a smart fur jacket costume. The little suit is also of spun rayon and wool, in tweed weave. You can see for yourself how smart this combination is for a useful and stunning day ensemble.

GAY NIGHTS AHEAD what with all the events already planned and the shops showing lovely clothes. A charming evening frock made with a full skirt and shoulder scarfs, is of chiffon in palest pink right through to flame color.

A GOOD FIND is a pair of huge black sequin flowers. These can be attached to the bodice of a black dress to simulate pockets or can be used to trim a simple black velvet hat, or just as ornaments.

Newsosis Grips this Chaotic World

Philosopher Gibbs Prescribes for the War-Politics Jitters

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

"I GAVE MY first prescription against reading the war news and political news today", said Dr. Adrian Gibbs, as he was locking up his office. "Told a fellow he was simply suffering from acute ingrowing power politics or newsosis.

"I really found out about this disease from a study of my own case. I have a job to do which is important in the world if only from the standpoint that I keep myself and my family off relief. And that job has nothing to do with Hitler, nor Rumania, nor Stalin, nor the plans for the national defense, nor Wilkie or Roosevelt, nor finding a source of aluminum, or the manufacture of synthetic rubber. At least there's nothing I can do personally about these things right now.

"All in a Tension"

"This fellow is in the same fix. He has a tidy little job that is his own, that he is capable of doing, and that ought to receive a large part of his attention. He's been doing it all right until lately when he found himself getting fatigued and sleepless and all in a tension. So he began to take more exercise and make dates for golf games—dates he had to keep, that kept hanging over him and preying on his mind.

" 'Let's see,' he would say to himself, 'I've got to get through what I'm doing now so I can get out to the links at 2 p.m. and get through with my game in time to hear the 5 o'clock news broadcast, and then see the news-reel at 8:30 o'clock, and catch up with that book on the Persian oil situation before I go to bed.'

"He had to get up in the morning so he could read all the pronouncements from the South American capitals and the editorials, and what the candidates said at their press conferences.

Overworked Nerves

"You see he hasn't enough nervous system to stand all that. He has a pretty sound nervous system, but like all human equipment it is limited and things had crept up on him so he had just naturally swamped it.

"It was like as if you blew an oyster up to man's size but left the oyster's nervous system in its original primitive condition and then put it in command of a submarin The oyster—and the submarine—would just naturally go to pieces.

"This patient figured himself he'd better give up the press conferences. He said he suddenly discovered that neither Willkie nor Roosevelt were any funnier than Jack Benny and not nearly as funny as Ben Bernie or Damon Runyan, so he switched to Ben and Damon with a great improvement in his general well being.

"As the days begin to get shorter I think I can stop a lot of middle-aged guys from taking so much outdoor exercise, and persuade them to lie down for the afternoon. That's the best place for the World Revolution to find a fellow of any age anyhow—on his back on a sofa".

Questions and Answers

D. M.—"Will you please tell me what causes mouth ulcers and how they can be prevented? Is this condition due to lack of certain vitamins?"

Answer—"Mouth ulcers" is a broad term. There are many different kinds of mouth ulcers caused by many different things. I presume, however, that you mean what are commonly called "canker sores". I have never seen any proof of the theory that these are caused by lack of vitamins. Some people think they are due to allergy or hypersensitiveness, and I published a letter a little while ago from a dentist who believed they were due to lack of minerals and treated them with calcium salts. They are notoriously likely to affect certain people and return frequently. My dentist correspondent claimed that he had been able to prevent their recurrence in sensitive individuals by this means.

M.P.—"Can night blindness be cured? If so, please name the pills or whatever will help it."

Answer—It is said that night blindness is due to lack of Vitamin A. This can be obtained in concentrated form or by the eating of carrots and corn.

C.F.—"Is there danger of cancer arising from a mole on the back of the neck. Is it more dangerous to have it removed than to leave it alone? Is the electric needle more advisable than snipping it off? It has been a small one for about 25 years but started growing about 6 years ago."

Answer—It is possible for cancer to arise from a mole. There is no danger to having it removed if done by a competent physician. You had better leave the method of removal to him as he would have to use his judgment about the best method after seeing the mole.

J. L. —"What causes water brash and what remedy could I use?"

Answer—Water brash is the regurgitation of acid contents of the stomach into the mouth. It is due to increased acidity of the gastric juice. The remedy is in alkali such as baking soda.

M. R.—"Do sedatives cause one to have hallucinations? I mean barbital and other medicines taken in capusules for mental nervousness. Do you recommend this?"

Answer —Barbital is very likely to cause hallucinations in middle aged people. I would certainly not recommend this unless it is ordered by a doctor.

FASHION FLASHES

NEW THINGS are being done with fur hats. A lovely model is a side-brimmed hat of black Persian lamb. The back is rolled back in cornucopia shape to show gathered black antelope. Black Chantilly lace veil is draped across the back and over the shoulder.

GOING PLACES needs a coat that is good for travel wear and at the destination. One such model is of gray tweed flecked with bright red and navy blue. Full back. Big collar of gray fox.

IT'S TOPS this hat of black patent leather, a high-crowned topper with a broad crown band of black petersham held by a square buckle. With the hat is a big underarm bag of black suede on which are appliqued little toppers in patent leather.

Young Marrieds Shouldn't Form the Fighting Habit

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

"We never have a cross word any more," said a young wife the other day. "Jack and I have hit on a foolproof formula guaranteed to cure the habit of family fighting. We used to have it hot and heavy. We could get up a scrap any time of day or night over anything. He would criticize me and I would cry. Then he'd curse me for crying and I would get mad, bring up everything he'd ever done and hurl it at him. Sometimes we wouldn't speak for days at a time. Things got so bad I was thinking of divorce.

"One morning after a grand and glorious row the night before I made up my mind that two adults who loved each other ought to be able to work it out, and while we were having our breakfast I said to him, "Jack, we love each other but we couldn't get on any worse if we hated each other, and if this keeps up our love is going to turn to hate. Let's cut out this childish squabbling.

"I have a scheme: Let's have one complaint night a week and agree not to offer a criticism or a complaint except at this time. We can make mental notes of all the grudges we have, save them up until court night. We'll have to swear to hold our tempers, say no harsh words and settle every score before we go to sleep."

"'You're on,' he said, 'provided you'll cut out the crying and promise not to give me any of those dirty looks that infuriate me. You make mental notes if you want to, but I'll put mine in a note-book.'

"So we settled on Sunday night as complaint night. It was a perfectly ridiculous performance. Jack pulled out his book and began. Honestly you'd think a man would have been ashamed to mention such little matters. He has since admitted he was. I remember his first shot. He said I nearly ran him crazy waving my hands when I talked, that it was unladylike and that I always did the waving act before people he wanted me to impress.

"I remember I told him I couldn't bear the way he went off with the men at a party and left me to shift for myself. Of course I had a specific instance that had mortified me to tears. Anyhow the scheme worked and each of us found out what irritated the other and gradually we learned to lay off those habits.

"I still scatter the morning paper when I read it and he still coughs without putting his hand over his mouth, but we laugh those things off. They don't seem to matter any more as they once did. We've broken the fighting habit."

Can-Opener Meals

By ELEANOR ROSS

The can opener is the magic key to grand summer meals. A well stocked pantry shelf makes it possible for even the amateur cook to turn out a swell meal in quick time and with little effort. Jellied soups, once obtainable only at restaurants, if one did not wish to undertake the bother of preparing these jellied soups at home, is one summer course that comes in cans. A madrilene will start off any meal nicely and give it a de luxe touch. A madrilene followed by corn pudding, then salmon salad and for dessert a compote of fruits is a meal that is well balanced, wholesome, cooling and nutritious.

Jelly Soup

If the grocer hasn't madrilene in stock, it is easy to prepare a grand jellied consomme. Soak 1-2 tablespoon gelatin in 2 tablespoons cold water for 10 minutes. Mix 2 teaspoons concentrated consomme or 3 bouillon cubes and 2 cups boiling water and pour over gelatin. When dissolved, let cool until set. The jelly should be so tender that it breaks into pieces as it is served in cups. Serve with a slice of lemon.

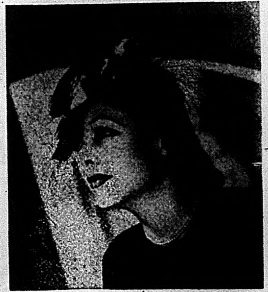
Line up a No. 2 can of cream-style corn for a piquant corn souffle that will serve 6. Make a white sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour and 3-4 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1-2 cup water.

Season with 1-2 teaspoon salt and pour over 4 beaten egg yolks. Add corn and one tablespoon chopped green pepper. Fold in 4 stiffly beaten egg whites and pile lightly in buttered baking dish. Set in pan of hot water and bake for 35 minutes in a 375 degrees F. oven.

As an alternative to salmon salad, you might like to serve a jellied salmon loaf. To make this cool dish, flake a No. 1 can salmon. Soften one tablespoon unflavored gelatin in 2 tablespoons cold water and dissolve by placing dish in hot water. Add to one cup tart salad dressing. Add salmon. Line a loaf pan with waxed paper. Cover bottom with slices of hard boiled egg and stuffed olives. Pack salmon mixture into mold. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce garnished with salad dressing.

Figs, black cherries and Bartlett pear halves taken altogether spell a toothsome fruit compote, easily prepared. But if time permits, there are many delightful desserts that come from cans. How about a mousse made with a No. 2 1-2 can fruit cocktail? Drain this and dilute syrup with water to make 2 cups. Add 1-4 cup sugar and heat to boiling. Soften one tablespoon gelatin in 2 tablespoons cold water. Pour boiling syrup over. Stir to dissolve. Chill until almost thick. Whip with rotary beater until light and fluffy. Fold in fruit, one cup whipping cream stiffly beaten and teaspoon vanilla Freeze at coldest temperature in automatic refrigerator for 3 to 4 hours.

For a Dinner Date



By Alice Alden

FABRIC is the bridge that spans the gap between summer straws and autumn felts. The shops just now are featuring delightful fabric hats and smart women buy them to top off a late summer costume or to lend interest to an advance early autumn outfit. Ann Nagel likes fabric hats and wears them the year round. Here is one of her favorites, made to complement a new dinner dress.

The hat is of black stitched taffeta made with a rippled brim that dips in front to form fascinating shadows. The turquoise metallic banding ties in a bow in front and roses are tucked under the brim at one side. Black veiling forms a wide shadowy bow in front with short streamers floating in back.

Riders and Balmy Beachers Picked to Win on Saturday But Argos May Upset Dope

Lew Hayman's Squad Can Pull Biggest Surprise of Season by Beating Ottawa

TEAMS ARE READY

Jimmy Follwell Will Likely Do All the Kicking for the Argos

(By Sydney Gruson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The East's leading football teams get all mixed up tomorrow in two games that should unscramble the picture somewhat and present a clearer view in looking for the section's champion. This is the week-end to show just who has what in the interprovincial and Ontario Unions.

The main battles are at Ottawa, where the champion Rough Riders confidently await the charge of Lew Hayman's double-blue brigade, and at Toronto, where Balmy Beach will see if it's true what they are saying about the Battery boys from Sarnia .The victors—as this corner sees them—will be Riders and Balmy Beach.

Two tougher games to call involve the four clubs which have yet to get a victory. The Tigers make a stand in the Hamilton lair against Montreal while Hamilton Alerts round out the O.R.F.U. schedule against Camp Borden in the University of Western Ontario stadium at London.

Tigers Picked to Beat Montreal

With fingers crossed, the corner picks Hamilton, who have shown steady improvement learning the Art Massucci way, and Camp Borden, because of their stronger line, Gord Meikle's kicking and Eddie Thompson's running.

The clash between Riders and Argos should be the day's feature. Hayman's Argos know they can't match the burly champions on the ground, and that Sammy Sward will outkick Jim Follwell or Earl Selkirk, so the prospect is that they'll try every daring play in a book filled with them to overcome these deficiencies.

Without a serious injury, the Riders hit the spit all primed to pick up just where they left off in eliminating the Toronto Club last season. Their ground tanks, Tony Golab and Morray Griffin especially, might find themselves surprised at the way this Argo line gives way at times.

Backfield is Versatile

The Rider's backfield is almost as versatile as the crew led by the Stukus Brothers, Bill and Annis, Art West and Selkirk. But the riders don't have to be as fancy with Sward's kicking and a good ground attack to back up the passing. And with Griffin and Orville Burke to do their tossing, Riders won't have to concede anything in this department.

It is the Argos' amazing ability to get red-hot for a short stretch that keeps their chances alive. If the breaks bounce just right—and they must to make their ball handling pay—they can move upfield faster than any other club. But this looks like a game, and a season, when Riders have the stuff to quench Argo fire.

Battery Team Solid

The Surprise Club in the early running, Sarnia, 2-26 Battery reach the Beach game on the heels of a flock of reports that they're almost as good as the great Imperial teams which came out of Sarnia in the last ten years. They're got a solid attack with Ralph Perry and Joe Woodcock to do the plunging and Hank Galloway for kicking and passing.

The latest word from the Beach camp is that Don Crowe will be able to play, despite a bruised shoulder and hip, and Crowe's presence will make up for the enforced idleness of Jack Prizzelle and Bobby Porter, two of Beaches' star backs. Crowe and the Balmy workhorse, Frank Seymour, plus the best tackling line in the east, should be able to swing the job.

Seymour has been a standout in Balmy's first two games, ripping the Alert and Borden lines to bits in previous Saturdays. He'll find tougher opposition on the Sarnia secondary, bolstered by Nick Paithouski's return after an injury kept him out last week. The Battery must stop Seymour to take the game.

The day's best bet seems to be Ottawa. And even the Riders are not a lead-pipe cinch.

CALDER TO SIGN NEW AGREEMENT WITH THE C.A.H.A.

LOOP OPENS NOV. 2

C.A.H.A. Will Reinstate Player if N.H.L. Unable to Employ Him as Pro.

New York, Oct. 18 (CP)—Except for a minor dispute affecting National Hockey League's corps of referees, everything was in readiness today for the opening Nov. 2 of the League's 1940-41 season.

The last of the usual glut of pre-season business matters was dealt with yesterday at a meeting of the League Board of Governors, headed by President Frank Calder. Only remaining item left unsettled was the status of Referee Bill Stewart, former manager of Chicago Black Hawks.

Stewart, in summer an umpire with the National Baseball League, has been at odds with the N.H.L. since last season and Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins was delegated by the Board at his own request, to attempt to reach a settlement.

Ross told his fellow governors he believed Stewart acted hastily in rejecting a contract offering him $3,500 minimum for the season, and containing the same 24-hour release clause that players and coaches accept.

The meeting authorized Calder to sign the new agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association under which the professional body will pay up to $500 for signing an amateur,.

The sum of $250 will be paid to the C.A.H.A. or other amateur bodies affiliated with the International Hockey Association, when an amateur signs any professional contract, and an additional $250 if the player signs with one of the seven clubs of the N.H.L. This money will be distributed by the amateur body to the clubs where the player received his training.

The C.A.H.A. in turn agrees to accept the League's recommendation that a player be reinstated if he is unable to find employment as a professional.

O'FLAHERTY SIGNS WITH AMERICANS

Former Player With Goodyears Leading Scorer of His Team Against Amateurs

Port Arthur, Oct. 18 —(CP)—Jack (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, who played senior amateur hockey with Toronto Goodyears last season, was signed to a professional contract Thursday with New York Americans and last night O'Flaherty was a leading goal scorer as the National League club walloped an all-star Lakehead amateur team 13-2 in an exhibition game.

O'Flaherty and Murray Armstrong each scored three goals in the one-sided game while three other newcomers to professional ranks also figured in the scoring. They were Bus Wycherley and Bill Benson, who played junior hockey in Manitoba last season, and Squee Allen, a former North Battleford, Sask., amateur.

The other Americans scorers were the veteran Tommy Anderson, with two, Buzz Boll and Pat Egan, a defenceman brought up from Seattle Seahawks in the Pacific Coast league.

FRANK BOUCHER COMING UP TO HELP RANGERS

Frankie Boucher, 21, is Nephew of Coach for N. Y. Rangers and Has Real Class

PLAYS CENTRE

Scored 30 Goals and Got 57 Assists With N. Y. Rovers Last Season

By ANDY GARRETT

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 18 (CP)—Another Frankie Boucher is coming up the New York Ranger hockey ladder in the same spot where the original made his name famous as the centre for the great Cook brothers.

Frankie Boucher, 21, is the nephew of the Rangers' former centre, now the team's coach. Young Frank has a background steeped in hockey for his father, George, was a defenceman with the old Ottawa Senators and another two of his uncles, Bob and Bill Boucher, also were professional stars.

The latest member of the famous Ottawa hockey family to hit the professional ranks has his eye on the centre spot his uncle kept for so many years with Rangers. He's coming up slowly, getting all the experience needed for the N.H.L. in the Ranger chain system.

Two years ago young Frank's heady centre playing won him a place with New York Rovers, the Ranger amateur farm in the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League. In his first full season with Rovers, the first rung on the Ranger ladder, he led the club with 18 goals and 33 assists for 51 points, good enough for seventh in the League scoring.

Hit Top Form Last Year

He hit the top of his amateur form last season, scoring 30 goals and getting 57 assists to finish third in the League scoring. He set a league record in one game by making the plays for six goals. Young Frank has his uncle's same smooth style and his knack of sizing up a play swiftly.

He's built a lot like his uncle, as well. Only 21, he's slim and wiry, weighing about 157 and standing five feet, seven inches. He's booked this season for Philadelphia Ramblers, only one step away from the National League, and no one is going to be surprised when he gets a call to the Rangers.

The family complex of the Ranger camp here doesn't stop with the Bouchers. Lester Patrick struck gold with the Cook brother combination and there are two other sets of brothers set for another season with the Stanley Cup champions.

Two of the brothers are Lester's sons, Lynn and Murray, and, of course, the Colville boys, Neil and Mac.

It must be a nice oranization to work for. Everybody brings along his young brother or nephew.

OPENING DAY AT BAY MEAD OWS

Twenty thousand turf fans turned out for the opening of the racing season at Bay Meadows, and were rewarded by this sight of the bangtails heading into the home stretch in the fifth race. Mistress Plato copped the honors, with Cloud second and Stepinoff third.

Game Will Test Jackson's Ankle

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 18 (AP)—Art Jackson's ankle, fractured during last year's National Hockey League playoffs, will be thoroughly tested tomorrow night when Boston Bruins open their exhibition series with the Hershey Bears of the American League.

Since the Bears, who serve as the Bruins' farmhands, will not have a full squad until Manager Art Ross cuts his National League squad, they lack enough manpower for tomorrow night's doubleheader.

As a result, Jackson and his Wingers, Herb Cain and Eddie Wiseman, will play with the Bears' Rookies against the Bruins' fourth-stringers and then join the Ross' Varsity for the feature event against the Bears' regulars.

Red Hamill will bolster the Hershey lineup by playing defence for both of its teams in the twin bill, thereby forcing the durable Flash Hollett to play for both of the Boston teams.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Profiting by the success of the Belleville Collegiate squad, Coach Pete Beach announced today his Albert College senior Interscholastic gridders would throw caution to the wind and play a strictly wide open game versus Cobourg Collegiate on their home campus Saturday. Des Partridge was elected captain of the Albert squad for 1940 and immediately Des requested permission to open up play on Saturday. For years Albert football squads have played a balanced line and straight football, but apparently Coach Beach and his associates had their eyes opened last Monday when the B.C.I. ran roughshod over Cobourg with wide open plays. The Alberts have a strong line, as was proved in Cobourg when the Summer Town gridders scored but four points to win 4-1. However, the Alberts fumbled badly in Cobourg, but it was their first group game and miscues are always expected in the early stages. Both Cobourg and Albert are faced with possible elimination in defeat Saturday, so the tussle should be well worth attending.

"Pops" Cooper's Tops 3rd world 225 c.c. class power boat record was shattered badly at Picton when Voodoo, driven by Charlie Hamblin Jr., roared over the measured mile at Picton at the incredible speed of 88.67 miles per hour yesterday. The Picton course recognized as the finest course for power boat racing on the North American continent, was selected for the assault on the world's 225 c.c. class hydroplane record, which was established over the same course in 1939, when Pops Cooper's Tops 3rd broke the finishing line over the measured mile at 87 miles per hour. In the establishment of a new world record Forman drove his unorthodox Voodoo 87.485 m.p.h. over the first lap. On the return dash the Voodoo was clocked at 88.67 miles per hour, the fastest mile ever driven by a 225 c.c. hydroplane. The test was sponsored by the American Power Boat Association, under the auspices of the Picton Yacht Club. The Voodoo was present at the Belleville Rotary regatta in 1933, but did not start.

Do you remember when for the first time in the history of Dufferin Park, one stable ran away with four victories in four starts, a year ago today, when Jim Cosgrave saw his silks first at the post for the fourth time at the Toronto track.

October 5 seems to be a busy day for World's Series infielders.

On October 5, 1921, Roger Peckinpaugh, former shortstop and captain of the New York Yankees established a record for assists by an infielder, nine, in his game with the Giants. Three years later, Freddy Lindstrom, then substitute third sacker for the Giants, set a Series record for third base assists—seven —in his game with Washington.

On October 5, 1940, Pinky Higgins of the Tigers had nine assists against the Reds, tying Peck's old record and going two ahead of that of Lindstrom.

Both Peck and Lindy were in the stands at Briggs Stadium, Detroit, when Higgins had his busy afternoon at third during the 1940 series.

The tradition that the team in first place July 4 goes on to win the pennant was or was not upheld this year, according to the way one looks at the result. The Cincinnati Reds made the adage stand up in the National League, but there is some dispute as to whether the Detroit Tigers upheld the precedent, not always infallible in the American.

The Cleveland Indians and Tigers, it will be recalled, played a doubleheader on Independence Day. Detroit won the first contest and, accordingly, was ahead by a percentage point or two, having played fewer games. Therefore, some argue, the Tigers did lead the American League on the Fourth of July, even though the Indians took the nightcap and the records show them to have been on the top rung after the doubleheader was completed.

As one supporter of the tradition points out, "the Fourth of July Goddess of Baseball Fate was not fickle—she was just undecided."

We kinda thought we'd get a rise out of Fred Craig, veteran sports editor of the Peterboro Examiner, relative to our comparing of Wicky Ross' scoring against Hillcrests in comparison to that of Roy Cherrett's effort. Fred says Cherrett raced from second home on an infield hit, that was cleanly fielded by the opposition second baseman. In rebuttal to our comments in comparing Ross' great run, Fred has this to say:

"And there is this too, Ken, although perhaps we shouldn't bring it up now. Cherrett's scoring was so cleancut that he was called safe by the Hamilton umpire and no one questioned the decision for a moment. On the other hand Duke Hennessey and other Hillcrest players still swear to this day that Ross was out by a city block on the play referred to by Mr. Colling. That will always be a subject of argument. However, this much is clear that if Hennessey who was catching for Hillcrests that day had not played the throw from the outfield badly and had not gone up in front of the plate to take the ball Ross would not have had a chance in the world to score as the throw was in there well ahead of the runner. Hennessey's mistake was all that made a safe decision possible."

By popular request Al (Bunny) Dunlop, the Toronto rubberman of the grunt and groan business, has been signed to meet George Pavich, the Greek villain more recently of Sudbury, here on Monday night. The wrestling patrons have been clamouring for Pavich's scalp, and if any person can take care of the unscrupulous Pavich, it's Dunlop. But wait a moment—that ain't all. On the same card Jerry Savold will meet the Masked Marvel and after last week's fracas when bedlam reigned supreme, this bout should prove tops, as Savold is a veteran of the grappling business and knows his ropes.

SPORT SPICE: See where Judd McAtee, star redheaded left-winger with Oshawa juniors last year, has made the jump with the Detroit Red Wings . . . Jack Adams says McAtee is a cinch to stick . . . Looks as though Connie Smythe and company were asleep at the switch once again . . . If the Argos entertain any chances of beating the Rough Riders in Ottawa tomorrow, which we doubt very much, they'd better commence to realize that Jimmy Follwell is as good a hoofer as there is in the business today . . . We wonder what happened to that proposed working agreement between the Maple Leafs and the Buffalo hockey team? . . . Little reference was made about the severing of relations between the two in the Hog Town rags . . . . Confidentially the Buffalo interests told Smythe to "go fly a kite" and they're on their own . . . It's easy to guess the reason why.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are you won't have to look very far if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk" in your diet. And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means the kind of food that isn't largely consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass which helps a bowel movement.

Millions of people prefer Kellogg's All-Bran, a ready-to-eat cereal, to keep them "regular." It supplies the "bulk" they need, plus the intestinal tonic vitamin B₁.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars!" Made by Kellogg in London, Can. Sold by every grocer in two convenient sizes.

Carry on Canada

The best service which we, on the home front, can render our country in the present emergency, is to carry on our normal ways of living, both at home and in business. This is a war of commerce and of nerves, no less than a war of arms, and the maintenance of business through normal living is vitally essential for three main reasons:

1. To assure food, clothing, shelter and a livelihood for those at home.
2. To provide the necessary sinews of war — money, as well as men and supplies.
3. To keep Canadian businesses ready to successfully resume the normal paths of peace, without depression, immediately hostilities cease.

We, in Canada, have not the daily fear of air raids, nor is there any danger of serious shortage of food or essential supplies. Nevertheless, unnecessary restrictions in our normal buying, or over-buying and hoarding, could disrupt industry as effectively as bombs and create a state of panic which would result in unemployment, increased prices and unnecessary hardships for all.

Let us adopt the policy "Business as Usual". Be NORMAL in thinking and action, in buying and in selling and so make Canada strong for war and stronger for final peace.

Jutland Hero is Supreme Head Of the Home Fleet

J. C. Tovey Given High Post, While Sir H. H. Harwood, Hero Of River Platte, is Assistant Chief of Naval Staff

London, Oct. 18 —(CP)— Great Britain made two changes in the Royal Navy command today which the London press regarded as highly important.

Vice-Admiral John C. Tovey, a destroyer expert and hero of Jutland, was appointed to the supreme command of the home fleet. The appointment generally was interpreted as a fore-runner of intensified sea warfare. The new job corresponds to that held by the late Earl Beatty in the First Great War.

Admiral Sir Henry H. Harwood, hero of the River Platte, was promoted to the post of Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty and Assistant Chief of Naval Staff.

Tovey Youngest Admiral

Vice-Admiral Tovey, at 55, is one of the youngest admirals in the navy. As commander of the destroyer Onslow in the battle of Jutland he attacked two German vessels, the second while his own craft was seriously damaged, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

First he engaged the German light cruiser Wiesbaden, giving her 58 rounds from his four-inch guns. Then, with his ship so disabled he could get only slow speed, he turned on the German capital ship Derfellinger with guns and torpedoes. After the battle the Onslow had to be towed by the British warship Defender.

Commanded Rodney

Vice-Admiral Tovey was commander of the battleship Rodney from 1932 to 1934. Then he became naval assistant to the second sea lord, commanded the navy barracus at Chatham, and later was put in charge of destroyers in the Mediterranean.

Sir Henry, who commanded the squadron of three light cruisers which shelled the Graf Spee into Montevideo harbor where she was scuttled, takes over his new office Dec. 2. He will co-operate with the first sea lord in implementing naval strategy and operations.

The appointment of "Jack" Tovey was treated as highly significant by London's morning papers.

Entered Navy at 13

Sir Charles Forbes, replaced by Vice-Admiral Tovey, entered the Navy at 13 as a cadet in the training ship Britannia. His rise in the Navy was attributed to natural ability, hard work and courageous conduct in action.

He won the Distinguished Service Order at the Battle of Jutland where he was fleet gunnery officer, serving in the late Earl Jellicoe's staff in the flagship Iron Duke.

In 1930 he was sent to the Mediterranean to command the fleet's destroyer flotillas. Last year he succeeded the late Sir Roger Backhouse as Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, when the latter was appointed First Sea Lord.

Woman Acquitted On Charge of Murdering Husband

Prince Albert, Sask., Oct. 18.—(CP) —A court of King's Bench jury last night acquitted Mrs. Isobel Emele, 39, of the murder of her husband, Henry Emele, 45-year-old farmer of the Cookson district, 55 miles northwest of Prince Albert. Emele was shot to death on his farm September 18, 1939.

Mrs. Emele's acquittal was the second on the same charge. After the first trial in February a new trial was ordered by the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal when the Crown appealed on grounds that the trial judge had failed to make an issue of statements given the police an excluded them from evidence.

Mr. Justice Donald McLean, before whom Mrs. Emele was tried the second time, allowed as evidence two of the statements to police in which the accused was alleged to have admitted shooting her husband.

Three Ships Being Prepared to Enter Wartime Service

New York, Oct. 17 (AP)—Three ships which sought refuge here from the dangers of sea conflict—including the prides of the British and Norwegian merchant marines—were being prepared today for wartime service.

The 85,000-ton liner Queen Elizabeth, largest and fastest ship in the world, apparently was scheduled to join her sister ship, the Queen Mary, and the Mauretania in troopship service between Australia and Egypt.

The 18,673-ton Oslofjord, Norway's largest and most lavish vessel, has been chartered to the British Ministry of shipping for troopship service, officials said.

This liner has been tied up in Bayonne, N.J., since Germany invaded Norway. Built in 1938, she was in the West Indies tourist trade.

Mystery surrounded the planned sailing of the French freighter San Francisco, 6,013 tons. Crew members said they had been ordered to sail the empty ship to Liverpool, England, on "a mercy mission."

French line officials said the "French Admiralty" ordered the ship to sail in a few days for an undisclosed port.

They said they did not know if the Vichy government or the De Gaulle "Free French" movement had issued the order.

The San Francisco took refuge here after the fall of France. She ran between Europe and San Francisco before the war.

Hong Kong, Oct. 18 (AP)— The headquarters of the Japanese south China fleet announced that Japanese naval aircraft today attacked Kunming, southwestern China terminus of the newly re-opened Burma Road. It was the first Japanese action connected with the road re-opening.

The Japanese said bombs were dropped on Chinese munitions factories in the suburbs and military establishments within the city.

Japanese planes dived at the city, capital of Yunnan Province, through gaps in heavy clouds and were opposed by any Chinese planes, it was stated.

Civilian Casualties In September 6,954 Killed 10,615 Seriously Injured

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Ministry of Home Security announced today that during the month of September 6,954 civilians were killed and 10,615 seriously injured in air raids on the United Kingdom.

The Ministry said classified returns, so far as received, were divided thus:-

2,210 women killed, 3,629 seriously injured.

Of the remaining 2,130 killed, 1,157 were males and 973 were females. Of the remaining 2,133 seriously injured, 1,231 were males and 902 females.

Prime Minister Churchill announced in the House of Commons Oct. 8 that British civilian casualties from the start of the war up to Oct. 5 were 8,500 killed and 13,000 injured.

PRINCE DONATES SPITFIRES

London, Oct. 188 —(CP)— Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production has thanked Prince Consort Bernhardt of The Netherlands for a cheque from the Netherlands East Indies for purchase of 40 Spitfire fighter planes and 18 bombers to be used by the Royal Air Force. The amount of the Indies contribution was not specified but the cost of that number of planes would run into millions of dollars.

SAYS 600,000
BRITONS UNEMPLOYED

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Daily Mirror, demanding "work for all" said today that 600,000 Britons still are unemployed, while air raid precautions workers "are inhumanly overworked."

The Daily Express, opposing that it called "a move to suppress unemployment figures," said "Miners are out of work and that is wrong and absurd and foolish."

"Clear up the rubble, open roads and repair permanent ones," The Express demanded.

SOVIET RUSSIA PATCHING FENCES SAYS J. STALIN

Joseph Stalin Turns People to Putting Russia in the Forefront

POPULATION GROWS

(By Henry Cassidy)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 18.— (AP)—Soviet Russia, which drove it outposts into six neighboring nations in less than a year, has turned to patching its fences at home.

The energy of this people, now numbering nearly 200,000,000 and covering one-sixth of the earth, has been concentrated by their leader, Joseph Stalin, on reform of the army, reorganization of the administration, speed-up of labor, and collection of crops.

The goal appears to be to put Russia in a position to meet any emergency during the decisive phases of the war.

Stalin's words—"we must keep our entire people in a state of mobilized preparedness in the face of danger of military attack"—are echoed repeatedly by the Soviet Press and speakers.

Russia's territorial expansion in the first year of the war, was attributed to need for strengthening of her defences.

The calendar of the Soviet push westward shows:—

September, 1939, the Red Army occupied Eastern Poland.

Soviet Frontiers Moved

Thus, the Soviet Union's population was increased by more than 23,000,000, bringing it up to 193,000,000.

Even more important, strategically, the Soviet frontiers were moved to a new line from the Danube River in the south to the Baltic Sea in the north.

Russia's territorial growth came to a halt, at least temporarily, in August, 1940, when Germany and Italy gave their guarantees of integrity to the remainder of Rumania.

Diplomatic sources said Germany notified Russia of the new Balkan set-up, in the normal course of diplomacy. Italy did not participate in this phase.

Russia accepted the situation. The Russian-Rumanian border, which had been agitated by frequent clashes, grew quiet, and the Soviet press reported the new Rumanian Government exiled King Carol because of his "provocative policy" toward Russia.

These dispatches amounted to a declaration that Russia had no further aims on Rumania, and implied approval of the new regime.

Pressure on Finland Lingers

Some evidences of Soviet pressure on Finland still linger. Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff warned, in his foreign policy report to the August supreme Soviet session, that relations with Finland "may be damaged." The press reported "oppression" of the Society for Friendship and Peace with the U.S.S.R. in Finland."

Relations with Turkey also have been strained, since the Turks were accused of planning with the British and French a possible air attack against the southern oil regions of Russia. But the Soviets named a new ambassador to Turkey early in September.

Strengthening of the home front has not been labelled as directed against any single power, although Germany, Russia's friend of only one year's standing, has grown with the war and established a long common frontier with Russia.

Complete Reorganization

Hitler told his Reichstag in July that Russia and Germany had defined clearly their spheres of interest, and that their relations remained good. Molotoff made a similar report to his supreme council.

The Red army, which faltered in the early stages of the campaign in Finland, came first.

The new defence commissar, Marshal Timoshenko, who succeeded Marshal Voroshiloff, undertook a complete reorganization, putting the "people's fighters" back on a basis resembling that of regular armies in other countries.

He created officers' ranks, introduced the salute, and strict discipline, eliminated political commissars and restored decorations running up to the gaudy Marshal's Star. Gen. K. A. Meretzkoff became Chief of the General Staff.

Even so, summer district manoeuvres showed all was not well. Marshal Timoshenko's own analysis complained of lack of training, impulsive advances without thorough scouting, too - stubborn defences without flexibility, and general lack of organization.

The war games concentrated then on preparedness of small units.

The Soviet Government itself came in for change with the creation of a commissariat of state control, holding power to oversee finances, work and production of all state organizations, from farm to ministries.

Midlands' Town, The Dock Area Principal Targets

Dwelling Houses Bear Brunt of Raid But Casualties Few

London, Oct. 18—(CP)—Invisible in the clouds over London, a number of raiding planes were heard this afternoon after sirens signalled the first alarm of the day.

The weather, clouds here and fog over the English Channel, had curtailed both British and German air operations.

During the night the enemy attacked with dozens of small groups of fighter-bombers. London, the Liverpool dock area and a town in the Midlands were the principal targets.

Dwelling houses bore the brunt of the damage, but first reports indicated that casualties were few, the Ministries of Air and Home Security announced.

The raiders came earlier in the night than previously and stayed overhead throughout, about eight operating at a time, in contrast to the former tactics of 100 or more planes in an opening rush, followed by small waves.

Four German and three British planes were destroyed in air battles over England yesterday, the government announced.

The Press Association said the raids against Liverpool and other Merseyside points during the night and early today represented one of the most widespread attacks for some time. It said, however, that the aerial campaign misfired somewhat, damage and casualties being slight.

The Association said a hospital and a school were hit while fire bombs were dropped in the grounds of another hospital and of a nursing home. A number of dwelling houses were demolished. A sanatorium also was struck, killing one patient.

Early raiders, it said, dropped showers of incendiary bombs in the hope of starting fires to guide subsequent raiders but efforts of firemen, police and wardens effectively countered the plan.

Rumanian Minister to Greece Recalled Without Explanation

Rumania's Economy Turned Into Channels Supplementing, Rather Than Competing With, German Industry

NEW DECREES

Bucharest, Rumania, Oct. 18 (AP). —Radu Ginvara, Rumanian Minister to Greece, has been recalled, it was announced without immediate explanation today, as the council of ministers adopted a series of decrees designed to turn Rumania's economy into channels supplementing, rather than competing with, German industry.

The withdrawal of Ginvara from Greece, against whom the axis is reported to have exerted pressure to discard her British guarantee, aroused great interest in diplomatic quarters.

Under one set of decrees Rumania's entire industrial system will be reorganized. All industries defined as "parasitic" will be closed immediately. The only industries to be encourage will be those making war supplies or using Rumanian raw materials.

It was reported that German specialists and experts are arriving daily to assume direction of munitions and airplane factories.

The Rumanian and German general staffs have decided to junk all guns, shells and other war materials Rumania has purchased in recent years from Great Britain and France, it was asserted.

This discarded equipment will be shipped to Germany and melted down and Rumania in return will receive German equipment.

Nazi Raiders Drop Leaflets Lampooning British Prime Minister

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—Germany has resumed leaflet raids on Britain, this time lampooning Prime Minister Churchill in pictures showing him with a "Tommy gun" and captioned: "Wanted for Incitement to Murder."

"This gangster who you see in coast said:—

"This angster who you see in his element in the picture incites you by his example to participate in a form of warfare in which women and children and ordinary civilians shall take leading parts.

"This absolutely criminal form of warfare, which is forbidden by the Hague convention, will be punished according to Military Law.

"Save at least your families from the horrors of war."

German Aircraft Which Attacked Canterbury Cathedral Blown to Pieces

Canterbury, England, Oct. 18—(CP)—One of the German aircraft which yesterday attacked the 700-year-old Canterbury deanery was blown to pieces in the air when machine-gun bullets from a Royal Air Force fighter hit its bomb rack, it was disclosed today.

Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury, said the "Explosion rocked the deanery like a ship in a rough sea."

It was disclosed yesterday that the deanery interior was damaged by three bombs which fell near the ancient cathedral, but failed to damage the cathedral itself. Members of the cathedral clergy, who had taken cover in the vaults, were not injured.

"Every bomb dropped this way, however, is a bomb wasted from the military point of view and antagonizes the Anglo - American world and the whole English speaking peoples," Dr. Hewlett said.

"I have never seen Canterbury people of every class and persuasion so united, and this is typical of the way people throughout the country are taking it."

About 20 high explosive and fire bombs fell on the town of Canterbury, about 40 miles from London. A dozen private homes were wrecked, one person was killed and a number were injured.

British Freighter Rams and Sinks 175-Foot Power Barge

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—Fred West, 26, of Wentworth, N.S., was missing today after the 4,034-ton British freighter Gypsum Express rammed and cut in two a 175-foot power barge, craft transport No. 2, in the East River.

West, Chief Engineer of the craft transport, was below decks at the time of the collision last night and apparently went down with the forward part of the barge, which sank almost immediately.

Six other men escaped from the barge.

Police were told the tide was so strong the freighter could not be manoeuvred to avoid the smaller craft.

PRIME MINISTER OPENS TOUR OF THE MARITIMES

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King Obtaining First - Hand View of War Effort

TO VISIT CAMPS

(By C. R. Blackburn)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Oct. 18.—(CP) —Prime Minister Mackenzie King, displaying the enthusiasm of a schoolboy, inspected a huge Royal Canadian Airforce base near here today and later told reporters that he was "amazed" at what he had seen.

The Prime Minister discarded all semblance of his dignified position as he crawled under, around and into every type of warplane. Then, his hair ruffled and his clothes mussed, he made this statement to the press:

"The work of construction here is admirable. was struck by the orderly appearance of the place. It is amazing, considering the fact that construction is still going on. You certainly would expect a good deal of confusion but there is none of that here. One is amazed that so much has been accomplished in so short a time.

"I am impressed by the note of vigor and the strength about it all."

The start of his two-day inspection tour of Canada's men and machinery of war was in sharp contrast to his duties at Ottawa and Mr. King enjoyed every minute of it.

Pays Respects to Lieut.-Governor

His first call was a visit to Government House to pay his respects to Lieut.-Gov. F. F. Mathers. He later went to the Legislature building to meet provincial officers and others.

It was in this historic structure that he met Rear Admiral F. L. Reichmuth, United States Naval Officer Commanding the U.S. Atlantic destroyers. "Our people," said the Prime Minister, to the American naval head, "have been very appreciative of your co-operation in turning over your over-age destroyers and when I say our people I speak as well for those across the water."

Referring to the fact that the destroyers were turned over so well equipped, Mr. King remarked "That was genuine hospitality."

Visited Air Command

The Prime Minister visited headquarters of the eastern air command in Halifax before crossing the harbor aboard an R.C.A.F. "duty boat."

His visit to the extensive airdrome was complete in both enjoyment and detail. The premier inspected every part of the field, examined the several types of planes and climaxed his tour by posing with two nurses for a newspaper picture.

After reviewing the men stationed at the base and taking the salute, Mr. King lunched in the officer's mess. He was escorted by Air Commodore N. R. Anderson.

This afternoon, the Prime Minister will return to Halifax and tour the coastal land defences with Major General C. F. Constantine, General Officer Commanding Military District No. 6.

'A Terrible Business' Says Queen, Gazing At Bombed Shelter

London, Oct. 18 —(CP)— "What a terrible business it is," said Queen Elizabeth, gazing at a scene of bomb destruction in London today.

The King, watching a busy demolition squad, philosophized, "at any rate, I am glad the work of clearing up is going on so well."

GERMANY SILENT

Berlin, Oct. 18—(AP)—"Nothing is known here" was the comment of Nazi spokesmen today when asked about London's announcement that a Nazi attempt to invade Britain had been thwarted Sept. 16.

HONG KONG ROUTE IS NOT YET OPEN

Re-opening of Crown Colony to Passage of Oil and Railway Material to China is Postponed Indefinitely

Hong Kong, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Re-opening of this Crown Colony to the passage of petroleum products and railway material to China has been postponed indefinitely, an official announcement said today.

Colonial Secretary N. L. Smith had announced yesterday that the Hong Kong route would be re-opened to these good at midnight last night simultaneously with the re-opening of the Burma Road, "back-door" supply route for Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese armies.

Hong Kong was closed to petroleum and railway supply shipments to China last January 1, and was closed to munitions shipments July 17, when the Burma Road was closed.

A communique said that the Colonial Secretary has based his announcement on his interpretation of a telegram received from London, but that he "now understands consideration is being given to the suggestion" that the Hong Kong closing was not limited by the three-month limit specified in the Burma Road agreement.

"Local restrictions not only on munitions but on other specified articles have not yet been removed and will not be until the result of diplomatic negotiations is known", the communique added.

Japanese Protest

Protests against the opening of the Hong Kong route have been filed by the Japanese at both Tokyo and Hong Kong.

The Tokyo Press had hinted that the re-opening of the Hong Kong route would be met with counter measures, and foreign circles had foreseen the possibility of a Japanese blockade.

Some foreign observers speculated that Japan might seek to nullify resumption of arms traffic over the Burma Road by a formal declaration of war against China.

Were the Hong Kong route to China re-opened, most of the traffic probably would be carried by Chinese junks to unguarded coastal points to the north and trans-shipped inland by caravans, rivercraft and trucks.

London, Oct. 18.—(CP)—Colonial Office sources said the decision is being made in London today whether to lift the ban on shipment from Hong Kong to China of gasoline, oil and other non-war materials.

The impression of informed observers, however, was that lifting of the ban would be "deferred indefinitely".

Admiralty Won't 'Play German Game'

New York, Oct. 16 (AP)—The German radio, in a broadcast heard here, said today it was reported from Algeciras, Spain, that the British battleship Barham had been taken into drydock at Gibraltar apparently suffering heavy damage.

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Admiralty said today that to comment on a German radio report from Algeciras, Spain, that the battleship Barham was "apparently heavily damaged and dry-docked at Gibraltar" would be "playing the German game," since they obviously only put out these reports to find out where the ship is."

Reduction of Liquor Prices to U. S. Tourists Under Consideration

Toronto, Oct 18 (CP)—Acting Premier Harry Nixon said today consideration had been given by the Ontario Liquor Control Board to a plan whereby United States tourists might be attracted to Ontario by a lower price on Government-sold whisky. Such a scheme would have the dual effect of increasing tourist business and the flow of American exchange.

Mr. Nixon said that to his knowledge details had not been worked out, but it was proposed between O.L.C.B. and Dominion authorities to eliminate customs and excise taxes on import whisky to American customers. This would reduce the price of best grades from around $6 to $2.

A danger, however, which would have to be guarded against was the re-sale of the whisky in this country. Unless some way were arranged that the tourist did not obtain the liquor until he reached home he would have a "fine chance of becoming a bootlegger."

(Officials of the National Revenue Department at Ottawa suggested the liquor might be kept in bond.)

PROCEEDINGS COMPLETED

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 18.—(CP)—Judge A. Constantineau, Ottawa, yesterday completed arbitration proceedings for settlement of the labor disputes at Courtaulds (Canada) Ltd., it was learned today. No decision has been announced. Judge Constantineau was appointed arbitrator by the Federal Minister of Labor with the consent of parties involved.

The War Today

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

British authorities today turned back part of the curtain surrounding the persistent rumors that Germany has lost thousands of men in an invasion attempt that failed by disclosing that on Sept. 16 the Royal Air Force forced the Nazis to abandon invasion ships "by the ferocity of their attacks."

It apparently was no coincidence that this vital action came within a few hours of the most severe German aerial thrust of the entire battle of Britain. All day Sept. 15 waves of hundreds of German bombers flew over Britain. The enemy lost 185 planes, the greatest total ever shot down in one day.

Today's disclosure said: "After German troops were loaded onto their ships preparatory to braving the Channel crossing, R.A.F. bombers sped over and made their departure impossible by the ferocity of their attacks."

The R.A.F. bombers must have gone in considerable force as the communique of that day reported war supplies, barges and shipping were pounded all along the invasion coast—Hamburg, Wilhelmshaven, Antwerp, Flushing, Ostend, Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne and Le Havre.

Persistent rumors say that Britain could announce an even greater success if she cared to. These, coming from travellers from Europe, have stated that troopships containing perhaps a total of 70,000 to 100,000 German soldiers have been sunk either out in the Channel or while practising landing operations on the French coast. But British officials in denying these rumors say they would be only too glad to be able to confirm them if they were correct.

News of this operation shared world headline space today with a new change in the British High Command.

The Home Fleet, the great naval force that guards the North Atlantic, protects convoys, patrols waters right up to the Arctic, and maintains an unceasing watch throughout the North Sea, received a new commander-in-chief.

The post went to Vice-Admiral John C. Tovey, an expert on small craft. He succeeds Admiral of the Fleet Sir Charles Forbes who bore the arduous duties at the head of the Home Fleet throughout the first year of the war, grappling with problems of the Norway campaign, submarine warfare and the invasion threat.

In bringing a younger man into a more prominent post, the government continued its policy already put into effect in the army and air force where the chiefs of the staff and several of the senior commands have been changed during the past few months.

Rear-Admiral Sir Henry Harwood continued this spectacular rise in the service since the Graf Spee battle a year ago gave him an opportunity which he seized brilliantly to display extraordinary ability as a naval tactician. Now he becomes assistant chief of naval staff, Sea Lord and Chief of Staff.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—Profits appealed to traders in today's stock market and prices turned irregularly lower. Steels and other recent climbers bore the brunt of forenoon selling which was active for a brief interval. Near the fourth hour, modest recoveries were in evidence. Aircrafts and specialties attracted buyers.

Among backward stocks were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Standard Oil of N.J., Consolidated Edison, American Smelting, Kennecott, DuPont and General Electric. Douglas Aircraft exhibited strength.

Active Canadian issues steadied. Gainers included Hiram Walker, Distillers Seagram, and Lake Shore Mines. Canada 4s, among bonds, rested unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 18—(CP) — Gold stocks continued their advance on Toronto Exchange today. Industrials also firmed slightly and Base Metal and Western Oils were off slightly. Trading was the heaviest in several weeks, 247,000 shares turning over.

Food, Utility and Building Stocks were up. Canadian Dredge advanced 3 points to 18 1-2. Dominion Stores at 6 1-2 set a new high price for the year.

The strong and active Gold share list included Preston, Aunor, Broulan, Chesterville, Senator, Pamour and Upper Canada. Base Metals recorded only minor changes.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Oct. 18 (CP).—Prices were unchanged at Barrie, Brantford and Hull, bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight — Barrie $11.85, Brantford $11.50 plus transportation, Hull $11.30.

Butter Higher, Egg Prices Firm

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Butter pushed a shade higher on the Toronto open produce market when sellers offered sparingly on reported strength at Montreal. Eggs maintained a strong tone.

Small offerings rather than any buying support firmed the butter market. Current receipts remained limited, storage stocks were not offered in any large volume. Buying was fair, but it was not general. This was indicated in the fact that the day's sales of Ontario No. 1 grade creamery solids were transacted on the basis of 27 3-4c a pound, while one source reported butter at 27 1-2c not being moved.

Scarce supplies and good demand were responsible for prevailing strong prices on top-grade eggs. Grade A-large and A-medium in the retail section advanced 1 cent a dozen as these grades in the graded division held frim at previous levels. Government inspected shipments of graded eggs commanded a premium of 1 cent.

Montreal Produce

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 42c; A-medium, 40c; A-pullets, 30c; B, 27c; C, 18 1-2c to 19c. Receipts: 3,230 cases.

British Parliament's Life Extended Year

London, Oct. 18 —(CP)— The life of the present parliament will be extended for one year under the terms of a bill announced today. The measure was introduced in the House of Commons yesterday by Prime Minister Churchill. The present parliament was elected Nov. 14, 1935, and five years would be its maximum life normally.

OWE LIVES TO INCENDIARY BOMB

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—Two hundred homeless Londoners in the crowded east end owed their lives indirectly today to a German incendiary bomb which recently set fire to the roof of a school where they were being sheltered. Authorities refused them readmission pending building repairs and last night a heavy bomb hit the structure, demolishing it.

OFFERS PROOF

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—A touch of grim humor crept into an Air Ministry bulletin tonight.

"It will be observed," the bulletin said, "that the German high command communique admits the loss of only two aircraft (in Wednesday's raids on England.) The four German aircraft destroyed are to be found near Harwich, Bishops Stortford, Denby and Frome."

'Mac' MacDonald Will Open Newstand And Tobacco Shop

The opening under the new proprietorship is scheduled for Saturday, October 18, and the shop has been completely redecorated for the occasion. New shelves and cases have been installed and it is the intention of Mr. MacDonald to carry a full line of tobacco as well as smoking accessories. Candy, soft drinks and ice cream will be included in the stock, while a complete line of magazines, periodicals and newspapers will be offered for sale. The new shop will be known as "Mac's Cigar Store."

Mr. MacDonald is well known in Belleville claiming this as his birthplace and he has lived in the city all his life. His former business ventures have included the operation of two Imperial Oil service stations in the city which he ran for a number of years. For the past three years he has been employed at Boyce's Garage as auto-painter.

Mr. MacDonald's many friends wish him the best of success in his new venture.

Taking Applications For New Constabulary

An auxiliary to the Ontario Provincial Police to be known as the "Ontario Volunteer Constabulary", was announced by District Inspector Frank Gardner of O.P.P. Headquarters No. 8 at Belleville today.

Persons desirous of serving in this voluntary police service, must be over 35 years of age and be prepared to serve without pay and also be in a position to purchase their own uniforms, at a cost of $68.00. Information regarding applications and other details may be obtained from District O.P.P. headquarters here.

The authorized strength of the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary will be in the neighborhood of 1,000 members. The new force will be directly under the Provincial Police for the purpose of the prevention of crime and the maintenance of internal security. Enrollment of persons willing to serve is now in progress. A period of light foot drill, physical culture and lectures on general police work and legal authority will be the principal objects of the force in an effort to supplement the present policing of the province in case of subversive or sabotage outbreaks.

SEVEN CONVICTS

which runs between Ile Jesus and Montreal Island, paid little attention to the strike but the antics of the convicts attracted motorists passing through the town. Later, guards closed off a highway which passed close to the prison walls.

Guards armed with revolvers walked about the village, ordering strangers to "keep moving."

The prison authorities, reported to have strengthened the guard force, were keeping in touch with Ottawa officials.

ANOTHER NAZI LIE

London, Oct. 18 (CP)—Vernon Bartlett, News Chronicle commentator and member of parliament, said in his column today that one of the stranger statements of the German radio of the last few days is to the effect Foreign Embassies and Legations have urged the British government to move the Foreign Office from the 'London inferno'."

"No such request as far as I can discover has been received from any diplomatic mission in this city," Mr. Bartlett added.

GERMAN TROOPS

If the Germans attempted invasion on dates other than Sept. 16, the aviation sources said, the fact that it did not develop "can only be attributed to repeated performances of a similar nature by the R.A.F."

These quarters kept close silence on details of the Sept. 16 engagement. Their silence left only the R.A.F. communique for that day to hint the place or places of the asserted German defeat.

They would not comment on the number of German casualties.

No British Planes Lost.

The invasion attempt was crushed without loss of a British plane. The R.A.F. communique covering that day said that all the attackers returned safely.

The German High Command's communique, issued Sept. 17 but covering Sept. 16, offers no denial of any such R.A.F. offensive action.

"Yesterday and last night the enemy attempted no attacks on German territory," it said. But it did not mention German-held territory.

The R.A.F. communique of Sept. 16 and an Air Ministry News Service announcement of the succeeding day told in detail of a big-scale assault and of a reconnaissance to ascertain dispositions of "the German sea forces" the day after "harassing bombing action" and a channel gale which had scattered the Nazis' surface craft.

The two British announcements, in lieu of a more detailed account, offer the best picture of the attack credited with smashing the invasion attempt.

During the night of Sept. 15-16 the R.A.F. bombed Berlin and "further heavy attacks were made on concentrations of war supplies, barges and shipping at the dockyards and ports of Hamburg, Wilhelmshaven, Antwerp, Flushing, Ostend Dunkerque, Calais and Boulogne," the communique said.

"Other forces of R.A.F. bombers attacked distribution centres at Hamm, Osnabruck, Soest and Kresfeld. Goods yards at Hamburg and the railway junction at Rheime were also bombed.

Direct Hit Made On Warship.

"A direct hit was made on an enemy warship off Tershelling (an island off the Netherlands coast). An oil tanker and a supply ship in the Elbe estuary (northwest Germany) were severely damaged. "Aircraft of the coastal command sank an enemy supply ship of Ijmuiden (the Netherlands). Convoys off the Dutch coast were also attacked. Two supply ships were sunk and others severely damaged.

"Attacks were also made on the shipping and docks at Le Havre where ships alongside the quays and the quays themselves were repeatedly hit.

Starting at dawn on Sept. 17 British reconnaissance planes combed the German-held coastline of the channel area for signs of any German invasion fleet, the Air Ministry News Service said.

"Searches on a large scale had been organized overnight to ascertain sudden changes in the dispositions of the German sea forces," the News Service went on.

Changes Imposed On Enemy.

"These changes were imposed on the enemy after a day of harassing bombing action and in consequence of the strong westerly wind which swept the channel through the night.

"It blew with gale force in exposed places where the German surface craft had been last sighted. Most of the channel was very rough and, as was expected, the enemy ships and small craft had scattered and scurried to seek shelter.

"Their positions were quickly located today by the coastal command . . . today the coastal command aircraft gave escort to many large convoys of merchant vessels and there was not a single enemy attempt at molestation by air or sea."

The day of the now reported invasion smashing was marked by a German announcement that Goering personally scouted London the night of Sept. 15 at the controls of a Junkers plane and by a new German shelling of Dover which injured eleven persons.

• • •

Several persons arriving in New York from Europe recently have told of seeing bodies of German soldiers washed ashore at French channel ports.

There have been repeated reports that invasion had been attempted.

A highly-placed government official of a conquered nation, who asked that his identity be withheld, said when he arrived Sept. 20 that German officers had told him practice manoeuvres for invasion had cost the Germans 10,000 men.

Letters Received On Matter.

Nine days earlier, the New York Sun said letters had been received in New York by French residents indicating that the Nazis already had attempted to land forces in England.

These letters, the Sun said, related disastrous results for the German thrust but gave few details. Some said that the German invading fleet put out from St. Malo with the west coast of England as the goal.

One letter, said by the newspaper to have been written by a French official acting in liaison with the German army of occupation, said that German officers were happy in Paris and that they especially hoped they would "not be chosen to participate in another disastrous attempt to disembark troops in England."

"Practiced Invasion."

From other sources in New York came later stories of "practised invasion" having been made on the French invasion coast.

On Sept. 20, Capt. Carl Ter Weele, 37, a former Netherlands artillery captain, told on his arrival from Europe that Nazi troops under training for invasion were rebelling. Columns of mutineers were marched back to labor camps, their hands trussed behind their backs, he said.

Passengers in the American export liner Exeter on which the Netherlands officer said that morale of the German army had slumped perceptibly because of severe losses in life suffered in practice manoeuvres looking to the invasion of Britain. They said British naval craft had blasted ships and barges which Germany had put into the English Channel for "exercise manoeuvres".

British Spokesmen Refused To Comment.

On Sept. 24, informed British military spokesmen in London refused to comment on dispatches from the French-Spanish border, published in the London Daily Mail, that Germany lost "between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops" in a disaster of Sept. 16, when a channel gale scattered Hitler's "invasion fleet".

Neutral military sources in London were inclined to discount the report.

The assertions were made by Harold Cardozo, a special correspondent on the French-Spanish border. His story, in full, said:

"Hitler lost between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops in a disaster which scattered his invasion fleet a week ago today, it is learned here. They were victims of channel storms and merciless R.A.F. bombardment.

"Because the German troops had already suffered heavy losses from British bombings, the Nazi high command decided to make new dispositions.

Thousands of Barges.

"The invasion fleet, consisting of thousands of barges and small vessels, was taken out of the ports and moored along the lonely Flanders coasts.

"Most of the vessels carried their full complement of troops since the keynote of the Nazi plan has been readiness for instant action.

"Sunday (Sept. 15) saw the fleet ready for the cross-channel dash, but the terrific beating meted out to Nazi planes (185 were shot down in battles over Britain) held up the order to sail.

"Then on Monday, southwest gales swept the channel. The Flanders coast is notoriously dangerous at this season. It became a death trap. The German tugs tried desperately to get the barges to safety, but scores of them were overturned, drowning thousands of soldiers.

"Convoys of barges and tugs were moved to safe waters—to meet renewed bombing raids and more gales.

"They are still reorganizing."

SEVERAL

Aluminum Works Closed.

At Bitterfeld large aluminum works "were closed for some weeks after a heavy raid", it said, and in the Rhineland, "the Westphalia Electric Works have been so badly damaged that it will be some time before they come into full operation again."

At Bremen the output of the Duetz motorcar factory "has been greatly reduced by bombs" and at Wismar "one hangar was completely gutted and all aircraft inside destroyed."

Among other examples of the R.A.F.'s effectiveness was cited the case of a tanker which "had to postpone its visit to Stettin (seaport for Berlin) as the petrol load it was to have shipped was not available."

From the same source the service learned that "on the night of Oct. 2 a large ship, fully loaded with grain, received a direct hit, caught fire and still was burning two days later."

Moored Barges Struck.

On the Dortmund-Ems Canal, the News Service reported, there are two fresh bomb craters on the east embankment while in the harbor loading installations and barges moored nearby have "all been damaged".

Some railway passengers report they have "had to change more than a dozen times on what was previously a straightforward trip and even then there were long delays outside some of the stations," the News Service added.

"From these reports and from others now received it is clear that the Fuehrer, by expressing a wish that all signs of bombing should be removed as quickly as possible, has set his workmen a difficult task. It is unlikely to be carried out to his full satisfaction."

Letters From the Troops

Sept. 26, 1940.

Dear "Pick"—

The last time I saw you I was in Quebec City. On the 28th of May we went to Camp Borden. While I was there I worked in the Quartermaster stores; real good job. On the 22nd of August we left there and started on our journey eastward. We arrived in Halifax at noon on the 24th and went aboard the boat. It was a Scotch boat named the Oronsay. There were six boats and three destroyers in the convoy. One day we saw a lifeboat and cordwood drifting by so I imagine some boat had been hit.

The first few days I was over here I went out on parade. Now I have a job in the battalion record room. I was transferred to Headquarters Company and later put on the staff. It is a soft job but even if I don't fire a rifle, I'll be doing my part. Someone has to do it so why not yours truly.

Sorry I can't tell you the name of the place, Pick, but I really like it. There are several small towns near here and a fellow can go there once in a while. Some guys run it down but what can you expect when there is a war on? I met Jimmy Cronin last night. He is one of the Belleville boys who served in the last war. Norm, my oldest brother and Jimmy were in France together in 1916. Do you remember Darky Thompson? He is a Corporal now.

The food is not too bad but there is a certain amount of guys who complain. For supper we had hamburg steak, fried potatoes, carrots, rice pudding, bread and margarine and tea. The margarine gets the gang down but me why I just don't know the difference between butter and margarine. I ate it for five meals before I knew what it was. Honestly Pick, I thought it was butter.

It's near bedtime so I will close and remain

Your Pal,
DOUG.

Climatic Factors Favor British

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Oct. 18 (AP)—Climatic factors at both ends of Great Britain's long battle line, from Britain to Egypt, are working in her favor as she braces to meet the winter strategy of her Axis foes.

In Western Europe chilly October rains, admittedly hampering aerial warfare for both sides, gave bomb-blasted London a period of relative peace Wednesday night, although the Germans returned to the attack later.

In Egypt the rains have come. During the next two months it is not too little but too much water that is apt to complicate Italian hopes of cracking the British blockade at the Suez gateway. Moving mechanized war machines over soggy ground is perhaps a more difficult business than military operations in mid-day temperatures above the 120-degree mark. It may be that, having waited this long to wave his army in Egypt on toward Alexandria, Mussolini will have to wait until the rainy season ends there.

Moreover, the weather and the Royal Air Force have virtually ruined Hitler's chances of invading Britain this year. Even Indian summer is almost over in Western Europe and the war there is settling down for a winter horror of bomb terrors and starvation possibilities.

Nazi airmen today went back to mass daylight bombing tactics. Their daylight reception, however, again emphasized that it is in the dark, not in daylight, that the air bomber can do his greatest damage.

That invites speculation as to which side will have the best weather to aid it during the winter of bombing for which both Britain and Germany are preparing. The answer seems to be in Britain's favor.

Weather experts say that the atmosphere high over Germany probably will have a relatively low moisture content. The upper air strata over Britain, on the contrary, is heavy with moisture in winter, as it is through most of the rest of the year.

Moisture-laden upper air is dangerous for aircraft. It leads to icing of wings and upper surfaces. Ice conditions at the upper levels could be a better protection in winter for London and most of England than guns, or even British fighter planes. On that account, many a night of virtual cessation of Nazi air attack may lie ahead for the Britishers.

But if the weather experts read their signs aright, Berliners or other Germans will not enjoy as frequent spells of rest from Royal Air Force bombers.

TURKISH RADIO

Axis diplomatic activity, meanwhile, was reported from Athens by the official Turkish radio, which said Premier-Dictator John Metaxas of Greece had received the German and Italian Ministers yesterday. There was no hint of the subject of their talk.

Conferences in Moscow

(In Moscow the German Ambassador, Count Friederich Werner Von Der Schulenburg, newly returned from Berlin, last night visited the Kremlin, where he was understood to have conferred with Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff. The Turkish Ambassador to Moscow, Haidar Aktay, conferred with Molotoff Tuesday.)

The Turkish radio warned the Axis powers last night that if they attempted a drive across the Dardanelles to Egypt and the Suez they would find Turkey a tougher nut to crack than the Netherlands, Belgium or France.

The commentator recalled the resistance the Turks offered the British in the Dardanelles in the last war and added:—

Warning to Germany and Italy

"There is no doubt our resistance this time will be even stronger. Just as we depend on our army, so our terrain also has a special advantage for us. For instance motorized troops can only move with difficulty here—and the Axis powers want a short war, not a long one."

The radio accused Germany and Italy of seeking to conquer Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece and said the Axis powers had warned Greece to reject Britain's guarantee of aid in certain conditions of attack or "she will be made to regret it."

(Reports from Bucharest quoted German circles as saying that 150 Nazi planes accompanied by 800 pilots, mechanics, crewmen and instructors were expected to arrive in Rumania today to augment a force of 150 planes already there.

NO PRICE REDUCTION

Leicester, England (CP)—Cheaper leather will not mean cheaper footwear. Increase in labor costs and in the prices of other raw materials has offset the fall in the price of hides and skins.

Used first as a tricycle by a small child, an Oklahoma inventor's vehicle can be converted into a bicycle as a child grows.

WAR GAMES BEGIN

Signallers From Barriefield

Troops from Barriefield camp, near Kingston, and others from Ottawa and Montreal will take part in the manoeuvres. Barriefield is sending a detachment of signallers to join the artillery at Ottawa. The Governor General's Foot Guards, an infantry battalion, also will join the eastward-advancing force there.

The Victoria Rifles of Canada and the 3rd Motorcycle Regiment from Montreal will join the force at Lachute. Then the whole body of troops will manoeuvre along the north shore of the Ottawa River, to locate what the planners of the exercise call a "skeleton enemy".

The "skeleton" will be one of Canada's most famous cavalry regiments, the Royal Canadian Dragoons from St. Johns, Que., now using motorcycles and armoured cars instead of horses.

Head for Home Monday

After billeting overnight at Lachute the whole formation, including the "enemy", will move into Montreal for a huge parade. Monday morning the troops from Petawawa, Ottawa, and Barriefield will head for home, spending Monday night in Prescott and Brockville.

Military officials say the war games are not in the form of a sham battle, since they are a one-sided operation with all the power on one side. They are intended to train troops in march discipline, orderly movement of motorized units, mobility in attack, and field operation. There will also be scope for practice in reconnaissance by motorcycle units.

Movement Begins

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 18—(CP)—The tactical scheme in which 5,000 Canadian Active Service Force troops from Military Districts No. 3 and 4 are taking part got under way at an early hour this morning when Petawawa units left their camp for Ottawa. The detachment from the signal centre at Barriefield camp left later in the morning and will join the Petawawa troops at Ottawa.

Lt.-Col. Leroy Grant, General Staff Officer of Military District No. 3 who left for Ottawa shortly after noon, said everything possible was being done for the comfort of the men. With arrival of the cold weather orders were issued that each man be supplied with three warm blankets and one ground sheet. Two hot meals, breakfast and dinner, will be served daily. The noon meal will be carried in the men's haversack. Two ambulances, manned by experienced officers and men, will accompany the troops to look after their health.

Speed of Movement

Instructions have been given that the ambulance and survey units which left Petawawa early this morning are permitted to travel at a rate of 20 miles per hour, but the artillery vehicles, which include the guns, must not move more than 15 miles per hour.

The motor vehicles will be refueled at the following places: Renfrew, Arnprior, Ottawa, Lachute, Montreal, Quebec-Ontario boundary, Cornwall, Prescott, Brockville, Carlton Place and Renfrew if the need arises. A 900 gallon gas tank is to follow the parade throughout.

Some of the artillery units from Petawawa will be housed in the Craig Street Armory, Montreal, while the rest of the troops will be billeted in the Armouries in and about Fletcher Field, where all the motorized equipment will be parked during their stay in Montreal.

Games End Sunday at 3 O'Clock

The tactical scheme, which will be carried out in the Lachute, Que., district will stop at three o'clock Sunday afternoon. The troops will then proceed to the Mount Royal race track and the King's Park race track, Montreal, and will form up to parade through the streets of Montreal, commencing at 3.30 p.m.

The number of soldiers taking part in the parade are: Petawawa troops, 1,875; vehicles, 285; guns 46 and motorcycles 38. Signals, 62 men and 14 vehicles; Governor-General's Foot Guards, 835 men, 47 vehicles; R.C.A.M.C., 65 men, 4 vehicles; Montreal soldiers will number 1,100; officers, Petawawa 122; Signals 12; Foot Guards, 35 and medical units.

Little Benny's Note Book

In school today Miss Kitty was telling us about the spirit of sacrifice being one of the greatest things in the world, saying, Now I wonder if you all understand exactly what is meant by the spirit of sacrifice?

Wich Lucky Leroy Shooster waved his hand, saying, The spirit of sacrifice is when you do something against your will just to oblige somebody els.

It's when you cheerfully give something up for the good of others, and there never was a time in the world's history that offered more shining examples of self sacrifice than right at the present with wars and invasions sweeping over half the globe and the other half preparing for the worst, Miss Kitty said. And yet it isn't necessary to have a war in order to call fourth the spirit of self sacrifice, because ordinerry people in ordinerry times are constantly giving examples of it in their daily deeds and actions, and I'm sure that some of you can recall times when even you yourselves have sacrificed your own intrist for the good of others. Perhaps somebody can even give me an example. Well, Charlie? she said.

Meaning Puds Simkins waving his hand, and Puds said, One time alt dinner there was one piece of huckelberry pie left, and I could of had it by just reaching, only somebody made me realize I already had 3 pieces, so I sacrificed it for the good of my digestion.

Well that's hardly equivalent to the good of others, Miss Kitty said, and Raymin Levy waved his hand, saying, One time I had ten cents and I was going to buy ice cream with it, and then I decided a moving picture would last longer, and finely I didn't do either and sacrificed them both for the good of my mother by buying candied pineapple with it because my mother always wants me to eat fruit and be healthy.

Oh such a class, we'll go on to the spelling lesson, Miss Kitty said. Wich we did.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Willkie Wants More Aid Sent To Great Britain

St. Louis, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie yesterday called production "the only road to peace" and said "we must produce more and more and more" in order to reinforce Great Britain.

He declared in an address that he agreed with "many of the basic international objectives of this Administration at the present time". But he asserted the Administration has contributed to war rather than to peace by failing to view production as the American role in world affairs.

"War is not the road to peace", he said. "Appeasement is not the road to peace. Production is the road to peace—and the only road to peace."

Describing Britain as "the rim of freedom far out beyond our shores", the Republican Presidential nominee, said the United States could not send an expeditionary force over there because "we have no such force."

"We are not helping the way we ought to help, the way we must help", he said, "if we are not to be left utterly alone in this bloody and barbarous world. . . .

"We must produce more and more and more. We must produce airplanes. We must produce hundreds of other things."

In that connection, Willkie said in a statement earlier in the day that the present "is no time for the third-termers to play politics" with deliveries of war equipment to Great Britain.

Saying he had read reports that shipments to Great Britain were awaiting President Roosevelt's approval, the nominee added that he had read no denials.

"I have said before that I favor aiding Britain at some sacrifice to our own defense program," he said yesterday, "but I want to point out here, that it is a sacrifice, and that it is the New Deal's fault.

"In the history of the world there has never been such a huge production job as that which lies ahead of us. It surpasses what we attempted in the last war.

"America has contributed to make the crisis in the world today, And the men responsible for that fact are the men of the third-term party, who are now seeking re-election on the international issue".

The candidate declared "We can say with the utmost confidence, standing here in the centre of America, we do not want to send our boys over there again. We can not and we must not undertake to maintain by arms the peace of Europe.

"But, my fellow-Americans, these broad oceans are not supposed to be barriers. They ought to be broad blue highways of commerce and trade".

On Nov. 5, the nominee said, Americans should elect "a Government that will make peace a reality; a Government that will get things done to make them strong; a Government that can turn to any dictator and say:

" 'This is America, and it is all on hand'."

AT THE BELLE

"Lucky Partners"

Making their debut as co-starring team, Ronald Coleman and Ginger Rogers participate in a sparkling set of movie adventures in "Lucky Partners," which provide an exhilarating lift for the soul such as movie-goers haven't experienced in a long while. "Lucky Partners" scheduled as the next attraction at the Belle theatre comes as one of the season's smartest and more delightful laugh hits. With its settings in New York's Greenwich village, at a Niagara Falls hotel and in a little upstate town, it projects Ronald Colman in the role of a mysterious village artist and Ginger Rogers as a book store clerk who is engaged to a smug and selfish dim-wit. A chance occurrence leads Ginger to consider Colman a talisman of luck, and she persuades him to join her in the purchase of a sweepstakes ticket, whose winnings she seeks in order to marry.

Colman recognises in Ginger's prospective husband a complacent, arm-chair mate, and he makes an odd stipulation—should they win, Ginger must accompany him on a strictly platonic honeymoon before she marries (for the fiance doesn't believe in wasting money on honeymoons!) And Colman even succeeds in gaining an agreement to his rash proposal from the bridegroom-to-be! The ticket draws a horse, and through a pre-race sale prudently engineered by the fiance, Colman and Ginger acquire $6,000 and embark on their pseudo-nuptial trip.

At the Niagara Falls honeymoon hotel, Colman registers Miss Rogers as his sister, but the romantic atmosphere of the place and Colman's growing regard for his lovely companion begin to play havoc with the platonic basis on which they began. Aware of the situation, Colman decides to slip away quickly and return to New York, for his own past is clouded, and he doesn't dare propose marriage to Miss Rogers.

What happens thereafter, with the blundering would-be groom coming into the picture; Colman's arrest on a charge of stealing Miss Rogers' car, and the ensuing trial that discloses Colman's real identity, make for an uproarious ending to this distinctive piece of screen entertainment.

Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers have opportunities that enable them to display their versatility to the full. They are supported by a notable cast, numbering Jack Carson, who has appeared in several previous Rogers vehicles, as the luckless fiance; Spring Byington as Miss Rogers' fluttery aunt; Cecilia Loftus and Brandon Tynan as an elderly married pair; Harry Davenport as a temperamental jurist; and Hugh O'Connell as a hotel clerk.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Scatterbrain"

Don't let anything stop you! See this year's funniest laugh riot, a real treat for everybody who wants to just laugh and enjoy themselves. Land of the Ozarks in a musicalossal of mirth and merriment entitled "Scatterbrain." Others in the all-fun cast include Alan Mowbray, (the tailor in "The Boys from Syracuse"), Billy Gilbert, Wallace Ford, Ruth Donnelly, Cal Shrum's gang and Matty Malneck and his orchestra. Also now playing at the McCarthy is John Wayne in "The Man from Monterey," an action-filled adventure story of old California, making the program a double-header of hilarious fun and adventure from the first scene until the finale.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Ranger and the Lady"

"The Ranger and the Lady"—a combination which spells box office "oomph" — opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre with Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes and Jacqueline Wells, and proves beyond all doubt Republic Studio's place at the top of the roster of action western producers.

Roy Rogers, who was launched directly into stardom a couple of years ago in an epoch making picture called "Under Western Stars," has progressed steadily ever since and qualifies for a spot very close to the pinnacle held by Gene Autry. In "The Ranger and the Lady" he demonstrates his remarkable ability to maintain a "he-man" appeal and at the same time please his feminine fans who demand romance with their action.

George "Gabby" Hayes and Si Jenks have several very amusing sequences in which the two old gaffers, as friendly enemies, vie with each other in spinning tall tales of their exploits in the "good old days."

Among the supporting players who add their bits to the general success of the film are Jacqueline Wells, Henry Brandon, Harry Woods, Ted Mapes and Noble Johnson, who as "El Lobo" out-Karloffs Boris Karloff.

The second feature, "Mickey the Kid" will give you thrills galore and heart-warming emotion. It is the story of a small boy who is faced with the necessity of choosing between his gangster-father and the right way of living. Little Tommy Ryan plays the title role and shares top billing in the picture with Bruce Cabot and Ralph Byrd. June Storey, Jessie Ralph and Zasu Pitts head the excellent supporting cast.

The Universal News Reel and the second chapter of our new thrilling serial "Tim Tyler's Luck" complete this entertaining program.

JEWS FORBIDDEN

and from the Colonial administration.

Unofficial estimates placed the number of Jewish citizens of France and the colonies at slightly more than 400,000. Estimates of the number of foreign Jews in France were slightly higher.

The only exceptions made to the rulings of the Petain-Laval government were for Jews who were decorated either in the wars of 1914 or 1939 or for Jews who have "rendered distinguished services" in literary, artistic or scientific work.

The Government also promulgated a decree giving local prefects the right to confine any foreign Jew to concentration camps to be set up in each department or to fix the places of residence, similar to the central European Ghettos.

Not Permitted to Move

More severe measures already have been taken in Paris by German authorities. The activities of Jews there have been strictly limited, even in commerce, and they are not permitted to pass from the unoccupied to the occupied zone.

The new French measures forbid Jews to head any company subsidized by or holding public funds.

One concession to the Jews was permission to work in the liberal professions. But recent measures aimed at newly naturalized Jews forbade anyone working in the medical or legal professions if their parents are not French citizens.

The statutes give Jews who fall in the newly-established categories two months to leave their positions. Retirement pensions and compensation according to length of service are to be granted.

A commission set up under the orders of the Minister of the Interior was charged with the organization and administration of prison camps for foreign Jews.

BERLIN CLAIMS

a shore battery fired on the submarine and then German dive bombers attacked.

"Strong detonations were heard and boat wreckage was brought to the surface, so it is assumed the submarine was destroyed," said the communique.

(A similar claim was advanced by the Germans yesterday.)

"As published previously, German speedboats last night sank two armed enemy merchantmen and two enemy tankers totalling 33,000 tons.

"A submarine under Gt.-Cmdr. Bleichrodt, who previously reported partial results on its last exploit, sank a total of 42,000 tons of enemy shipping. With that Bleichrodt has destroyed a total of 93,862 tons.

(There was no comment from the British Admiralty on any of these enemy naval claims.)

"Light fighting units renewed their assault on the British capital and militarily important points in southeast England. Despite bad weather conditions important objectives were destroyed in east London, at a rail station, Exford, Victoria docks, as well as sections of the city north of the Thames.

"Several airfights developed in which our chasers were victorious.

"Marine artillery fire forced back enemy speedboats which tried to approach the Flanders coast. Convoys in Dover harbor came under effective fire of our Marine artillery.

"In the night, again strong rolling attacks were directed against industries and dock facilities in London, as well as Liverpool and Birmingham.

"Mining of British harbors was taken in stride. British planes did not enter Reich territory yesterday. In yesterday's air fights the enemy lost 17 planes. Seven German planes are missing."

(The British Air Ministry put German losses over Britain yesterday at four planes. Three British machines were lost.)

ESCAPE WITH MINOR INJURIES

Halifax, Oct. 18 (CP)—Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force escaped with minor injuries when their coastal reconnaissance plane was forced down near a Halifax County Beach, it was reported today. The plane was damaged. Cause of the forced landing, last Tuesday, was not announced and the names of the crew not disclosed.

N. H. L. Training Camp Notes

(By the Canadian Press)

The "Joe College" of the Toronto Maple Leaf Club is defenceman Wally Stanowski, who specializes in bow-ties and wide-brim hats. The St. Boniface, Man., streak claims his ties this year are an inch wider and two inches longer than usual. And those hats, why they're almost as wide as the goal-mouth.

One of the best conditioned players with Toronto Maple Leafs at this early date in the training period at St. Catharines, Ont., is Reg Hamilton. This hard-luck defenceman who ran into a stretch of injuries last season, reported in tip-top shape. He and Jack Church form one of the best defence pair in the Toronto camp.

Join the army and put on weight. Defenceman Cliff Goupille of Montreal Canadiens says that he worked himself down to a snappy 185 pounds doing heavy chores on his farm during the summer. Then he spent three weeks in training with the N.P.A.M. at Farnham, Que., reporting immediately afterwards to Canadiens' camp at St. Hyacinthe, Que. Goupille ate so heartily at camp that he put on an extra 15 pounds.

Officials of Montreal Canadiens are greatly satisfied with the showing of Johnny Quilty, an Ottawa amateur, in the workouts. They say that Quilty has been the most impressive of a really fine batch of amateur recruits like Ken Reardon, of Edmonton, Conny Tudin of Lachine, Que., Joe Benoit of Trail, B.C., Tony Graboski of last season's Sydney Millionaires, and Elmer Lach of Moose Jaw, Sask.

Tracy Shaw, who coaches the Oshawa junior teams, must be a pretty proud man. Of his last season's Canadian junior champions, Jud McAtee has signed a pro contract with Detroit Red Wings while Frank Eddolls, Bud Hellyer, and Dick Knott are in camp with Toronto Maple Leafs. And then there's always Billy Taylor the centre ice flash who stepped in with the Leafs last season from Oshawa.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"More like April than December today," Audrey Swan remarked to his family as he pushed his chair back from the lunch table. "I believe I'm getting a bit of the spring fever."

"I know I am," Audrey admitted. She stretched her arms. "Yes, I'm aware that's unladylike, Mom, but it feels good. You don't suppose I have growing pains, do you?"

"I'd hardly think so," Martha retorted. "You've been moping around and reading too much. A little work might be good for you."

"That's an idea, even if it doesn't sound so good. Dad, have you any jobs that are crying out to be done?"

"There are two or three horses that would be none the worse for a spot of work, if you feel like it."

"Any particular victims?"

"Any that you want to jog around the ring. If you're wishing for something more strenuous there's that roan of Bardsley's. Don't be woolgathering if you ride him. He'll stand a deal of watching. Tricky."

"Maybe I'll do that little thing after a bit. Are you going to be around the place this afternoon?"

"No. I'm leaving shortly with the truck. I've a car of feed in town and I want to get it out here. I'm taking Jim and Robert with me. You can manage your saddling, I dare say."

An hour later, wearing a windbreaker and her oldest jodhpurs, she was leading the big roan gelding from the lower stable. "No tricks, now!" she warned, getting a firm hold of the reins and her boot in the stirrup. As she vaulted to her seat, the roan jumped sidewise with a twisting motion that brought him no satisfaction, only a smart touch from Audrey's crop. "Tough, what?" she bantered "Go on now and don't pull the smart stuff."

Apparently her mount decided to comply, and she took him around the circuit several times at varying speeds. Recalling that her father had complimented the roan upon his willingness to jump in good form, Audrey decided to test him. She trotted him into the ring enclosure where the bars were erected and put him swiftly at the first set—the same one where Olive Castle had her spill, she recalled, after the start was made.

It was a beautiful jump and made an attractive picture. Audrey's slim body in perfect rhythm, with flowing muscles under her, face tense with excitement, curls whipped by the wind. The sight roused the admiration of an unnoticed audience, a lone horseman who shrilled an enthusiastic, "Yip . . . pee . . ee!"

Audrey reined in and sent a startled glance over her shoulder. For an instant she failed to recognize the rider trotting up. A man in a sweater with a cap pulled low on his face. "Jeff! Hiya!" And her nose quivered.

She was conscious of that, strange to say. Thinking that it hadn't done it for a long time. Victor would have said something about it. Jeff never had. All this before the latter's horse had covered the stretch of dried sod between them. "'Scuse my glove," she bubbled happily. "No, don't excuse anything but my excitement! Am I glad to see you!"

"Same here." Jeff still held the small gloved hand in a close grasp, looked steadfastly into the smiling hazel eyes. "It's good to see you, Cygie!"

She pulled her hand away hastily. "Wherever did you come from?" she demanded.

"The big town. We arrived yesterday and I ran down for a few hours to see the folks. And you," he added quickly. "Father is away until tomorrow and mother is in bed recovering from the shock. Thought I'd have a little ride for myself and I spied you from afar off. Where did you get that nag?"

"He belongs to Doctor Bardsley. Dad's fixing him up in the fine points. Nice, isn't he?"

"He's there with the looks and action. Same as his rider. Seeing you're all saddled, Cygie, how about a little ride to celebrate? It isn't in the least cold."

"No, it's a gorgeous day. I'd love to. Where shall we go?"

"Well, if we're going to stay mounted, that cut out the old trysting place under the willow." If he saw a sudden shadow cross Audrey's face he gave no sign. "How about the Ridge? That's next best in my memory."

"Splendid. We'll ride slow and talk fast." Audrey had a sudden feeling that she wished to keep control of this situation. She could not have told why.

Jeff seemed to have little to say save answers to Audrey's eager questions. Try as she might, she could not banish a feeling that Jeff wasn't so glad to get back after all. It might be that the storm Vic had spoken of was already clouding Jeff's usually exuberant spirits. He seemed changed, looked older. She was trying to think of some cheerfully safe topic to introduce when he startled her by remarking: "I suppose you haven't seen Father lately." It was more nearly a statement than a question.

"No. Not in quite a while. I don't believe that I have talked with him since the night of the dinner. Why?"

"Just wondering how he is these days, that's all."

"Well, you'll find out tomorrow. Didn't you say he'd be here then?"

"Yes. And I wish I didn't have to face him."

"Why do you say that, Jeff?"

"I think you know. Well, it's come to a showdown at last. I can't stall an longer. I was a fool to try it. Tomorrow I'll have the very pleasant job of telling the old gentleman that I'm ducking back to the city to stay. My wife won't live anywhere else and my father-in-law has come across with a job for me. It's a good story. But it won't help me here."

"That's a pity."

Jeff looked around sharply. He could not be sure from Audrey's quiet tone whether the words were spoken in regret or in censure. And her face told him nothing. Apparently she was staring at her horse's ears.

"It's one of those things," he offered grimly. "The sooner it's over with, the better. I suppose you think it's funny, Cygie, that I should come barging over here with my troubles. You've always been an understanding kid. From the time I used to take you on my knee and recite Mother Goose to you."

"What in the world!"

"Didn't I? Seems as if I did. Funny thing how woozy your brain gets after about so much banging your head against the wall. Riding over here a while ago I flushed a flock of birds of some sort. First thing I knew I was saying, 'Sing a song of six-pence'. You remember, don't you, the part:

'The queen was in her counting house
Counting out her money.
The king was in the parlor
Eating bread and honey.'

That's me, if ever."

"It's not!" Audrey exclaimed hotly. "You're saying it backwards, anyway! Look here, Jeff. I never knew you to run out on anybody. If you run out on yourself, I'll . . . I'll hate you so long as I live!" She checked herself, then said very calmly: "All right, what was the other reason? Or did you say there was another? We may as well mop this up."

"And everything," Jeff conceded bitterly. "Yes, there's another reason, Cygie. I had to come because . . . I'll never be coming back. Not in the old way."

"I should hope you didn't expect to. Quite."

"No. But you know what I mean. I could always talk things over with you, swear a little if I had to. There never has been anybody else like that in my life and I don't suppose there ever will be."

During the remainder of the ride, Audrey resolutely steered the conversation away from Jeff's homecoming and its attending disaster. When Jeff went away this time he would pass pretty definitely out of the Parville scene.

On their return from the Ridge they came out of a side road near Briar Creek, between the two home places. "Jeff," Audrey said suddenly, "you don't need to go back with me. You'll probably want to spend all the time you can with your mother. But thanks a lot for coming . . . and the ride."

"Yes," she answered steadily.

"O.K." His hand came out. "In case . . ."

"Sure. Best of luck, Jeff. Always." The surprised roan felt his head wrenched to the right as the crop flicked him smartly on the flank. He bounded forward and settled into a swinging gallop. Jeff was right, Audrey was thinking. He never would be coming back any more.

Dust, or something, was making her eyes smart.

FORMER BELLEVILLE YOUTH CELEBRATES NUPTIAL RITES

He was enamoured of a beautiful local girl. Unhappily, she had no use for such a dull, uninspiring mate—and told him so. Among other things, she said that he just didn't shine.

One day, gazing moodily at his boots, where his heart was, he suddenly leapt up shouting "Eureka" and dashed out to the nearest store. That evening he was round at the young lady's house with a dozen roses and a shine in his eyes that rivalled the shine on his shoes he'd acquired with Nugget Shoe Polish. The rest, of course, was plain sailing. Let this be a shining example to all young men in love.—Adv.

HARPER ROLLINS PRESIDENT OF S. S. WORKERS

Religious Education Council of This Group Meets in Stirling

SUPPER SERVED

Stirling, Oct. 18 (Special)—Sunday School workers from all parts of Rawdon and Marmora Townships gathered at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Wednesday, October 16th, for the annual convention of the district council for Sunday School and Religious Education. Interdenominational in scope the council sponsored by the joint effort of the committees on Religious Education in local presbyteries and deaneries of the United Church of Canada, Presbyterian Church in Canada and the Church of England. All above mentioned churches maintain constant interest in its functioning and each contribute diligent workers and directing officers to the necessary Boards set up for administration purposes.

Afternoon Session

The opening session which began at two o'clock in the afternoon commenced with an impressive devotional period under the direction of Rev. A. M. Laverty, B.A., B.D., of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling. This consisted of the use of several appropriate hymns, prayer by the presiding minister and Scripture lesson read from the 10th chapter of St. John's Gospel. Mr. Carl Clancy, president of the council, addressed the gathering and expressed his personal gratitude for the manner in which all members and assisting officers had co-operated during 1940. The department superintendent in their individual reports would reveal the progress of the year, he declared.

Giving a detailed report of the past year each of the department superintendents reported progress in their particular phase of the work and reports were received in the following order: Children's Work, Mrs. Keith Armstrong, Marmora; Boys' Work, Rev. A. W. Harding, Springbrook; Girls' Work, Miss Bessie McMullen, Springbrook; Young People's Work, Mr. Donald Williams, Stirling; Adult Division, Mr. Carmen Sine; Home Department, Mrs. Jason Baker; Leadership Training, Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher, Marmora; Missionary, Mrs. Arthur Brown; Temperance, Mrs. E. Sarles, Stirling.

At this point a statistical report and roll call was directed by Mr. Fred Elgie, Secretary-Treasurer. Group discussions were organized and led in discussion of many vital and interesting questions regarding the work by Miss Harriett Christie, Provincial Representative of the Religious Education Council. The appointment of Committee took place and the session closed with prayer by Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling. Committees met previous to the supper hour.

Supper Served by St. Paul's Ladies

In order to permit delegates to remain for the evening session the ladies of St. Paul's United Church served supper in the church parlours and a social period greatly enjoyed occupied the two hour recess between sessions.

Evening Session

With President Carl Clancy as chairman the evening session opened with singing of the National Anthem and an impressive worship period was conducted by Rev. C. L. Harding, rector of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling. Rev. Harding spoke briefly on the importance of "Obedience". This we must have in every stage of life, in the home, school, in the Church. We must be obedient in the home to our parents and as we grow older to the laws of man and most important of all, to the laws of God, he declared, basing his address on the scriptural passage previously read from Luke 2.52. This was followed with the use of another hymn. An excellent musical contribution to the meeting was a baritone solo by Wm. Reynolds, soloist of St. Paul's United Church with Mr. G. L. Clute presiding at the organ. Rev. W. H. V. Walker reported for the resolutions committee which included expressions of thanks to the Session and Board of the Convention Church, the ladies for the supper and the retiring officers for the splendid work of the past year.

Address by Miss Harriett Christie

The guest speaker for the evening session was Miss Harriett Christie, Provincial representative of the Religious Education Council, who gave a brilliant address on the subject "Youth and Its Responsibility in This World Today." Miss Christie compared the church of today to one sleeping in a miner's cottage "sleeping over a gold mine." Fifteen thousand Canadian Youth go out from the church and Sunday School each year and no record of further service to the God and church is available."

Election of Officers

As the meeting progressed the nominating committee presented its report and the following slate of officers accepted for the coming year along with the department superintendents also listed below.

Hon. Presidents—Mr. Jack Baker, Bonarlaw; Mrs. Wm. Johnston, Harold.

President—Mr. Harper Rollins, Stirling, Ont.

Vice-President—Mr. Geo. Watson R.R. 2, Harold, Ont.

Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. Fred Elgie, Stirling.

First 800,000 To Be in Army By June 15th

Washington, Oct. 18—(AP)—The United States' War Department plans to have the first 800,000 selective service trainees in the army by June 15.

The program, announced by Henry Stimson, Secretary of War, means that one man in every 20 of the 16,654,000 who registered Wednesday probably will be called up for military service within the next eight months.

Stimson also disclosed yesterday that the remaining units of the National Guard, numbering some 130,000 men, will be ordered up for duty by February. Approximately 96,000 guardsmen already have been mobilized and are undergoing training.

Stimson said that adequate housing facilities will be available for all men induced into service. By Dec. 15, he said, most of the cantonments and other projects now under construction will be completed. The camps are expected to accommodate about 1,400,000 troops.

Outlining plans for the first 800,000 trainees, Stimson said the initial contingent of 30,000 will be summoned Nov. 18. The schedule thereafter: Dec. 2, 60,000; Jan. 3, 60,000; Jan. 15, 90,000; Feb. 10, 160,000; March 5, 200,000 and June 15, 200,000.

50,000 German Casualties Caused By RAF at Cherbourg

London, Oct. 18 CP)—German losses at Cherbourg as a result of Royal Air Force raids are estimated at between 40,000 and 50,000 wounded, according to a despatch from Madrid to the Daily Express.

The despatch said its source of information was neutral observers reaching Madrid, and added that "almost every civil and military hospital from the Belgian to the Spanish frontier has been requisitioned."

Reliable sources in London said it was impossible to estimate the casualties, but remarked: "Of course, the R.A.F. has been pounding military objectives in the invasion ports heavily, including the bombing of troop trains."

R. A. F. Still Strong Says Soviet Paper

Moscow, Oct. 18 (CP-Reuters).—The Russian Army newspaper, Red Star, commenting on the Battle of Britain, said today that "present actions show that air supremacy belongs to neither side", and added that the Royal Air Force "has not been 'downed' and has even extended the field of its operations."

"Despite the successful experience in destroying grounded planes in France and Poland by surprise attacks, the Germans seem unable to repeat these successes in England, owing to lack of information about locations of fields and airdromes, and excellent road systems enabling the British to use camouflaged field airdromes and well-protected hangars," the Soviet newspaper said.

"Therefore in their most successful attacks the Germans have only succeeded in wiping out 43 British grounded planes in a day, compared with 300 or 400 a day in France."

Red Star estimated there were at least 100 aviation plants in Britain, and said the Germans must drop 20,000 bombs to wipe out the industry.

"Actually between Aug. 10 and Sept. 25 the Germans dropped 23,000 tons of bombs over the whole of England, and, though serious damage was done, the British aviation industry on the whole is continuing its activities."

The newspaper said that serious damage has been done to London, but that "the powers of resistance of this gigantic city are great, and the city continues to carry on its industrial and Governmental functions.

AXIS DRIVE TO EAST APPEARS AIMED AT GREECE

'Severe Icing Conditions' Hampers R.A.F. Bombing in Germany

Program Devised to Feed People in Air Shelters

Territorial, Governmental And Economic Concessions Demanded by Axis, Report

Berlin Denies Story But Rome Papers Hint Demands on Greece and Turkey Might be Imminent—Greece Stands As One of Great Britain's Two Remaining Friends in Balkans

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 19 (AP).—The axis drives to the east appeared aimed directly at Greece today as diplomatic circles reported Italian-German pressure on Athens for territorial, governmental and economic concessions.

Greek diplomatic sources in Cairo said they had learned from Athens that the axis powers were demanding cessions of Greek territory to Italy and Bulgaria, reorganization of her government, severance of trade relations with Great Britain and the right to use certain Greek air bases.

(Berlin denied the demands had been made. Diplomatic sources in Rome regarded the Cairo reports as "at least premature", but the Fascist weekly, Relationi Internationali, hinted demands on Greece and also on Turkey might be imminent.)

Axis Demands Outlined.

Specifically, the Cairo sources said the axis demands called for:

1. Immediate severance of economic relations with Great Britain.
2. Cession to Italy of a strip of territory adjacent to the southeastern Albanian border and cession to Bulgaria of a corridor to the Aegean Sea.
3. Permission for Italy to construct a road fom Albania to Salonika, Greek port of the Aegean and so-called key to the south Balkans.
4. Use of certain Greek air bases by Germany and Italy.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Service Meteorologist

Climatology! The climate of a region has in the past been ascertained by averaging the various weather elements such as temperature, rainfall, wind, etc. Lately, however, the climatologists have been studying air masses; they are noting where the air comes from. Air masses from different source regions have distinctly different characteristics, which in turn affect agriculture and human activities differently It is important to take them into account as a better understanding of the effects of climatic factors can be reached by studying the frequency with which different types of air visit a place than by simply studying the averages of weather elements.

JAPANESE CLAIM BURMA ROAD IS HEAVILY BOMBED

CLAIM BRIDGES HIT

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (AP).—Direct bomb hits on bridges—the weak link in the reopened Burma road to China — were claimed today by Japanese fliers attempting to check the flow of supplies to Chinese General Chiang Kai-Shek.

Meanwhile Tokyo newspapers said the reopening of the route to central China from the south is "new evidence" of Anglo-American co-operation in an attempt to frustrate Japan.

The newspaper Kokumin said "we shall perhaps be forced to make a firm determination to fight both Britain and the United States". Miyako declared: "We believe the British now work under American domination."

Sale of Silk Hose Banned in U. K. After February 1st.

London, Oct. 19 (CP—London's West End stores were besieged today by women shoppers in a rush to buy the remaining stocks of silk stockings.

Sale of silk hose will be banned after February 1. Artifical silk may be worn, but all Britain's real silk stockings will be diverted to overseas trade.

Plenty of Used Cars For Public Use In Great Britain

London, Oct. 19.—(CP) — The manufacture of automobiles for civilian use in Britain has ceased, the Ministry of Transport announced today, with a total of only 400 new cars, half of them of foreign make, on hand for sale.

Before the war, about 275,000 new cars were registered annually.

The Ministry said plenty of used cars are available for public use.

Pilot of Spitfire Attacks First Of 40 Messerschmitts Single-Handed

London, Oct. 19 (CP).—The pilot of a Spitfire fighter told in a hospital today of a single-handed attack on forty German Messerschmitts in which he sent one invader down in flames and then was sent spinning to earth himself.

"I attacked the nearest one," he said, "and after two short bursts the enemy aircraft caught fire and the pilot opened his hood to jump.

"Just then my plane was struck by cannonfire and everything faded out. I vaguely remember pulling my plane out of its steep dive. Then I slid back the sliding portion of the cockpit and bailed out."

Official Greek Circles Deny Reports of Axis Demands

Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 18 (AP)—Reports of increasing Axis pressure on Greece were coupled today with the belief that Britain is waging a strong diplomatic campaign to prevent a German-sponsored mobilization of Bulgaria.

Balkan attention centred on the meeting of British diplomatic representatives at Istanbul and an unconfirmed rumor that Anthony Eden Secretary of State for War, might visit Turkey.

There was no confirmation of any ultimative Axis demands on Greece so far, as reported in Cairo, Egypt, although there was a possibility such demands had been widely considered. A broadcast of the official Turkish radio yesterday said that Greece had become the main target of Axis pressure in the Balkans.

Foreign observers believe the British conference at Istanbul will concern itself with possible ways and means of encouraging the Sofia Government to hold out against the Axis-desired mobilization. The meeting is attended by ministers accredited to the various Balkan countries and the British Ambassador to Turkey.

44,593 Tons Shipping Reported Lost in Week Ending Oct. 18

By The Canadian Press

Neutral sources in the week ending Oct. 18 reported the sinking due to war action of 14 merchant ships totalling 44,593 tons. The dates of the actual sinkings were not given in most cases, so it is possible that all were not sunk in the period under review.

A summary of sinkings reported during the week, as compiled by The Canadian Press, follows:—

Nationality	No. of Ships	Tonnage
Norwegian	3	9,859
British	3	9,726
Yugoslav	3	9,500
Swedish	2	7,960
Belgian	2	5,186
Finnish	1	2,362

The Admiralty's latest summary for the week ending Oct. 6, showed seven British, one neutral and two allied ships, with a total tonnage of 31,094, were sunk in that period, the lowest weekly total since May 6 and only a little more than half the average weekly loss since the war began.

Sparks from the chimney ignited the shingles on the roof. Mr. Embury was busy at the time picking apples at the orchard of Mr. Charles Morton. A motorist driving by saw the flames and notified Mr. Embury.

Mr. Charles Morton and his crew of thirty apple-pickers hastened to the scene and in a short time the flames were extinguished and the home was saved with only a small amount of damage.

London, Oct. 19 (CP)—The Royal Air Force flew through bad weather last night in bombing attacks on shipyards, factories and railway stations in Germany, the Air Ministry announced today.

"Severe icing conditions"—the air navigation hazard of ice forming on the wings of aircraft and throwing out the balance of the machine—prevailed during the night in addition to low clouds.

In one raid fires were started in the big aluminum factory at Lunen, in the Westphalian region of Prussia, while at Dortmund, a big industrial town in the same district, an unidentified factory was hit.

At the inland port of Duisberg, on the Rhine to the west of the heavy industry town of Essen, wharves were set on fire. Railroad facilities were attacked elsewhere in the Rhineland.

London, Oct. 19 (CP)—The Air Ministry issued the following communique Saturday:—

"Bad weather, low clouds and severe icing conditions hampered operations of our bomber aircraft last night

"Nevertheless, shipyards at Kiel and Hamburg were bombed and fires were started by attacks on aluminum works at Lunen, a factory at Dortmund and on wharves at the inland port of Duisberg.

"Railway and goods yards were attacked at Schwerte, Osnabruck, and Dortmund.

London, Oct. 19 (CP Cable) — The Daily Sketch, quoting "well-informed neutral sources," said today that "it is now estimated German troop casualties resulting from Royal Air Force raids total 200,000 men."

The Sketch, describing the R.A.F.'s defeat of Hitler's invasion plan, said: "It is known that the recent bombardment of Cherbourg, coming on top of fierce attacks by our air force, struck a serious blow to the morale of German troops. Casualties resulting from that bombardment alone are estimated at 40,000 and base hospitals in France are filled with wounded men."

BLUM, REYNAUD, MANDEL, CHARGED BY VICHY GOV'T.

TRIAL DATE UNKNOWN

Vichy, France, Oct. 19 (AP)—The Petain-Laval government today brought formal charges against former Premier Leon Blum; former Premier Paul Reynaud and Georges Mandel, former Minister of the Interior, in the "war guilt" trials at Riom.

Blum was charged with having betrayed his duties while prime minister, Reynaud with embezzlement of public funds, and Mandel with attacking the security of the state and speculation in national currency.

Others charged, like Blum, with betraying their duties were former Premier Edouard Daladier, former Air Ministers Pierre Cot and Guy La Chambre and Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin, former commander in chief.

All three of those charged today, in addition to Gamelin, have been confined in "administrative internment" at Chateau Chazeron. Whether they will be transferred to Bourrasol Manor, which has been set aside as a prison for those facing definite charges, has not been announced.

The date for the opening of the trial is still unspecified, but the government communique which announced the charges said investigations are continuing.

RELIEF SUPPLIES RUSHED TO AID FLOOD VICTIMS

200 Lives Lost in Regions of Barcelona and Gerona When River Ter Floods

BRIDGES SWEPT AWAY

Barcelona, Spain, Oct. 19 (AP).—Torrential rains in the eastern Pyrenees today further burdened flooding Spanish rivers whose known toll already had mounted to 133 dead and missing.

With telephone, highway and rail communications shattered throughout Barcelona and Gerona Provinces, it was believed the final total might pass the first estimate of 200 dead in the waters of the rampaging Ter river and its tributaries.

Rain which has fallen for three days continued to pelt down throughout the night and morning. The government rushed relief supplies into the area.

Rivers in the Lerida section and throughout Navarre also flooded as the rainfall drained swiftly off the mountains. In Torello, where 200 houses crumbled in twenty minutes, the toll of dead and missing climbed to 108. Two passengers drowned when a Barcelona train went through the collapsing bridge there —one of three trains derailed by floods. Many persons died in Torello when they returned to their

The four-day match closed last night with a banquet at nearby Port Stanley at which more than 1,000 farmers and ploughmen were present. The speech of the evening was given by Premier Hepburn. Conservative leader Col. George A. Drew and Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan also spoke.

Mr. Hepburn declared the expenditure of money should be no consideration in the war effort. "If

CHINESE SEE 'TURNING POINT'

Burma Road Reopening Causes Wave of Optimism in Church Circles

New York, Oct. 19 (CP).—James L. Stewart, Associated Press correspondent in Chungking, said in a broadcast last night from the war-time capital of China, that the Chinese view the re-opening of the Burma road as a "turning point" in the western democracies' attitude toward Japan.

Stewart said that the movement of 1,600 trucks with military supplies over the road "provided the signal for a wave of optimism sweeping government, military and civilian circles."

Political implications of the British decision are considered to overshadow the material benefits which may be anticipated through the importation of new stocks of gasoline, trucks, machinery, arms, ammunition and general war supplies, he said.

He read a message from Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Ch'Ung-Hui. The message said that reopening of the Burma road means that "hereafter Great Britain will adopt a firmer attitude toward Japanese encroachments on the general western interests in the Far East.

"It also means that co-operation will be maintained between Great Britain and America in their far eastern policies and parallel actions will be taken whenever occasion demands. It only remains now for Great Britain to take other measures to strengthen China's power of resistance."

Calgary Girl Torpedoed, Rescued And Bombed Again Before Arrival

Calgary, Oct. 19 (CP). — Mrs. Glennie Ditto, a Calgary girl, has safely reached Canada after being torpedoed at sea, rescued, and bombed on a second crossing of the Atlantic, according to word reaching her relatives in Calgary.

For 3½ hours Mrs. Ditto sat in water up to her knees in a lifeboat, holding her six-weeks-old son in her arms, awaiting rescue after the refugee ship Volendam was torpedoed 100 miles off Scotland Aug. 30.

Both she and her baby came through the ordeal and recovered after several days in a Glasgow Hospital. A tanker picked them up with others in the lifeboat.

On Sept. 19, Mrs. Ditto boarded another ship, and for the first 24 hours at sea, the vessel was attacked from the air every hour by German warplanes. However, not a bomb hit the ship and after escort vessels chased off the Nazis, the journey continued uneventfully.

Mrs. Ditto arrived in Montreal Sept. 28 and was met by her father-in-law, F. S. Ditto, Calgary.

Mrs. Ditto is now in Kingston, Ont., with her husband, Flt. Lt. William Ditto, Royal Air Force instructor at a Commonwealth Air Training School, her father said.

A Calgary boy, Flt. Lt. Ditto has been in the R.A.F. for three years and came back to Canada two months ago.

Raids Described As "Random" But Over a Wide Area

Nazi Planes Attack Singly or in Small Groups With Lulls Longer and Oftener Than Usual

London, Oct. 19 (CP).—London's defenders worked today to lessen the discomforts of life for millions of families who have been spending their nights and much of their days in air raid shelter with a program to feed them there, too.

Dr. J. J. Mallon, placed in charge of the feeding plan, said the first step would be to organize and stock canteens so that Londoners forced to spend an increasing amount of time in subways and basements could buy morning and evening meals there.

The capital credited a measure of relief from bombings by German airplanes last night to an autumnal ally—coastal fog and an inland cloud blanket.

A short burst of anti-aircraft fire at daybreak wound up London's 42nd night of attack, which observers termed intermittent and definitely lighter than usual.

The first daylight alarm was sounded during the afternoon. A single raider was reported to have dropped bombs on a midlands town and machine-gunned workmen. No casualties were reported.

Attack In Small Groups.

The planes which came over during the night attacked single or in small groups, with lulls longer and oftener than usual between raids.

Three members of the Royal Air Force and a member of the R.A.F. Women's Auxiliary were among six killed in one section of the city. In another, four air raid wardens were injured seriously when a bomb hit their station. An undetermined number of persons was buried by a bomb which smashed a tavern. Five bodies and seven injured were removed from another tavern. An elementary school, a workman's club, shops and homes were wrecked.

Casualties Not Heavy

The communique said the London casualties were no as heavy as on recent nights.

The Midlands took the next most severe blows. Three persons were killed by a bomb hit on a house in one industrial town. Another family was rescued from the wreckage of their home. Many fires were started and some industrial premises were reported damaged.

Liverpool and the Merseyside Shipping district were attacked and there were some houses smashed and some casualties. There were casualties, too, in attacks on south-eastern England. The loss of life was reported small, however.

War workers in a southeast England factory were told last night by Arthur Greenwood, Minister without Portfolio, that "what has been done to London will be doubled to Berlin". He added that western Germany and the Ruhr Valley already have been bombed "far more heavily than any place in this country".

3,000 TROOPS RUMBLE TOWARD SCENE OF ACTION

Leave Ottawa in Trucks and on Motorcycles for "Sham Battle"

RALSTON ON HAND

Ottawa Contingent Will Join Other Units at Lachute, Quebec

Ottawa, Oct. 19 (CP—In the cold grey dawn today some 3000 men of the Canadian Active Service Force rumbled out of Ottawa in their trucks and motorcycles towards a scene of action.

They were troops of the artillery, infantry, signals, Army Service Corps and engineering unit taking part in week-end tactical exercises near Lachute.

While most Ottawa citizens slept, a middle-aged man in mufti turned up at Lansdowne Park to watch the soldiers move off. He was Defence Minister Ralston.

The civilian head of Canada's military forces was an unheralded spectator at the departure and for a time he was not recognized as officers bustled about and drivers warmed up their motors.

The first artillery unit moved off towards Lachute shortly after 7.00 a.m. E.D.T., and others followed quickly, the Governor-General's Footguards, infantry, leaving about 9 a.m., the last of the long column.

Many of the troops who came in yesterday from their camps at Petawawa and Barriefield were up before 5 a.m.

Proceeds Without Hitch

The business of eating breakfast, packing and loading food, cooking equipment and bedding proceeded without a hitch as the last of the troops moved off. The morning sunshine began to warm the chilly atmosphere.

SOLDIER HAS IN TOW A BLACK BEAR CUB

Front Street pedestrians stopped to stare at a novel pair that slowly strolled down the main thoroughfare this morning. The animal was probably a regimental mascot selected by its companion and was on its way to "headquarters."

A pleasant evening is in store for all lovers of music who attend the concert to be given in the Capitol Theatre, Sunday evening, October 20th, under the auspices of the members of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. at 8.30 o'clock. The object of the concert is to raise funds to purchase wool and comforts for the soldiers at home and overseas, also to send blankets and warm clothing to the sufferers in the bombed areas of England. The cause is certainly worthy of generous support and it is hoped that the silver collection which will be taken will be most liberal.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Band under the direction of Flt.-Lieut. T. F. Cooper, will present a program of excellent selections; the full membership of Christ Church boys' choir will assist and the vocal soloists will be Mrs. Hammond and Mr. Ken. McAdam. Mr. George Maybee, organist of Christ Church, will act as accompanist and Mr. Jamieson Bone will be the chairman. Children must be accompanied by their parents.

Following is the program which will be presented:

March—Washington Greys (Grafulla)
Overture—Martha (Flotow)

London Suite—Covent Garden (Eric Coates)

BABY OPERATED ON FOR APPENDICITIS

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 19 (AP) — It'll be a long time before Phillip Lewis Hanowitz can tell about his operation. The six-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hanowitz underwent an appendectomy last night. "Just a simple uncomplicated case of acute appendicitis," commented physicians who described the operation as unusual though not a rarity.

Toxoid Treatment Administered by Dr. Cronk, M. O. H.

Inoculations against diphtheria in city public schools were instituted this month, according to the report tendered the Board of Education as submitted by Miss E. A. Earshman, public school nurse, last night.

A total of 369 school pupils and 85 pre-school children have already received the first diphtheria toxoid treatment, as administered by the Medical Health Officer, Dr. G. S. Cronk, and recommended by the school nurse, making a total of 454 inoculations during the present school semester. The second toxoid will be administered in three weeks' time.

During the past month Miss Earshman has made 43 visits to schools, during which time 756 pupils were inspected. In the same period thorough classr[illegible] inspections numbered 120, while 24 physical inspections were completed. It was only necessary to have five exclusions from local schools during the month, all being for skin and head conditions. Miss Earshman's report received the unanimous endorsation of the Board.

RUSSELL WOTTEN NAMED CHAIRMAN FOR REST OF YEAR

Reg. Moncrieff, Chairman of Board of Education, Given Leave of Absence to Take War Position

MISS POTTER RESIGNS

Schools May Receive Record of Broadcast of Princess Elizabeth in London Last Sunday

F. R. Wotten, veteran member of the Belleville Board of Education, and former chairman, was named Chairman of the Board for the balance of 1940 last evening, when the Board met and granted leave of absence to Chairman Reg Moncrieff for the remainder of his term of office. Mr. Moncrieff sought leave from his position after being appointed to a position on the Explosion Division of the British Supply Board. The retiring Chairman was tendered the good wishes of the entire Board and Godspeed and a safe return from his responsible duties, which he accepted from the British Supply Board this week.

All accounts were received and adopted and general routine business constituted the meeting. The use of the Collegiate gymnasium was granted to the Girl Guides of the city for recreational purposes, classes to commence on Oct. 21st and continue until May 31st of 1941. The grant was made with restrictions to the use of the gymnasium only, however. The same privileges were extended to the school teachers of the city, who desired to use the 'gym' one night a week for badminton. Under the school management committee the auditorium of Queen Victoria School will be used by the delegates for the annual Teachers' Convention, to be held in this city Nov 7th and 8th.

Period of Worship Changed

A request of the Ministerial Association for permission to change the period of religious training from the last to the first period in the public schools was granted. "This is not only optional, but legal. We find the last period of the day interferes with the work of the individual clergyman," explained Rev. A. B. Payne, who is also a member of the Board. The request was granted.

The Advisory Vocational Committee moved that under the War Training Classes, welding tuition be opened as soon as possible with Mr. Harold Howard in charge as teacher. The Board thanked Mr. Moncrieff for the use of his personally owned piano, which has been loaned to the Board during his absence in war work. "We are indebted to Mr. Moncrieff for the use of his piano," assured Chairman R. Wotten. Accounts were passed, which included $568.40 from the Supply Committee, $1188.66 of the Finance Committee and $337.00 from the Vocational Committee.

The Board accepted with regret the resignation of Miss Helen Potter from the staff of Queen Alexandra School. "I think the Board should express its appreciation for Miss Potter's valuable services rendered during her 14 years of service and we should wish her well in her new life," suggested Rev. Payne and the motion was carried unanimously.

Medal Will Be Given

Under the heading of inquiries Charles Hyde wanted to know why the Board of Education medal for the pupil attaining the highest academic standing had not been awarded this year. "The Inspector did not acquaint the Board with the name of the winner," replied J. B. Findlay, secretary of the Board, as he assured the Board there was no knowledge of the winner's name provided.

"It was won by Barbara Bews, of Queen Alexandra School," revealed Mr. W. G. Anderson, principal of that school. The medal was ordered purchased and delivered.

Mr. H. B. Fetterly was named as delegate from the Board to represent Belleville at the annual Public Schools Trustees' Association meeting to be held in Toronto on Oct. 31st. "Any member can attend as a delegate if he so desires," added Mr. Fetterly.

Under the heading of motions Mr. Moncrieff asked if it would be possible to procure a recording of the recent broadcast made by Her Royal Highness, Princess Elizabeth. "I would like to see a recording of that broadcast in every school in the city," added Mr. Moncrieff. "Perhaps the same could be procured from the Canadian Broadcasting Company," suggested A. E. Geen. The secretary was instructed to ascertain if such recordings were available and the cost thereof. Rev. A. B. Payne moved, that F. R. Wotten be named as Chairman of the Board for the balance of the year in the absence of Mr. Moncrieff. The motion carried unanimously. The Public School Inspector's report was filed.

Radio

Principal P. C. MacLaurin's report brought some discussion relative to a radio, which had been installed in the Collegiate Auditorium this week. "I was one of a committee named to look into the advisability to install a radio in the Collegiate Auditorium if it was feasible, but I heard nothing of any further proceedings in the matter until tonight," stated Mr. Wotten in committee as a whole. "I move the matter be laid over until the appointed committee functions properly and that the radio be removed," added Rev. Payne. The motion carried unanimously.

New Timetable Adopted

In his report otherwise, Mr. MacLarin stated that a new school timetable had been adopted and the school hours lengthened 35 minutes in accordance to the Department of Education. The Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School now convenes at 8.45 a.m. and closes at 4.10 p.m., with one hour and fifteen minutes for the noon recess.

"Upwards to 400 boys and girls are taking up foot drill, physical reading and rifle practice," the report read. The night school enrolment is 360 at present, which was very gratifying, Mr. MacLaurin assured the Board. With the exception of the radio clause, the report was adopted.

The members present were Chairmen Moncrieff and Wotten, H. B. Fetterly, Dr. Kinnear, Rev. A. B. Payne, E. A. Geen and Chas. L. Hyde.

C.D.S. MANAGER, FRANK CORRELL, HURT IN CRASH

A. E. RAY ALSO HURT

Frank Correll, manager of the Canadian Department Stores in Belleville, sustained a fractured jaw, internal injuries and is in a serious condition in the Belleville General Hospital today as the result of a head-on motor crash one mile west of Marysville early last evening when Mr. Correll's automobile was in a collision with a light truck, being driven in the opposite direction by A. T. Flurrs of Napanee. A. E. Ray, a passenger in the Correll car sustained severe scalp wounds and was also admitted to hospital, as was Flurrs, who sustained a dislocated hip and facial lacerations.

The vehicles were travelling in opposite directions when they crashed head-on after rising over a small knoll on the highway. The fronts of the vehicles crashed with a heavy impact, Mr. Flurrs being found wedged inside the cab of his truck, which careened into the ditch. It was necessary to pry Mr. Flurr's body out from the wreckage. Mr. Correll's car crashed into the ditch and turned over.

Dr. Eckhardt of Deseronto, attended the injured men at the scene, following which they were rushed to the hospital by ambulance where Dr. R. A. Flynn took charge. All injured are resting comfortably today, however.

Motorcycle C. E. Siple investigated the accident but owing to the severity of the injuries sustained no statements were taken from the drivers regarding the crash. Both vehicles were badly wrecked necessitating tow trucks to excavate them and tow them away.

"Happy Gang" Wins Heart of Enthusiastic Crowd at Arena With Splendid Performance

Twenty-Three Hundred See Famous Radio Troupe "In Action"—A Variable Program In Typical Style Delights Large Audience

WEATHER COOL

If the "Happy Gang," famous troupe of Canadian radio entertainers, held a warm spot in the hearts of the Belleville section of their large air-wave audience prior to their personal appearance at the Hume Arena last night under the auspices of the Belleville Rotary Club, they can rest assured that they now hold a firm place in the minds of the 2,300 people who saw them for the first time.

The troupe lived up to all advance notices. They gave a sparkling show that scintillated with music mirth and comedy from the time Producer George Temple introduced his artists over the microphone until the majestic tones of the Hammond electric organ pealed forth the National Anthem at the conclusion of the performance two hours later.

The atmospheric conditions were anything but conducive to comfort in the large Arena, but the large crowd forgot their cool environment and sat back to enjoy one of the finest entertainments seen in this city in many a year. The troupe showed their versatility in their brilliant ad libbing with regard to the coolness, and at one time the scoring clock was pointed out as registering the Arena temperature as "zero."

No Dull Moments

There was not a dull moment. With all the skill and artistry of accomplished veteran radio artists, the "Gang" ran through their program as smoothly as though they were in the more familiar surroundings of a radio studio. They had performed the first half of their program almost before the large crowd had realized it, took five minutes intermission, then resumed for another hour's performance that made a delightful two-hour entertainment.

On the large forty foot stage placed at the south end of the Arena, and which was tastefully decorated by the clubmen, the various artists received a warm reception as they were introduced by producer. In order came Bob Farnham, whose versatility marked him as one of the outstanding artists of the troupe, youthful Eddie Allan, whose lyric tenor voice and accordeon artistry ranked him an instantaneous favorite, Hugh Bartlett, "The Goon," Blaine Mathie, violin virtuoso who mixed a splendid mastery of his instrument with delightful touches of comedy and Kathleen Stokes, organist par excellence, whose "Nola" culminated a brilliant effort on her favorite instrument. But last and by no means least, came Bert Pearl, master-of-ceremonies, and one of the pianists of the troupe, whose humorous patter, story - telling ability and stage appearance carried the show through on a wave of merriment all evening. His ability to take advantage of many funny situations due to the unexpected antics and witticisms of Bob Farnham added to the general enjoyment. Bert's colorful raiment which included many coats of different hues added to the color of a colorful show.

Program Varied

The program was as varied as it was delightful. Eddie Allen's fine voice led off with "I'll Never Smile Again" followed with "Till the Lights of London Shine Again." The young singer received rounds of applause after a fine performance. He appeared later with outstanding solos on his accordeon besides taking part in the many humorous skits that were part of the program.

Bob Farnham brought down the figurative house on several occasions with his clowning and artistic ability. His "Kiss Me Goodnight Sergt. Major" was a scream, as was his "grammatization" of a Front Street "drammer" with Hugh Bartlett.

Blaine Mathie, easily one of the most accomplished violinists to perform in these parts, was the more serious-minded member of the troupe, but his "Intermezzo" and an encore with organ accompaniment was one of the instrumental highlights of the show. Miss Stokes also showed her versatility by taking part in the skits. As has been before mentioned her solo "Nola" was a musical achievement in itself, and the artist well merited the acclaim given her.

In ensemble effects the "Gang" were outstanding. Their imitations of famous United States orchestras and artists was well received. The familiar strains of such outstanding bands as those of Rudy Vallee, Guy Lombardo, Shep. Fields and Clyde McCoy, the instrument of Jesse Crawford and the well-known crooning of Bing Crosby were heard in this part of the program. A humorous skit, "We're Working Our Way Through College" in which the "Gang" indulged in a burlesque football game, was a show in itself. "Friendship," from the New York hit, "DuBarry Was a Lady," was also mirth-provoking, as was "Fly, Birdie Fly" in which each member of the Gang took individual solos with a rollicking ensemble chorus following.

Bert Pearl's "Why Don't You Change it for a Boy," in which he described and acted the reactions of a small boy upon receipt of the news that he had a new baby sister, was a masterpiece of comedy.

Rounds of Applause

The culminating act of the show was that which the large audience had been waiting for. The entire troupe, gathered around microphones, gave the familiar British battle-song, "There'll Always be an England." The words were sung by Bert Pearl with the instruments of the troupe providing the familiar musical background. Mr. Temple injected Noel Coward's famous toast from "Cavalcade" during the second chorus. Arena resounded to the applause which followed the rendition of this popular number.

The "Gang" opened the show in typical radio style. The familiar "knock on the door" executed by Blaine Mathie on his violin and the "Who's there?" brought back radio memories to the large crowd.

Prior to the show President Percy McGuire of the Belleville Rotary Club expressed his appreciation of the response of the public in attending the show, and outlined the work for which the proceeds will be used.

Conditions at North Front St. Overhead Bridge Are Detailed In Brief to Transport Board

Board of Education Submits in Brief to be Presented at Meeting of Board Here That Its Immediate Concern is for Safety of School Children Attending King George School

Pointing out conditions which it is submitted confront school children attending King George School and who reside west and south of the North Front street overhead bridge, the Belleville Board of Education sanctioned a recommendation to the Board of Transport Commission for Canada at their monthly meeting held last night. The brief will be submitted by the board for consideration when the commission meets in Belleville next week.

Failing in its efforts to have an addition constructed at Queen Mary School to house the increased number of school pupils in Belleville, Board of Education is now seeking to insure the safety of those subteen aged pupils who are now forced to attend King George School and all other students who reside south of the North Front street overhead bridge and who must pass over the bridge and a provincial highway four times each school day to and from school.

"As we submit this brief to the Board of Transport Commission of Canada the most important question this board is taking into consideration is the safety of life and limb of the children attending King George School who must cross and recross Highway No. 14 four times daily to attend school," pointed out newly-appointed Board Chairman F. R. Wotten.

The committee named to present the recommendation brief will be composed of Rev. A. B. Payne (chairman), H. B. Fetterly, Frank Cushing and Mr. L. A. Kells (principal of King George School).

The brief, as prepared and recommended by the Board of Education, reads in full as follows:

The Brief

"While the Board of Education supports any movement for greater safety of vehicular traffic over the North Front Street bridge its immediate concern in the present application, is for the safety of the school children of Belleville who will attend King George School.

The Board of Education asks that the Board of Transport Commissions consider the welfare of these school children:

FIRSTLY—In the event that the ruling of the Board of Transport Commissions directs no change in the present structure.

SECONDLY—In the event that an order is made directing the construction of a new vehicular bridge.

Dealing first with the present conditions the Board of Education requests consideration of the following facts:

1. King George School is situated on the West side of North Front Street in the block running from Evans Street to the city limit at College Street, and lies north of the Canadian National Railway's right of way.

2. This school covers an area extending easterly and westerly from North Front Street.

3. There is no sidewalk for pedestrians now in place on the west side of the bridge and all children whose homes are on the west side of North Front Street, or in the area to the west thereof and south of the Canadian National's right of way, must cross North Front Street from west to east in order to pass over the bridge, on their way to school and also recross from east to west.

4. The total enrolment at King George School is 370 pupils whose average ages are from six to 14 years and of whom 123 live west of North Front Street or on the west side of that street and south of the Canadian National Railways.

5. These 123 pupils must therefore cross North Front Street four times daily five days of the week in order to pursue their studies.

6. The guard rail of the east side of the pedestrian sidewalk over the bridge consists of four pipe rails spaced 14 inches apart. Children will loiter on the Bridge and the Board of Education feels that a hazard is ever present for the children with this type of railing and suggests a close-woven wire fence should be affixed to the present railing.

7. The east girder of the bridge is low enough to permit children to climb to the top of it and the Board of Education suggests that a fence of heavy wiring be so constructed that children would be unable to walk on this girder.

8. The pedestrian approach from the north is undesirable. For a distance of approximately 150 feet the sidewalk borders the vehicular pavement and no protection is afforded the children or other pedestrians from falling or moving into the line of vehicular traffic at this point. It is suggested that the sidewalk on the East side of North Front Street, north of the bridge, could be carried much closer to the bridge before swinging westward onto the bridge.

9. The abrupt approaches to the bridge create a special hazard for those children who come eastward on Ridley Street to North Front Street. They are compelled to cross North Front Street at the south end of the bridge. Little opportunity is afforded motorists driving south over the bridge of avoiding children so crossing North Front Street.

Should a new bridge be ordered the Board of Education asks that special consideration be given to all factors affecting the safety of the school children.

On the other hand if the present structure is allowed to remain, the Board of Education asks—

A.—That a pedestrian sidewalk be constructed along the west side of the present bridge, nine brackets for same being now in position as they have been since the construction of the bridge.

B.—That proper approaches to the bridge be ordered for the pedestrian passages.

C.—That the present pedestrian approach from the north on the East side of North Front Street be diverted away from the vehicular approach as far as possible.

D.—That close-woven wire fencing be installed along both sides of pedestrian approaches and sidewalks on the bridge, so that children will be confined within same.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. B. FINDLAY,
Secretary-Treasurer
Board of Education,
Belleville, Ontario.

Police Blotter

In conjunction with Toronto police the Provincial Police of Belleville arrested Richard John Ewing, Toronto, and more recently employed in Belleville, and 17-year-old Thomas Van Zalkenburg, Thurlow Township, here yesterday. Ewing and Van Zalkenburg are being held on several charges of theft, including the theft of 700 pounds of seed grain from the farm of Mrs. George White, Thurlow, and the theft of a heifer calf, allegedly stolen near Melrose. Both are being held without bail, Sergeant H. E. Thompson of the O.P.P. revealed this morning.

Toronto police arrived in Belleville to investigate a $500 jewelry robbery in that city and sought the whereabouts of Ewing. In company with Sergeant Thompson Ewing and Van Zalkenburg were arrested following which investigations prompted the Provincial Police here to prefer the theft charges of the grain and calf. The jewelry in Toronto was said to have been stolen from a Mrs. Sarah Kirk, Markham St., some time ago. Ewing has been employed locally for some weeks. The pair were remanded to the custody of the Hastings County jail until next Thursday.

While investigating a motor accident on Highland Ave., shortly after midnight last night, Constables Thomson and Wright arrested Irving Kellar of Napanee on a charge of drunken driving. Kellar was remanded in custody also.

Kellar's automobile was in collision with a motor transport on Highland Ave. when the lighter vehicle is said by police to have sideswiped a truck driven by Glen Lotham of Brockville. Damage amounting to over $85 resulted to Mr. Kellar's car, police estimated after placing him under arrest.

City police today were busy investigating petty thieving, which included shoplifting. Juveniles were blamed and two teen-aged boys were taken to the police station for questioning.

QUEEN'S BROTHER SAYS BLOCKADE WILL REMAIN

"Must Remove Cancer of Nazism From Europe," Says Speaker

VICTORY SURE

London, Oct. 19.—(CP) — Hon. David Bowes-Lyon, brother of Queen Elizabeth, said in a broadcast address Friday that Britain will not lift the blockade on European countries conquered by Germany.

Mr. Bowes-Lyon, who is connected with the Ministry of Economic warfare, discussed the blockade on the British broadcasting corporation's "Britain Speaks" feature.

"If we allow food to be sent to those in the countries under German domination, it would only be used for the German war machine", he said.

Mr. Bowes-Lyon said Britain differs with persons who oppose the blockade only in her interpretation of the best method of helping Europe.

"We must attack the trouble at its source', he said. "We must remove the cancer of Nazism from Europe.

"Only a British victory can bring relief to Nazi-dominated countries. We must use every means, including the blockade, to accomplish this victory".

Mr. Bowes-Lyon said the Germans were telling the outside world that famine is threatening the population of the conquered countries this winter, and were using this propaganda in an attempt to have the blockade lifted. But the conquered countries had been well supplied with food before Germany occupied them. Now the food had fallen into German hands, as would any further supplies sent to the conquered nations.

He said lack of food is not the greatest misfortune to befall people in the occupied areas, because "Nazi rule is worse than mere malnutrition. It causes starvation of the mind."

A method for preserving small animals, insects, plants and other speciments in blocks of a crystal-clear resin has been developed by a Philadelphia scientist.

British Communique

London Oct. 19 (AP)—The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued the following communique Saturday:-

"The enemy made further attacks on this country by air during last night. These attacks, which began soon after darkness fell and continued until the early hours of this morning, were later resumed on a smaller scale. They were spread over a wide area, though London and the Midlands received particular attention.

"In the London area both high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped at random, damaging houses, shops and some industrial property. A number of persons were killed or injured, but according to reports so far received casualties are not as heavy as on recent nights.

"Bombs were also dropped in the Midlands and at one town damage was done to houses, shops and commerical buildings and a number of fires were started.

"Owing to the excellent work of the fire and other civil defence services these were soon brought under control.

"Elsewhere in the Midlands little damage was caused and the casualties in this area have not been heavy, though some persons were killed.

"Attacks were made in other districts, including Merseyside and several widely spread places in southeast England. In both these areas houses were damaged and a small number of people were killed and injured.

"Elsewhere there has been little damage and few casualties."

Rome Communique

Rome, Oct. 19 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communique Saturday:—

"In the Eastern Mediterranean our Air Force attacked English warships escorting an enemy convoy, hitting a 10,000-ton cruiser with bombs.

(There has been no word from British sources to substantiate this claim.)

"Enemy planes attacked airfields of Rhodes several times, killing one person and injuring two others and causing light damage to buildings but no damage to planes.

"In North Africa there was the usual activity by motorized columns and patrols. An enemy patrol which approached our outposts at El Waewa and El Rabia, south of Sidi Barrani, were put to flight by our fire.

"Our air formations bombed enemy military works and flying fields at Matruh, El Bada, Maaten, Bagush, Fuka and Bir Abu Smeit causing fires and visible damage. Other air formations attacked an enemy airfield, barracks and tent encampment at Siwa, bombing, scatter bombing and machine-gunning them and scoring direct hits on objectives.

"The enemy air force renewed the bombardment of Port Bengazi without causing casualties or damage. An air raid in the Halfaia zone injured four persons.

(An R.A.F. communique said that at Bengazi "direct hits were observed on two ships which were unloading at the quayside.")

"In East Africa an English plane which bombed Afmadu Oct. 2 was found partly destroyed.

"The enemy attacked our post at Doboi on the Kenya border with two columns of armored cars supported by planes Oct. 16. Cmpletely repulsed, the enemy left several whites dead on the field including the commander of one column. Three were wounded on our side.

"The enemy air force bombed Gondar, killing one native and injuring several, and also bombed Diredawa, injuring two persons, and bombed the Jibuti Railroad near Erer, Gura, Toselli, Decamere, Kassala, Gherille and Neghilli without casualties. Damage was slight."

Britain May Hurry Into Action Latest Type of Warplanes

London, Oct. 18 (AP)—The German Air Force's tactics of using fast fighter-bombers against Great Britain "will have the effect of hurrying into action our latest types of planes," The Press Association said today.

"Now that their fast fighter-bombers are escaping the wounds our Spitfires and Hurricanes have inflicted on other types," The Association said, "the Air Ministry will have to consider whether the moment is opportune to introduce our new and tremendously fast fighters.

"As with the fighter forces, so with the bombers. To increase the weight of our offensive it is now time to send out new squadrons of our heavy bombers accumulated during recent months. These planes are very secret."

German penetration of the Balkans deepened in the 59th week of the war, but the uncertainly of Russia's position and the stubborn defiance of the Turks apparently caused the Germans to move cautiously in their plans to attack Britain and her allies in the Near East.

Russia denied that Germany advised her in advance of the Nazi thrust into Rumania, as she was bound to do, and reports of Red army concentrations on the Soviet-Rumanian frontier were followed by Russo-Turkish diplomatic exchanges in Moscow and Ankara. British diplomatic representatives from the Balkan countries met with the British ambassador to Turkey in Istanbul.

No Sign of Wavering.

The Turks, completing their defence preparations, showed not the slightest sign of wavering, and there were reports they would aid Greece should the axis strike through that country. The Germans were working hard to consolidate their position in Bulgaria, which, after backing the wrong side in the last war, has shown hesitancy in lining up with Britain's enemies again.

At the far eastern end of the axis, Britain defied Japan by opening the Burma road to supplies for the armies of Chiang Kai-Shek. The Japs had threatened to close the road with bombs and on the first day of the roads' opening bombed Kunming, its Chinese terminus. But the Chinese were ready with repair squads at vantage points among the mountain route and expressed confidence that Japanese bombs will not greatly impair the road's usefulness.

Sixth Week of Siege

London went through its sixth week of air siege, undergoing raids of extreme severity on Sunday and Wednesday nights. While the number of casualties and the amount of damage continued to decline, the German tactics of using fast fighter-bombers in the place of heavy bombs had the effect of cutting down the number of German planes destroyed, and there were demands that Britain bring into use some of the new types of planes she is known to be holding in reserve.

While the Royal Air Force offensive against Germany has been spread wider than the Nazi attacks on Britain and confined more strictly to military objectives, there was an indication of its effectiveness in the decision of the Germans to remove children from large centres half a million of them going to Rumania. Berlin had one six-hour raid during the week and war industry centres and ports such as Essen, Hamburg, Stettin, Keil, Bremen and Cuxhaven were heavily attacked. A synthetic oil plant at Politz was left in flames a mile square.

Naval Activity

There was considerable naval activity. In the Mediterranean the cruiser Ajax—of river plate fame—sank three Italian destroyers, while in an English channel brush with units of the home fleet a German destroyer flotilla "retired precipitately." Dunkirk and other channel ports were shelled by naval artillery. A surprise change in the command of the home fleet put Vice-Admiral John Tovey over the heads of a dozen full Admirals into the place of Admiral of the fleet Sir Charles Forbes. The reason for the change was not made known.

Glancing back 25 years:

In the week of Oct. 13-19, 1915, Great Britain, France and Serbia declared war on Bulgaria which had joined the central powers. Austro-German troops advanced in a southerly direction after capturing Belgrade, now capital of Yugoslavia, and the Bulgarians smashed through from the east to cut the Nish-Uskub railway near Vrania.

In the meantimee Anglo-French troops poured into Salonika to reinforce the retreating Serbians.

WM. A. WALSH, OUTREMONT, DIES

Was Member of Parliament for Mount Royal Constituency from 1935 to 1940

Montreal, Oct. 19.—(CP)—William Allen Walsh, 52, principal of Strathcona Academy in suburban Outremont, and former member of parliament for Mount Royal Constituency, died yesterday at Daytona Beach, Fla., according to word received by relatives last night.

He had been ill for the last year, and left ten days ago for Florida at the suggestion of his doctor. Born at Kingston, Ont., he was educated at Valleyfield, Que., and was principal of the model school at New Carlisle, Que., before coming to Montreal in 1907.

Mr. Walsh entered the service of the Outremont School Board in 1914 as a teacher at Argyle School. He became principal of Strathcona Academy and superintendent of the Outremont School Board the following year and held those positions until his death.

He was elected to represent Mount Royal Constituency as a Conservative in 1935, and was defeated in the same riding in the general elections last March.

He is survived by his widow and one son, Cameron. A. L. Walsh, dean of the Faculty of Dentistry at McGill University, is a brother.

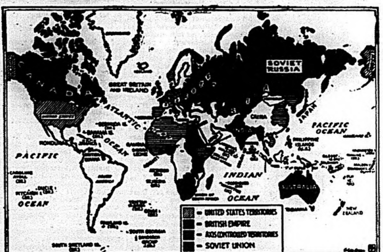
Will New Triple Axis Pact Push U. S. and Russia Into Alliance?



By HARRY LEVIN
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Washington, Oct. 19—Shall the United States put into the mothballs its traditional hostility to Soviet Rusisa as insurance against increasing axis pressure? Should the American nation make an alliance with the colossal Red army until its own rearmament program begins to turn out the planes, tanks and guns necessary to stem the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo war machine?

That is one of the most important problems that has been bothering the big-wigs of the New Deal in Washington since the triple axis lashed out at American assistance to war-wracked Britain. Today the axis is riding high. Europe and half of China groans under its might. And now, Hitler, Il Duce and the war-fevered militarists of Nippon have finally hitched up their belts and told America she is next on the list.

Opposition

Is an alliance with Soviet Russia and its powerful defence force an answer to U.S. hopes for more time? Many a loyal American will wince, or hold his nose. There is much hostility to the U.S.S.R. and communism in the U.S. During the Finnish war last winter, President Roosevelt did everything to aid little Finland except declare war. American citizens contributed money, food, diplomatic pressure, and even soldier volunteers. And much was made in the American press of the out-and-out incompetence of the Red army in its three-month war.

Most Americans will be surprised to learn that back in 1862, when the bloody Civil war was raging, and the North had made open enemies of half of Europe, the Russian czar dispatched two fleets to both of U.S. coasts that made both England and France hesitate in pushing their open aid to the Confederacy. American opinion of the Russian action brought the popularity of the czar to a high pitch.

And today, even though the czars have given away to the Communists, some U.S. government officials believe that Russia once more can provide the United States with similar moral and physical support. It is pointed out that the United States and Soviet Russia both fear Japan and favor China; both fear the increasing aggression of the triple axis against their own safety.

More Respect

It is no longer the fashion for military opinion in America and Britain to sneer at Russian war might. In fact, U.S. army men months ago paid their respect to the enormous difficulties the Russians encountered in the Finnish campaign—winter weather and the Mannerheim line—the latter admittedly better fortified than even the highly touted Maginot line.

Today the Red army, navy and air force may be the only great armed force that could stalemate or even defeat the axis juggernaut. With more than 4,000,000 trained men under arms, 15,000,000 reserves swarms of civilian male and female sharpshooters, Soviet Russia, neutral military observers feel, would be a valuable ally for any belligerent to possess. Long before Hitler came to power, the Reds had the largest air force in the world and some sources claim they still possess more planes than the Nazi Luftwaffe.

German military men have long admitted they learned about mechanized warfare from Russia. From their Communist neighbor, the Nazis borrowed tank tactics, parachute soldiers, bombs like "Molotov breadbaskets." The Red air force has been the only outfit to transport heavy guns and ready-to-fight tanks by plane. German observers, like Col. Metsch of the Potsdam Military college, have pointed out that experiments with chemical warfare in Russia have outdistanced the world.

Because U. S. defence keeps one eye permanently on the Far East, a glance at the Asiatic Red army is interesting. Stalin has upwards of 500,000 of his best soldiers garrisoned in Siberia, flanking Manchukuo; thousands of tanks and guns; an air force that the Japs fear could destroy most of her great cities in one total raid. At Vladivostok, Russia's fortified sea base, are several hundred fast submarines and war vessels that could do enormous damage to the Nippon fleet.

Understanding?

Even Admiral Yates Sterling, of the United States navy (retired), now urges that the U. S. should speedily seek an understanding with Soviet Russia. Every day, now, a powerful American paper thoughtfully urges in editorials that we ought to weigh dislikes for Russia with benefits to be gained. Time for adequate defence is absolutely necessary. That the Roosevelt government which recognized the U.S.S.R. is aware of realities is shown in the fact that Russia is permitted to buy materials now banned to the axis powers. And almost daily interviews are taking place between Soviet diplomats and American, both here and in Moscow.

Should the United States and Stalin smoke the pipe of peace, neutral observers hold that a triparty pact between Britain, America and Russia, speedily ratified, might change the history of the world.

Discovery of Tungsten In Yellowknife Area May Prove Valuable To Canada-U.S. Defence

By WILLIAM A. BAKER, Jr.
Central Press Canadian Writer

Edmonton, Oct. 19—Because Alex. Mitchell studies mineralogy when he isn't prospecting he has discovered ore near Great Slave lake which may prove to be extremely important to Canada-U.S. defence, besides bringing this Edmonton prospector far greater wealth than the gold for which he staked his claims last summer.

Mitchell, however, refuses to become noticeably optimistic until he has determined the extent of the deposits. He is now getting ready to return to Gilmore lake, 48 miles east of Yellowknife, where his claims are located, and take out enough tons of ore to discover whether a line of strike which he traced through outcroppings for more than two miles is all in the same vein. And before becoming enthusiastic he is going to ascertain whether the ore averages as high in tungsten content as his samples, which assayed 57.61 per cent. (or units, as known to the trade).

Important Discovery

Since Japan has invaded both China and Indo-China, the countries which now are supplying most of the world's tungsten, discovery of this metal in Canada's North West territories is considered particularly important.

Earlier prospectors seeking gold on the rugged shore of Gilmore lake tramped unwittingly over grayish-white rock streaked with green and brown, and one party actually camped within 75 yards of the outcroppings which bore resemblance to feldspar but which Mitchell recognized as scheelite.

Mitchell's discovery of tungsten ore is not to be confused with an earlier find on Outpost Island in Great Slave lake, where ore already is being taken out which has a content of approximately .88 ounces per ton in gold and a balance of tungsten and copper which makes about $40 ore.

The Great Slave lake region is in the Yellowknife mining district, 800 miles north of Edmonton. The areas around Yellowknife and Goldfields (located in Saskatchewan on Lake Athabaska) are producing roughly $5,500 worth of gold a day, the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company putting 165 tons ($2,970) a day through its 100-ton mill. The output at Goldfields is about 1,250 tons ($2,250) a day.

There are 700 men employed at Yellowknife; 550 at Goldfields, according to Leonard E. Drummond, secretary-manager, Alberta and North West chamber of mines.

Extensive mining in the Northwest Territories came after discovery of pitchblende (the ore of radium) on the shore of Great Bear lake by Gilbert LaBine in 1931. The radium mine at Great Bear lake is now shut down, it is officially reported with several years' supply of concentrates at the refinery at Port Hope, Ont.

From Great Bear lake southward the continuity of structure is indicated by tens of thousands of claims extending to Great Slave lake and Lake Athabaska. These claims roughly follow the western edge of the Canadian shield, vast expanse of pre-Cambrian rock which the late Lord Tweedsmuir characterized as "the lid of an amazing treasure house."

District Wealthy in Oils

Officially recorded ores in this sub-arctic include (besides tungsten, gold and radium) columbite, tantalite, silver, copper, antimony, cadmium, bismuth, manganese, lead, zinc and nickel.

Parallel with the ore zones occurs a sedimentary structure in which petroleum has been found and is now being processed. At Port Norman, on the Mackenzie River, within 600 miles of the Arctic ocean, a refinery produced 18,000 barrels in 1939. Prices at Fort Norman are: Intave ethyl, 80 octane, 37 cents a gallon, plus sales tax; motor gasoline, 30 cents. The well-known "tar sands" at Waterways-McMurray on the Athabaska river provide asphalt and almost incalculable oil.

The principal reason that mining activity has followed the western edge of the Canadian shield is accessibility by the Mackenzie river and its tributaries; however, additional deposits of a number of minerals now being mined are known to exist in various latitudes some hundreds of miles east of the Mackenzie-Slave-Athabasca waterway.

Prospecting has been curtailed even in the more accessible areas, since the outbreak of the war; but at best prospectors have explored comparatively few of the hundreds of thousands of square miles northwest of Hudson Bay in the districts of Keewatin and Mackenzie, which comprise Canada's North West territories.

SEPTEMBER 16th., A DATE THAT WILL LIVE

September 16th., 1940, will live in British and world history as one of the greatest dates of the war for on that day Adolf Hitler, the upstart Austrian, who betrayed his native country into German hands in 1938 after he had by a series of events pushed himself to the leadership of Germany in a mad drive for world power, was frustrated in an attempt to invade Great Britain. The man who trusted in his own squadrons of the air to quell the British learned to his bitter chagrin on that day that it was the superior spirit of the British airmen who dashed his plans. For one month and more since then Adolf Hitler has been carrying this crushing defeat in his mind and now the world can study subsequent events in the light of that memorable occasion.

Men like to set their history by dates but history is made up not only of dates but of a continuous series of minor and major events, all of importance. What led up to the German frustration is the story of eternal vigilance and of the spirit of the British people and all their services so that if an invasion attempt was to be made they would be ready.

The readiness is all. That is the factor which means everything to man and nation. If man is ready, he need not worry over the future. If a nation is ready, when the blow falls, she is confident in her ability to repel it.

That readiness justified the confidence of Mr. Churchill in his people. He knew them and they knew him. But Hitler did not know them nor did he know what deep foundation Mr. Churchill had for his trust in the people and the defence forces.

What they have shown on every occasion, they will show until this war is over. Steadily the star of Hitler will sink and when he is gone, the British people who have been the spearhead of resistance to Hitler's domination will carry this spirit into the post-war era and help the world to happiness and security.

What the British did on September 16th., the people were always confident would be done. Throughout this war the Nelson signal has run "England expects that every man this day will do his duty." As the men at Trafalgar did their duty, so the British people have done and will do theirs at every step of the present struggle.

A terrific blow at Hitlerism was dealt in September and from that disaster to the Germans, which overwhelmed his plans, the world takes fresh courage and looks with confidence into the future. Britain has shown that she can defend her shores, can turn back the might of the air and naval forces of the enemy.

A mighty blow was there struck at the man who had world imperialism as his heart's desire. From that smashing defeat, he loses prestige before the world.

GLORY RESTS ON ROYAL AIR FORCE

What a story will be written of that day, over a month ago, when British bombers threw Hitler's invasion time table completely out of kilter "by the ferocity of their attack" and when the elements conspired with Britain's heroic defenders to force the Nazi troops to disembark before their ships could shove off from the invasion coast!

It is a story that yet remains to be told in its fulness. The official London announcement is reticent naturally but enough is told to show that one of the war-winning events was fought on September 16th. According to a Canadian Press story from London "the R.A.F. struck at about the same time that a gale in the English Channel scattered parts of Germany's potential invasion fleet. A full moon, the brightest of the year, had shone on the invasion coast—an ally of the embarking Germans but also an aid to the watchful R.A.F."

"This, combined with other factors, such as high tide and the fact that on the preceding day there was an exceptionally heavy attack in which 185 German machines were destroyed, seems to indicate beyond a doubt that September 16th was chosen as Der Tag of Hitler," said a statement of the British Press Association. This association's thesis is that the tremendous aerial pounding of Britain on September 15th., which was incidentally marked by the personal reconnaissance over London by Goering, Nazi Field Marshal and head of the German Air Force, was intended to dismay and soften the British defences.

Everyone recalls from history how the winds and the waves smashed the remnants of the fleet that Philip of Spain back in 1588 sent to crush the English people and which Drake had defeated and conquered.

The story of the frustration of the Hitler invasion plan shows that Britain won the day decisively on September 15th when the Huns launched a terrific air invasion and lost 185 planes over Britain and the waters about her shores, and that the R.A.F., despite the heroic labors of that day, was able the next day to smash by their attack, the ship concentrations which Hitler had prepared and to force disembarkation.

Now it is not difficult to understand what Mr. Churchill meant recently when he said that Britain had maintained daylight supremacy in the air. He was no doubt thinking of events of September 15th and 16th.

My Little Boy

My little boy is just the average youngster I suppose,
With laughing eyes and funny, freckled nose,
A boy who thinks that washing is a myth,
That soap is something to blow bubbles with;
A noisy boy to whom a perfect thrill
Is skiing in the snow on Vinegar Hill,
The "gang's" all waiting, let the lessons go,
Why worried be, by what he does not know!
But there is laughter in his rosy face,
There's strength and courage in his body's grace,
His eyes are honest and his mind is clean,
Though quick in anger, he is never mean.
He loses everything, he tears his clothes,
Sometimes he comes home with a battled nose,
He makes me laugh, he often drives me wild,
I pick tools off the floor and cry, "That child "
But when the evening comes and prayers are said,
The energetic tike lies still in bed,
And whispers, "Mom, I love you,"—well I guess
This is the measure of all happiness,
As watching him, I share sweet Mary's joy,
Thinking our Lord once was a little boy.
Yes, Jamie's just the average boy, I know,
But from such sturdy seed, our best men grow,
So let youth thrive and grow by nature's plan,
The twig is straight, and straight will be the man.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Ulcerated Colitis—Severe Inflammation of Lower Bowel

Most physicians are of the opinion that mucous colitis is due to nervousness and emotional disturbances. Mucous colitis is a slight inflamation or irritation of the colon (large intestine) in which the wastes from the colon are covered or accompanied by mucous. The treatment is to try to overcome the narcousness and to control the emotional disturbances insofar as possible and to eat soft or bland foods.

There is a severe form of colitis—ulcerative colitis—the cause of which is not due to emotional disturbances. It is believed that there is something about the make-up of the individual, or about the foods he eats, together with infection, that bring on ulcerative colitis. The infection may be from elsewhere in the body or from the organisms of dysentery. Colds and influenza may cause the condition.

Another point noticed about ulcerative colitis is the regularity with which it comes. In some cases it occurs at the same time of the year and in others it occurs the same months.

In ulcerative colitis the outstanding symptoms are soft, slimy wastes (faeces) containing pus and blood, pain over lower part of abdomen, loss of appetite, loss of weight.

The vitamins which seem to be lacking in the diet of these patients are vitamins C and D mostly and to some extent vitamin B also.

When there has been considerable loss of blood due to the breaking down of the bloodvessels in the wall of the colon, blood transfusions are given sometimes as often as every two or three days.

Diet in ulcerative colitis is of the utmost importance as foods must give strength, contain the necessary food-stuffs including minerals and vitamins, yet must not irritate the lining of the colon.

The clinic of Dr. Z. Bercovitz, New York Post Graduate Medical School, and appearing in Medical Clinics of North America the following diet suggestions.

These patients should have a high protein diet—meat, eggs, fish—with small amount of rough or fibrous material, well balanced in vitamins and just enough starch food to supply energy for the body. Scraped chopped beef, either raw or rare, which may be given twice daily, fulfills a great need. Buttermilk, but not milk, may be given. Strained vegetables and baked potatoes may be given. Gas forming foods must be avoided.

Gratitude Expressed Over Opening of Road

London, Oct. 19—(CP) — Gratitude over re-opening of the Burma road was expressed in a broadcast addressed to Britain from Chungking, China, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night.

"The re-opening of the Burma road is a carefully considered action by the British Government to end appeasement," the BBC quoted the broadcast as saying. "It demonstrates Mr. Churchill's great and far sighted statesmanship. It symbolizes the renewal of friendship between two great democracies, Britain and China."

I BOMBED BERLIN

Captain of a Whitley Bomber Tells in His Own Words the Story of a Recent Raid

London.—I am the captain of a Whitley bomber. A few nights ago we bombed Berlin. There were five of us in my aircraft. My air gunner was a Scot, the second pilot was a Canadian from Calgary, the radio operator was an Irishman, the navigator hailed from New Zealand.

I am a Londoner myself. I reckon we all had the same thought. We had waited for this a long time.

We knew something was on early in the morning. Was it the Big City with the Bright Lights? That's our own name for Berlin. After what has been happening to London these last few nights you can imagine how we hoped it was, but we only knew for certain when our briefing-time came at five-thirty in the operations room.

Here we studied our maps in detail, our routes, and saw the close-up pictures of the objectives with which we were concerned.

Six-thirty, supper in the mess. I ate a good meal as I always do before taking off. Veal. We laughed at that. Why? Because we'd heard that it's been the staple German food for months now.

Time always goes fast at the end. In the crew room I take out a new pair of gloves—mittens they are, knitted for me by a kid of eleven. She'll get a kick, I decide, when I get back and tell her they've been over Berlin.

Stand Grinning.

Out on the slipway the ground crew are gathered round our machine. Their machine, too. No one ever gives them enough credit, I think, as I climb in. After all, it is their trip as much as ours; they sweat all day to get the engines and everything else in perfect running order.

Now they stand round us with their thumbs up, grinning. This is a thrilling moment for me always, even though I have made over twenty trips over Germany in the last few months. The moment when I say through my inter-com. "Can you hear me?" to all the crew in turn, including the rear gunner, who, to see that his gun is in working order, lets off a salvo across the field, and the smoke comes swirling back into the slipway. Salute to adventure, it sounds, as a moment later we are on our way. As soon as we cross the coast of Holland I hand over to the second pilot, who is famous for the meals he manages to consume on board.

Gum is Useful.

What do we take with us for rations. An apple, a bag of raisins, dry biscuits, clear gums, barley sugar and chewing gum. The gum sometimes comes in handy. There's a rear gunner in our squadron who swears that at a moment of crisis on one of his trips it stopped up a nasty hole in his turret.

Of course, you can imagine how the time drags for him, as he squats there, hoping for a nice fat, stray Heinkel.

We all share one joy on the trip. That is seeing the fires that our fellows have lit, like a series of beacons, right across Germany. Behold there's revelry below tonight, my navigator always says. But that comes later on our way back. Now we are concentrating entirely on getting through to Berlin, by the route that Goering boasted was impregnable.

It's over seven hundred miles, you know, out, and then there's the journey back. That is when you really begin to feel it. Going out you are so keyed up your one thought is not to come back with any bombs if possible.

I have had to do that twice, because of our strict rule about military objectives only. And when I read what had been happening in London, it made me almost sorry that I had. I think all the fellows in my squadron feel now that they're out to give the Berliners a taste of their own medicine.

Really Lucky

And they certainly got it from us on this trip, even though we did overshoot the mark at first and found ourselves the other side of Berlin. This was lucky, really, it meant that in the end we came in from the east, and as we shut off our engines at 12,000 feet and glided in, it must have been a devil of a surprise for them. Maybe they thought that we were a little present from Stalin.

Anyway, we let them have it good and strong. The Potsdam railway station and all its sidings was our main objective. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven.eight . . . we made three runs across the city before we had released our whole load, and the fellows who came after us, when they got back to our airfield, gave a swell report about the fires we had lit.

As we turned, we could see the wide road they call the East-West Axis, amazingly clear in the moonlight, and the Tiergarten spread out below. Now our navigator sets us a course for home—and, oh, boy, are we off quickly!

Favorite Joke.

All the same, I was surprised that we did not get more of a blasting from what we call their "sausage machines". Actually, I did not find it nearly so bad as some of our recent trips over the Ruhr have been from the point of view of Flak opposition.

This is the moment when we always start our serial story through the inter-com. It's one of the favorite jokes of our squadron. You must have seen those Fitzpatrick Travelogues on the movies? You know, where the American commentator drones on about: "As we leave the beautiful wooded banks of the Amazon...."

Well, we've got our own version. I start the ball rolling with, "As we leave the dreary banks of the Rhine", and number five, that's the rear gunner, croons away lyrically about the castles on its banks that he hopes are getting a sleepless night.

If I've got any flares left, I make a point of letting them off over any peaceful town we pass over, because that starts up a futile barrage, and then you know that its inhabitants are scuffing to their shelters and shivering in their skins. And even better is the moment when my navigator steers a course over Bremen or Hamburg and we can see the fires from thirty miles or more away, like Dante's Inferno they look to us from up there.

But, in a way, I suppose the best moment of all is when we at last come in sight of our own searchlights from our own coast, weaving their barricade across the horison, and we know that we are reaching the last lap.

Grand Home-coming

Strangely enough, this can be the most dangerous of all, not only because our balloon barrages are so much more effective than theirs, but because there is always the possible complications of the weather having closed in behind us, and it is not until we are five miles from our own airfield that we can get into communication with our own R. T. on the ground.

We circle round to get our own recognition signal, and land, It's a grand home-coming. The sudden quietness, the feeling that the job is over, the certain knowledge that we have done something to revenge what our own folk, especially in London, have been going through these last few days—and done it decently with our gloves on, but none the less pulverizing a blow for that.

All the ground staff are out there on the slipway to greet us. There first words are always the same. "Any duff?" (That means—"Anything gone wrong with the machine?") When we reassure them that we had a wizard trip they start searching for holes and souvenirs of bits of shrapnel, and ask us their second invariable question: "Did you smear them in, sir " "Yes, we did." "G[illegible]d-o." It is always "Good-o."

A Message From the Dead

(United Correspondents G 24.)

A message received from the late Dr. Fritz Gerlich — murdered at Hitler's command on the night of June 30th, 1934, in Munich.

Explanatory Note:

In 1933 I spent many days in joint custody with Dr. Fritz Gorlich at the police prison in Munich and months later we met in the prison courtyard at Stadelheim, where we were kept apart in strictly solitary confinement. In the course of prison exercise on August 28th 1933, Gerlich managed to whisper to me as follows: "Hitler, I know, means to kill me. Will you promise to be my 'executor'? Tell everyone who cares that no amount of threats or torture will ever lead me to commit suicide, for I am a professing Christian. And when I am dead, murdered, let your pen say what I thought." This promise was given and has been kept. Every year since, on the anniversary of the day on which Dr. Gerlich told me that he expected to be murdered, his dead voice has spoken to me through my pen. He has never failed to send me a message each year since his death.

Walter Tschuppik.

To the Editor
Dear Sir,

I would be pleased if you could find space to publish this letter in your newspaper. I, the writer, was murdered in Munich during the ill-famed night of June 30th, 1934, known as the German equivalent of St. Bartholomew's Eve. For many years I was chief editor of the "Munchner Neueste Nachrichten" and later, before Hitler seizod power, published a Munich weekly "Der gerade Weg", which I founded in order to combat Hitlerism. I was a Catholic writer, profoundly convinced that Hitler and his movement would bring endless misery to Germany and to the whole world. After I had been arrested on March 10th, 1933, and kept in prison for fifteen months, my fate was decreed. I was killed, because Hitler never forgave me for denouncing him as a monster of falsehood and devilitry. On that dreadful night when, at Hitler's orders, not only Roehm and his friends were killed, but hundreds of innocent people done to death, the murderers dragged me from my cell in the police prison at Munich. On the way to Dachau they executed me. My dead body was shoved underground and it was given out that I had committed suicide:

Hitler has murdered countless people. Their names are drowned in the ocean of blood spilt in a war of this monster's making, but the victims will arraign him so long as the powers of evil, he and National Socialism, threaten mankind.

There is a common and dangerous belief that Hitler's domination is only the symptom of a grave social and economic world crisis. From this it would be easy to conclude that the causes of all these terrible happenings lie not only in Hitler's criminal character and in the moral debasement of Germany, but in all kinds of outside quarters as well. The apocalyptic horrors of this age, however, defy all attempts to class it with other revolutions and upheavals. The old political and sociological vocabulary is of no help. Hitlerism means the rule of the amoral, the reign of anarchy, the triumph of murder and lies. All the many shortcomings and social evils of this present age are but little when measured by this regime of devilish cruelty and wanton crime.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) FRITZ GERLICH.

Stewart Says—

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Writer

But for a remark of Editor Virginio Gayda in his Rome newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia, Washington's diplomatic, military and naval experts would be more impressed by predictions from axis sources of a tremendous early smash against Britain, as a sequel to Herr Hitler's and Signor Mussolini's recent Brenner Pass conference.

Chas. P Stewart

Editor Gayda is recognized as virtually Benito's official spokesman, and it's taken for granted that Benito wouldn't permit him to express himself in a fashion distasteful to Adolf.

What he said was:

"The two nations of the axis are not impatient to end the war soon."

Now there are a few things which our best informed observers of the situation are surer of than that Adolf and Benito simply are frantic for a speedy axis victory—for victory, of course, but an exceedingly speedy one. It stands to reason. From Adolf's standpoint, from the outset this affair was to have been a "blitzkrieg"—a lightning war.

Germany's initial punch doubtless was superior to Britain's but, unless knocked out in short order, the chances have appeared all along to be that the British would get harder and harder to wallop. In the long run, they have more resources than the Nazis. And the Fascists can't stand even as protracted a fight as the Nazis can. The Fascists haven't any resources at all worth mentioning.

No Hurry? Phooey!

So when Editor Gayda announces that the axis is in no hurry, the expert onlookers' comment is, "Phooey."

That Adolf and Benito decided at Brenner Pass upon a tremendous winter smash is considered extremely likely in the rather forlorn hope that it will prove conclusively effective—or the British look like the better outfit to bet on.

Editor Gayda's comment however, is interpreted as meaning that the axis is none too certain of it's smash's success, and that he's trying to prepare his readers not to be overly disappointed if it fizzles, on the ground that the axis is in no haste anyway.

Virginio likewise refers to "reports of disagreement between Germany and Italy" as "British propaganda."

Well, there haven't been any such reports until Il Giornale d'Italia hinted at them. Washington's conclusion is that there really are German-Italian disagreements which the outside world was unaware of, but that Editor Gayda, being informed of their existence, is endeavoring, in advance, to pooh-pooh them.

Dodging the Censer

Due to the censorship, foreign news correspondents in Italy and Germany can't get much of their own stuff out to the United States and elsewhere.

They're welcome to quote Signor Gayda, Herr Joseph Goebbels and other officially authorized sources, though. And, apparently Signor Gayda's utterances, at least, can be so handled as to convey a certain amount of information that he probably never intended to have made public—not as interpreted in this country.

The German gag rule is very strict. Maybe the Nazi censor blacks out even Herr Goebbel's observations, if he deems them indiscreet.

Italy is less stringent. An American correspondent there can get through with pretty much whatever he wants to. Only, if he sends what he ought not to, directly after the government learns of it he's expelled from the country. Perhaps the boys who transmitted Signor Gayda's editorials will be fired out, as soon as the Italian authorities have had time to see how they reacted in America.

Russia professes not to have a censorship. But heaven help anybody who disseminates anything that Commissar Stalin doesn't like. He isn't deported, but it's made sufficiently unpleasant for him to induce him to leave voluntarily.

France Not Blamed For Recent Edict Against the Jews

New York, Oct. 19—(CP) — The New York Times, commenting editorially on the Vichy Government's new Jewish restrictions, said today:

"The search for a scapegoat is as old as defeat itself. It is tragic and senseless at all times, but it is doubly so in present-day France, where the cabinet at Vichy has announced that it will prevent Jews 'from assuming certain social functions implying authority, management and the formation of minds.' The Jews of France, it is indicated, will be forbidden to hold public office or to work for press or radio, because they 'contributed' to French defeat.

"There is nothing remotely recognizable as French in this procedure. The whole thing is so foreign to the French spirit, so destructive of the good name of France, that it can only have been dictated in Nazi Germany or devised by Frenchmen who seek to curry favor with their conquerors."

"Men's Night" Held By Marmora W. I.

Marmora—Men's Night was observed by Marmora Women's Institute at the regular meeting of that organization held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. J. Pack in Marmora Township. The attendance consisted of 18 members and 10 visitors. The president Mrs. H. W. Sabine occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada," the Institute Ode and the Lord's Prayer. In general business the decision was made to collect scrap leather which is to be left at the Herald Office and later forwarded to an address in Belleville for dispatch for war purposes. The making of a second quilt was discussed. The first quilt was recently finished and sent to a family in North Hastings who had suffered the loss of their household effects when burned out. The grant of 50 dollars was then voted to the Marmora Public Library. The men then took charge of the program under the presidency of E. C. Prentice. With Mrs. F. R. Wells at the piano George Woodhouse favored the gathering with two songs "Memories" and "There's a gold mine in the sky". H. W. Sabine favored with an interesting talk on current events.

A debate took place in which both ladies and gentlemen took part "Resolved that men spend more money and time on pleasure than women." The affirmative was taken by Mesdames H. W. Sabine, E. C. Prentice and H. P. Nayler while H. R. Haacke and F. R. Wells handled the negative side. The judges were W. S. Wilde and W. Lavender. Honors were accorded the negative side. A contest on celebrities finished with two contestants equal. By the drawing of a stick the decision went to Mrs. W. Lavender over Mrs. F. R. Wells. After the singing of the National Anthem, the committee in charge served refreshments.

Under auspices of St. Paul's Laymen's Association, a euchre party was held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening with ten tables in play. A new departure was seen in prizes being for highest ladies and highest gentlemen scores. Two players Lorne Ash and R. E. Bonter tied for first place. The tie was broken in favor of R. E. Bonter. The honors for second place being accorded Mr. Ash. Refreshments were served at the close of play.

A blast of cold, dry air cools the contents of beverage bottles in a new device instead of ice water, keeping the outside of the bottles dry.

Young People's Union Conducts Annual Rally

The annual rally of the Belleville and South Hastings Young People's Union was held at Melrose on Wednesday, October 14th.

The rally opened in the afternoon with an inspiring worship service under the direction of the Melrose society. Reverend Sterling of Melrose welcomed the young people and the response was made by the district president Ralph Campbell.

The roll was called and there were thirty present representing about eight societies.

Miss Marion Daniels gave the highlights of the Presbytery Conference in such an interesting manner that it was not only interesting but of great use to the leaders who were not present at it.

Mrs. Bates of Melrose played a beautiful arrangement of Stephen Foster's "Jeannie."

A period of directed recreation under Miss Jean Matthews' leadership was enjoyed by all and many new games suitable for societies were played.

The meeting then divided into small study groups under the following leaders:

Christian Culture, Ralph Campbell; Christian Fellowship, Muriel Milligan; Christian Missions, Doris Williams; Christian Citizenship, Jack Ketcheson.

In these groups new ideas as to how to handle Young People's problems were discussed and ideas for meetings were suggested.

Supper was served by the ladies of Melrose United Church. A vote of thanks was moved to them by Miss Muriel Milligan. This was followed by a lively sing song led by Miss Doris Williams.

The Wellbridge Society led in the evening worship service and the roll call was taken by the district secretary, Miss Betty Anderson. There were over one hundred and ten present with nearly every society represented.

The cup for the debating series held last winter was presented to the winners, Mr. Jim Ketcheson and Miss Nama Sine of Foxboro.

Mr. Don Williams gave the report of the nominating committee as follows:

Honorary President, Rev. Mr. Sterling.
President, Ralph Campbell.
Secretary Treasurer, Betty Anderson.
Christian Fellowship, Margaret Smallhorn.
Christian Citizenship, Doris Williams.
Christian Culture, Jim Ketcheson.

Leadership Training, Rev. Mr. Cook.
Recreation, Jean Matthews.
Publications, Earl Dafoe.

The Rev. Mr. Scott led an impressive ceremony of the installation of officers.

Mr. Don Baxter of Bloomfield gave the theme address of the evening. His topic was "What are you going to make of it." He urged the young people to give freely of their time to the church and to try and take something of real value away with them.

Mr. Alex Allison expressed the pleasure of Melrose at having the Young People there and the meeting closed with God Save the King.

Huntingdon Twp. S. S. Convention Held at Moira

West Huntingdon—The annual Sunday School convention for Huntingdon Township was held on Tuesday afternoon and evening in the Moira United Church. Mr. Clayton Rutter, of Fuller, presided over both afternoon and evening sessions. A large number of other conventions and rallies were being observed in other parts of the county on the same date, this perhaps was one reason why the convention was not largely attended.

The worship service in the first session was conducted by members of the Y.P.U. of Moira with Mr. Wesley Farrell as leader and Miss Norma Ketcheson, Mr. Philip Carr and Mrs. Joe Williams assisting him. Mr. Blake Ketcheson welcomed the delegates and Mr. Rutter gave a report of his year's work. Four of the department superintendents gave their reports.

Special music was provided by Mrs. Joe Williams and daughters.

Rev. C. D. McLellan of Napanee was the O.R.E.C. representative and led in a discussion on Sunday School management. He also conducted the election of officers for 1940-41 as follows:

President, Mr. Clayton Rutter.
Assistant, Mrs. John Wallace.
Secretary Treasurer, Mr. Ernest Holland.

Departmental Superintendents—Children's Work, Mrs. Albert Clare, Girls' Work, Mrs. Frank Palmer; Boys' Work, Mrs. J. C. Sills; Young People's, Mr. Wesley Farell; Adult, Mr. Philip Carr; Leadership Training, Mr. Arthur Wood; Missionary, Mrs. William Shaw; Temperance, Mrs. Frank Herity; Home Department, Mr. Arthur Wilson.

At the close of the afternoon session the ladies of Moira served a banquet to the delegates.

In the evening the convention heard a fine address by Mr. C. D. McLellan and the United Church at West Huntingdon was selected as the next place of meeting.

Endeavorers' Class Meeting

One of the most active organizations of the United Church here is the Endeavorers' Sunday School Class. Each month the class holds what is termed the monthly social evening when programs of interest, entertainment and spiritual uplift are presented.

As an additional contribution that has added much interest during the summer months a special speaker has been secured. At the Tuesday evening meeting Mr. Clayton Tummon of Stirling, a former member of the class, gave a fine address on the subject 'Might". Following Mr. Tummon's address a short discussion was enjoyed. Other members who assisted Mr. Clayton Wright were Mrs. Tom Elliott, Mrs. Clayton Wright, Mrs. W. J. Pitchett, Messrs Clifford Elliott, Philip Carr and Arthur Wilson.

After the benediction a lunch was served by Mrs. Hammond and daughters.

Mrs. Leslie Dodds of Settler, Alberta, paid a recent visit with her sister Mrs. Philip Carr.

Those local young people who attended the Rally at Melrose on Wednesday evening were Dela McMaster, Georgie Pitman, Irene and Marguerite Elliott, Colin, Donald, Harold and Bobbie Elliott and Jack Pitman.

Mr. Sandy McCurdy and Donnie spent a few days this week with friends at Consecon and Centre.

Mrs. Effie Wilson spent Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Wesley Farrell of Moira.

Mrs. B. Devolin of Madoc is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Hammond.

Chin Up!—And Beauty's Outlook Will be Bright

By HELEN FOLLETT

CHINS HAVE a way of acquiring bad habits, and it is these habits that make for facial defects. If the chin is thrust forward, as happens when a woman is tense, it gives the face an expectant expression, the jaw line becomes strained. Austere, critical women pull in the chin, a trick that relaxes the muscles of the throat and makes them take on fiddle strings.

The head should be balanced, chin held on the level. That pose pulls up the fibers of the chest, makes breathing freer and deeper, and suggests to the backbone that it carry on.

When chin and neck fall into a state of tissue collapse, the beauty outlook is not good. You can't cover these defects up very well, nor improve conditions by makeup. One has to grin and bear it.

Use Massage Cream

If you see signs that worry you, get busy with massage cream. Use ice freely, whisking it over the surface of the skin until you feel pretty well refrigerated. Do exercises. Stand tall, hands on hips, chest up, turn the head from side to side with a muscle pull that extends down into the shoulders.

Cold compresses, applied at bedtime, help restore a throat that has taken on a crepe-like appearance. Wring a small towel out of cold water, cover with a dry one. Soon the flesh will be steaming hot, showing that the blood streams are on the job.

If you are a home girl, face a round of domestic duties, and if you find that your fingernails are getting dull colored and brittle, make a change of soaps, not only the toilet soap but the cleaning agents you are using to keep your house in order. Strong soap robs the finger tip sheaths of the shell-like polish Get the best you can find.

Mrs. Maracle was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Maracle, Tyendinaga Reserve. Mr. and Mrs. Maracle formerly resided in Oshawa and Buffalo, New York, and now make Shannonville their home. They have four sons.

THE WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION OF HOLLOWAY STREET CHURCH

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Association followed by an afternoon tea was held at the home of Mrs. A. Campbell, 16 Charlotte Street, on Thursday afternoon, October 17. The meeting was opened by the Vice President, Mrs. R. Andrews in the absence of the president, by all singing "Blest be the tie that binds", followed with prayer by Mrs. (Rev.) Dilts.

The Scripture reading Psalm 102 was read by Mrs. C. Walters. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and reports of the treasurer and various secretaries were given and business matters discussed. The Roll Call was taken with 40 present. Mrs. Denton then took charge and opened this part of the meeting by all singing "Will your Anchor Hold?" Devotional reading was taken from 1st Timothy and the second chapter by Mrs. Denton. A solo "You Can Smile" by Mrs. S. P. Hagerman was much enjoyed.

The guest speaker for the afternoon Mrs. (Rev.) McLennan was then introduced. The subject of her message was "The W.A. Work and the Religious Part". "What is Religious Emphasis?" The three points she made outstanding were: Charity, Acts of Kindness, and Religious Devotion. Her closing quotation was "What you are, speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say". A duet by Mrs. E. Hubbs and Mrs. C. MacDonald, "The Wind and the Harp" was very ably rendered. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and the Benediction.

Mrs. Denton and her group then served very dainty refreshments. Mrs. R. Andrews and Mrs. A. Sills presiding at the tea table and those assisting with the serving were Mrs. S. P. Hagerman, Mrs. C. MacDonald, Mrs. Nighswander, Mrs. Greatrix and Mrs. H. Donnelly.

Women's Canadian Club in Charge Of Red Cross Wool

Members of the Women's Canadian Club have been playing an important part in the work of the Red Cross since war began, as they did during the last Great War. The Belleville Club is responsible for all the wool issued for Red Cross work and when the articles are completed they inspect, pack and ship the finished products. Wool is issued at the Y.M.C.A. and the club members are most attentive to their duties. The coming Tuesday, with their opening meeting at which Mrs. Madge McBeth will speak, the Canadian Club is arranging to give out the wool from two to three o'clock.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Correspondent Thinks Love is Just "Craziness"

A young man from the chivalry belt—the Deep South, where men are courteous and girls are lovely—has carefully cut from the newspaper some direful happenings which have had their origin in desperate love affairs.

He asks the question, "Isn't love just craziness?" And concludes with "I think it's got me and I'm as crazy as any of these people who've wooed their girls with shotguns—the ladies have tried pistol marksmanship too; some have drowned the beloved; others have just bashed them in the head.

"And now, dear Miss Fairfax, I've felt like doing all these things myself at times when my girl treats me like the dirt under her feet, or when she says: 'Yes, I certainly do love you', sets the date for our wedding then changes her mind and says: 'I really don't know whether I want to marry you or not.'

"Take this fellow who tried to shoot his girl, missed her but shot two innocent bystanders, which sure was hard on them. Now the girl's going to marry him when he gets out of jail, and the college is going to let him graduate too with the rest of the class.

"Now I'm just a farm boy and probably wouldn't have the luck of this college man, who's going to get his degree, marry the girl and get a lot of fancy presents besides. What do you make of this love business? Isn't it just craziness. I think so. "Just a Farmer"

When a correspondent asks me what I make of this "love business," he certainly pays me a compliment I ill deserve, because everyone has tried to define love and no one has yet succeeded. There is certainly an element of "craziness" in the type of love which prompts a man to kill the dearest thing to him in the world, and, when his jealous rage has subsided, wonders why he did it.

As my correspondent says, the papers are so full of love madness these days, and the violent crimes it has evoked, that one is tempted to believe some of the war insanity raging in Europe has found its way over here. Has it broken out in these murderous happenings, to which my correspondent not only refers but sends clippings to prove his point?

The young farmer who tells me that at times he feels just as crazy as the people who do these violent deeds has much to be thankful for in the way of environment. There's a lot to be done around the farm and when he feels particularly wrought up and raging over the girl friend, he might hitch up the tractor and plow a field, chop down some trees that need chopping and, as good as any remedy, get into the old car, go to the next town, invites me other girl to go to the movies and have supper with him.

In a violent love affair when things go haywire, instead of doing something desperate, there is nothing like the counter-irritant in the shape of another girl or another man. These alternatives may not be the final solution, but they're a great temporary help.

Sometimes the love-crazed only succeed in making themselves ridiculous like the young man who tried to shoot his fiancee but wound up in hitting a couple of innocent bystanders. There is always a lucid interval when normal people can take things in hand before they go absolutely berserk. And the dividing line between sanity and insanity is when one takes advantage of the lucid interval.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Boy's Mother Should Issue Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sweetheart has invited me to meet his parents at their home in a distant state. I would like to know whether it is proper to stop at his home or stay at a hotel while visiting there? As yet I am not engaged to him. F.

It is entirely proper for you to stay at the home of this friend, if his mother, who is the hostess of the home, writes and invites you. You should not even consider accepting this invitation until you have received this invitation.

And it is entirely correct for you to suggest to this young man that you would like a direct invitation from his mother. Say something like this, "I'd love to come, Bob, but Mother and I would be happy if your mother herself tells me that it would be agreeable to her and convenient for her if I come." This very often has to be done, so don't be a bit embarrassed about asking for this invitation. You can do it very graciously.

Since these people are so hospitable and friendly, it would be ungracious not to stay with them, if the invitation is directly given by the mother.

A Welcome to Brother-in-Law-to-be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just learned that my sister, who lives in a southern state, is to be married. I know the boy she is to marry quite well, but have never been what might be called "buddies" with him. Is it my duty to write to him and if so, what type of letter should I write? Sister.

Yes, by all means write your sister's fiance, telling him how happy you are about your sister's engagement to him, welcoming him into your family, and chatting with him in a "sisterly" letter.

Proper to Wear Husband's Frat. Pin

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it the correct thing for a wife to wear her husband's fraternity pin after they are married? He gave me the pin when we became engaged and it was the only token of engagement I wore during that time. The only time he wears the pin or cares to wear it is when he goes to some social function of his fraternity. Since his fraternity does not have a "sweetheart" pin, he thinks I should wear this one. I would like to continue wearing it because it means so very much to me, but wonder if it is right? I hope you say "yes" because it is a symbol of our engagement and six years of "being happily married." C.

By all means wear this fraternity pin of your husband's, since it means such happy thoughts to you. But don't wear it conspicously—wear it with sure judgment and taste as to its effectiveness.

Form of Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the proper way to address one's mother-in-law? Shall I call her "Mother? or should I call her Mrs."? M.

How one addresses one's mother-in-law depends on one's mother-in-law, what her wish in the matter is. If she is "motherly" in her point of view about her daughter-in-law, if there is a close bond between her and her daughter-in-law, then the name she would like to have used by the daughter-in-law would reflect this devotion. It might be "Mother," or "Mother Allen." To call her "Mrs. Allen" is forbiddingly formal for this relationship. Ask your husband's advice about this, and perhaps even ask him to ask his mother what name she would prefer you to use.

Facts And Falsities About Salt

There is a common superstition to the effect that salt is detrimental to health and should be kept to a minimum in the diet because it causes high blood pressure. It is a belief, I think, that is without proper foundation. Certainly, in my own local practise, I have found no reason to believe that salt by itself does affect the blood pressure adversely.

Salt is a very necessary body requirement. All our blood and tissues contain it normally, in a more or less fixed percentage. Salt deficiency in the body can be a serious matter.

It may be that as a race we eat too much salt. We do consume a great deal more of it than most peoples. But when it comes to deciding whether too much salt is being eaten, a great deal depends on the individual. Some have more capacity for it and need for it than others.

The body has its own natural ways of eliminating salt. Some is removed through perspiration, and some through the kidneys. Have you ever noticed that after you have eaten salty foods that you drink more water? Well this is nature's way of helping the kidneys get rid of the extra salt that you have taken in.

During summer months we need more salt than in cold weather because we do so much perspiring. Sometimes people sweat so much and lose so much salt that they actually suffer from a salt deficiency, and it is believed that heat exhaustion has some connection with this. It has become a practise in some industrial works to supply salt to the workers in the form of tablets when their work causes them to perspire so much that they lose a good deal of salt.

It is true that too much salt can cause trouble for some individuals. To a person with weak kidneys, the elimination of extra salt can bring discomfort, and the condition may necessitate a salt-free diet. Yet another person might eat large quantities of salt without suffering any more serious consequence than a raging thirst.

I do think it is a very bad habit when persons automatically put salt on food before tasting it. Some seem to put it on everything—literally from soup to nuts. They seem to have no taste at all, except for salt.

"THE LAST ADVERTISEMENT WAS PRINTED YESTERDAY"

What Would the World Be Like If It Were TRUE?

You have cut it out and put it away to show your grandchildren. With it, a way of living as you knew it, has passed forever.

Tonight you will want to see a movie. You drive up to one—saw that last week. At another, but no—you don't like so and so's acting. Let's go home. It's too much gas and time to waste on a show. Next month half the theatres will close. Poor attendence.

Tomorrow you will want some groceries. You will go to the nearest grocery store and buy some. Rib roast perhaps, and lima beans. You won't hear until tomorrow night at the bridge table that the store just next door had a special on the very thing you bought. Pretty soon your husband will wonder why the food bills are so high.

"The last Advertisement was printed yesterday,,

Next month is Aunt Jane's birthday. Well if you think I'm going to spend half a day tramping through stores to find an article that I used to find by turning a page . . . . .

Fellow in Montreal has invented a new air conditioner that will sell for $50.00. No one will hear of it. You will never see it. What is air conditioning any way?

"The last Advertisement was printed yesterday,,

Advertising has brought us many things. Finer cars, better homes, silly fads and wonderful inventions that has made life easier . . . and longer. Advertising is no unmixed blessing. It has given to us a standard of living unmatched in any other place at any time. That standard of living should persist as long as people have wants to fill, and money to spend . . . and eyes to read with.

It will persist only so long as we keep the presses rolling.

St. Mikes and Collegiate Win Junior Interscholastic Rugby Football Games With Ease

SIX-MAN STYLE

O.S.D. Building New Team as Stars of Other Years Have Left School

St. Michael's Academy and Belleville Collegiate emerged victors in the season's initial double-header in the Belleville six-man football group of the C.O.S.S.A. yesterday afternoon. The St. Mikes sextette won 17 to 1 over Albert College on the latter's field, while the local "Collegians" ran rough-shod over the 1939 group champion O.S.D. kids to win 68 to 0 on the Collegiate campus.

On the Albert field it was too much McDougall and Goyer for the homesters, as the "Irish" rolled up 15 points in the initial half. McDougall scored two touchdowns and Wilson one for the winners, but neither were converted. Buster Donnan kicked Albert's only point of the game. The Albert College sextette rallied in the last half to play the Irish at more even terms, St. Mikes' remaining two points, coming when Ardiel was caught behind his own line for a safety touch, making the final count 17 to 1. Dobbin tackled well for the losers, as Donnan and Wilson booked up a sterling kicking duel.

The line-ups:

St. Michael's Academy — Snap, McDougall, wings, Power and Taylor, quarter, Goyer, halves, Wilson and McQuaid, subs, Bunton, Pigeon and Shepherd.

Albert College — Snap, Pringle, wings, Chatson and Ardiel, quarter, Anderson, halves, Bailey and Wright, subs, Kennedy, Dempster and Dobbin.

Referee, H. Townsend.

No Competition

It was just no competition as Cliff Yerex's strong B.C.I. sextette swarmed all over the younger O.S.D. kids to win 68 to 0, leading 30 to 0 at the halfway mark. Big Blake Kerr ripped and tore through the light Deaf line for five touchdowns, Mott counted three and a placement, while Gannon and Rogers rang up two major scores each. Five of the eleven tries were converted, the player making the touchdown having the right to try for the extra point.

Coach Jim Rickaby trotted out a sextette of 16-year-old kids that only proved a shell of his 1939 group champions from the O.S.D. In the second half the boys from the Deaf school did not scrimmage the ball on a single occasion, B. C. I. accepting the kick-offs and running the plays back for major scores. Kerr and Gannon both ran kick-offs back for touchdowns. The winners carried too much weight and speed for their smaller O.S.D. rivals. Carson, the Collegians' regular quarterback, sustained injuries and was forced from the game in the last quarter. Cork, the O.S.D. quarter, was the only player used by Coach Rickaby, who had previous experience at the game.

The line-ups:

O.S.D.—Snap, Styles, wings, Hood and Wilson, quarter, Cork, halves, Calder and Goerge, subs, Owen, Conlon and Thibault.

B.C.I. & V.S. — Snap, Rogers, ends, Sills and Thompson, quarter, Carson, halves, Mott and Cunningham, subs, Keegan, Kerr, Bray and Gannon.

Referee—Arthur L. Cole.

Springfield Indians Win Exhibition Tilt

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 19 (CP)—Waging an uphill battle all the way, Springfield Indians scored three last-period goals to inflict a 5-4 defeat on their American Hockey League rivals, Providence Reds, in an exhibition fixture here last night.

Providence, league champions last year, held a 4-2 lead with 15 minutes of the last period left but couldn't match Indians in the final test.

Jack Shill, formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, sent Providence into an early lead after a minute of play, but Hunt knotted the count for Springfield. Shill got his second goal on the next exchange to give Providence a 2-1 lead.

Eddie Shore, Springfield playing manager, broke into the scoring records in the second period, but all he drew was an assist on Thibeault's goal. Providence replied with tallies by Sherwood and Pinkbeiner to make it 4-2.

The third period was all Springfield as Hunt, Thurrier and Brydson drove home the winning goals.

SAVOLD TO MEET MASKED MARVEL

Michigan Wrestler Promises to Tame 'Hooded Horror' in Local Ring — Al Dunlop on Card

Featured by the return of old favorites, supplemented by the appearance of present-day favorites, professional wrestling continues at the Hume Arena on Monday when three bouts will be presented, all of main bout atmosphere.

Following last week's hectic brawl at the Hume Arena when patrons attacked the Masked Marvel with physical violence and the "hooded horror" demanded police protection before he resumed hostilities to beat Mike Domerko, the Syracuse grid star, the promoters immediately sought a suitable opponent for the "masked" gent. Today it was announced that Jerry Savold, the Michigan grappler, who features the famous rolling scissors as his principal means of ring combat, had been signed to meet the Masked Marvel in a full hour bout. Savold's prowess as a matman is well known all over this continent and he will doubtless prove a worthy opponent for the Masked Marvel.

Dunlop Returns.

An old favorite in wrestling circles returns to Belleville in the person of Al (Bunny) Dunlop, a veteran of the grappling business. Dunlop was signed with malice of forethought on the part of the promoters and he will meet George Pavich, the villainous Greek whose ring effort borders to the lowest possible level, as Pavich stoops to any degree in order to obtain victory. His efforts may be curbed by the indifferent and rough Dunlop, however.

Even the preliminary will be a bout of prominence when Jimmie Allen, the former Canadian amateur champion, meets Joe Sishorn, the Western Canada titleholder, who is making his first appearance in the eastern part of the Dominion at the Hume Arena on Monday night.

BILLY CONN WINS OVER AL McCOY

Light Heavyweight Champion Draws Step Nearer to Bout With Louis

(By Bill King)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Pittsburgh youth moved up the notch by scoring a decisive win last night over rugged Al McCoy, of Boston, who has proved a stumbling block to more than one other aspirant to high fistic honors.

Conn, undefeated since he started his campaign in the heavyweight ranks scaled 172 3-4 to McCoy's 181 1-2, but was far stronger at the end of the 10-round non-title bout than his heavier foe.

A top-heavy favorite, Conn displayed a weakness in the early rounds in offsetting McCoy's left jab, but closed in and slugged in the fifth, a change that worked to his advantage.

Though McCoy had been holding him fairly even up to that point, the result from then on seldom was in doubt. McCoy attempted to stem the tide with a rally in the seventh, but Conn took everything he had and, gaining confidence with each passing round, won going away.

TURK AND HIS RIVAL TALK THINGS OVER

Goalie Turk Broda of the Toronto Maple Leafs is pictured talking things over with Aldege Bastien, RIGHT, who the Leafs captured from Port Colborne ranks. Bastien, Phil Stein and Broda will be rivals for the permanent net-minding chores for the Leafs who are at present training at St. Catharines.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—Those birds with flaming pans walking around San Francisco are the ones who asked, "Who is that guy?" when Stanford hired Clark Shaughnessy.... It has just come out that Des Moines business men offered Billy Conn 20 grand to go out there and fight Lee Savold last summer, but no soap...... Jimmy Demaret and Lawson Little are billed for a 72-hole grudge match over Jimmy's home course at Houston which Demaret can tour in 68, using only a hockey stick. It's par 72, and he has posted 65-67-67-65 in his last four starts.

TENNIS STAR KILLED IN CAR

San Diego, Calif., Otc. 19—(AP)—Robert Carrothers, 18, winner of the United States Junior Tennis Title for 1940, died last night of injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

A blowout overturned the car in which he was riding. Warren Beman, riding in the rumble seat with Carrothers, suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries. John Ross, 18, Los Angeles, driver, and Dever Dutton, 19, Riverside, riding in the front seat, were injured slightly.

N. H. L. Training Camp Notes

Both New York clubs break up their hockey training camps this week-end but don't think that means they're ready to jump into the National League schedule. The Stanley Cup Rangers leave their Winnipeg camp to start a 1,500-mile exhibition tour through Western Canada, after which they travel 900 miles to Toronto to open the N.H.L. season Nov. 2. Americans meanwhile will trek about 2,000 miles before they head east for their opener at Detroit Nov. 3. They will play six exhibition games in 11 days.

* * *

Success Story: A glance around the N.H.L. training camps shows that in no less than six of the seven clubs, the boss has risen from the ranks. On Rangers, it's Frank Boucher, one of the original blue-shirts, as coach. Chicago has the veteran Black Hawk Paul Thompson; Detroit . . . Ebbie Goodfellow; Toronto . . . Happy Day; Boston . . . Ralph (Cooney) Weiland; and Americans, the fiery Red Dutton.

* * *

Week-end exhibition schedule: Saturday—Rangers vs. Americans at Winnipeg; Boston Bruins vs. Hershey Bears of the American League at the Bruins' training camp in Hershey; Sunday—Montreal Canadiens vs. New Haven Eagles of the American League at St. Hyacinthe, Que.

* * *

The Bruins of Boston will present the same fifteen faces that finished last season in their exhibition match against Hershey Bears Saturday. Manager Ross says Frank Brimsek will be in goal; Dit Clapper, Jack Shewchuk, Desse Smith and Jack Crawford on the defence, and three forward lines will see action with Flash Hollett serving as a utility player.

Pre-season predictions — Coach Dick Irvin of the Montreal Canadiens' training camp in St. Hyacinthe, Que.: The Canadiens will finish no worse than fourth in the N.H.L. his season. . . . Coach Frank Boucher after watching the Stanley Cup New York Rangers wind up their training at Winnipeg: Without sickness or injuries, they should repeat last year's performance.

The liniment bottle is getting plenty of play with the Toronto Maple Leafs in St. Catharines, Ont., but none of the players are missing a minute of ice drill. The Leafs have been scrimmaging only for two days and the bruises are cropping up from the unaccustomed labor. Defenceman Jack Church is playing with a shoulder bruise while Blink Bellinger and Dick Kowcinak, Kirkland Lake stars last year, both have suffered muscle sprains.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By the Associated Press)

Boston — Billy Conn, 172 3-4, Pittsburgh, light heavyweight champion, outpointed Al McCoy, 181 1-2, Boston (10 non-title).

Hollywood—Jack Larrimore, 144, Miami, Fla., knocked out Al Smith, 146 1-2, Los Angeles, (8).

FRANK EDDOLL'S AGE KEEPS HIM IN JR. COMPANY

PLAYS FOR OSHAWA

Coach Day Says He is His Idea of a Defensive Defence Player

By DICK SHERIDAN

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 19 (CP).—Frankie Eddolls' age—at 18 he's still a junior—will prevent him from turning professional for a while but at this early date in the training of Toronto Maple Leafs, the chunky little defenceman shapes up as one of the most promising recruits for the future.

Young Frank, a member of Oshawa's junior Memorial Cup champions last season, has been under the eyes of the Maple Leaf bosses since he left Verdun Maple Leafs a couple of seasons ago to join Oshawa. Only his age prevents him from making the jump into professional ranks.

"We didn't know just what to do in his case," said Conny Smythe, the Leaf general manager. "He's still eligible for junior hockey and we weren't so sure that we wanted him at training camp. But he seemed so eager we told him to come along."

The thing that prevents Eddolls hitting the money ranks for another two seasons is an agreement between the National Hockey League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association that junior players must not be signed to professional contracts.

A thick set boy weighing 175 pounds, Eddolls' ability to turn on a dime drew the admiration of Smythe and Coach Happy Day as they watched him pair with Chuck Shannon in a Leaf practice.

"He's my idea of a defensive defence player," said Day, who was one of the best in the N.H.L. for a decade. "He's seldom off balance and never out of position."

"You seldom see a short fellow able to work his feet the way that boy does," Smythe commented. "He must be double-jointed at the ankles to switch from side to side as fast as that."

Smythe said that Eddolls was recommended to him by the same scout who recommended Sweeney Schriner and Syl Apps. Schriner was plucked by New York Americans before the Leafs could act on their scout's advice, but the Leafs bought him from Americans last year and now he and Apps are two of the team's leaders.

"Judging from Eddolls' work out there this same scout is still picking sure things," Smythe added.

LEAVES TIGERS

Teddy Manorek, one of the best plunging backs in Canadian rugby who turned out with Hamilton Tigers this year, has turned in his playing togs. Manorek, a member of the Hamilton police force, decided to abide by the police department's ruling forbidding policemen to indulge in sports which might injure them and their standing in the police benefit association.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Now that colder weather has been in our midst for a few days, hockey chatter is beginning to be the chief topic of discussion around the barber shop stove leagues. The main question asked is—"What does the future hold for hockey in Belleville this winter, now that Ed Thomas has relinquished the reins?"

One thing is certain—now that a good juvenile puck loop has been organized in Belleville, its continuance should be assured for all time. Belleville's meagre effort in the sponsorship of juvenile hockey for the past three years has paid the greatest dividends of any sports project attempted in this city for many years. If no other hockey functions locally, President Frank Cunningham's juvenile group should come first.

In the junior O.H.A. bracket Messrs. Cook, Yanover and Holway are noncommittal at present but a junior team will be entered. The question of the advisability of dropping back to junior "C", or remaining in the junior "B" ranks is the big stumbling block confronting the junior hockey moguls, who have lost several of their 1939-40 squad due to the age limit. The lack of an adequate junior "B" group may force the Quintes into a "C" loop. The Trenton juniors are going to try and crash the Lake Shore group and join Port Hope, Cobourg and Bowmanville and that's fodder for thought locally.

Peterboro's Fred Craig and his Liftlock City contemporaries are viewing with alarm the future possibilities of district intermediate "A" group for O.H.A. competition, and perhaps Mr. Craig has reasons to become concerned but we hope not. Back in Belleville is Pete Morgan, former right wing speedster, who has been sojourning at hockey in Northern Ontario for the past few seasons. Late last season S. R. "Sandy" Burrows took over the intermediate franchise from Eddie Thomas, lock, stock and barrel and we know Ed was quite happy about the whole thing. But what about 1941? The future of the Redmen is clouded, they went through last season without registering the slightest resemblance of a win and unless additional playing strength is forthcoming the future doesn't seem to be any brighter. However, there is talk of a newly-organized industrial firm taking an interest in the local hockey picture and with a delayed residence rule now in effect, perhaps the future holds a brighter cloud.

Now for the question that no person seems ready to answer—what about the R.C.A.F. "Flyers"? Andy Reekie, director of sports at the R.C.A.F. base, personally informed us there would be no O.H.A. teams at the Airport this winter, their activities being purely intramural, if he had his way. However, Laurie Gibsson, who is President of the R.C.A.F. Sports Club, has other ideas, that is if he and his cohorts can function outside the Flyers' sports organization. It is quite possible the individual players at the Airport may organize their own hockey team, as several high-class pucksters are reported to be in training at the Trenton centre at present, which is about enough for a short resume of the local hockey picture for the present at least. The next time we hope to have more concrete information of an encouraging nature.

Do you remember when Frank Boucher, the famous Ottawa-born former centreman, was appointed assistant manager and coach of the New York Rangers of the N.H.L. one year ago today? More recently, however, Lester Patrick named Boucher as coach of the Rangers and in full charge of the team, Patrick retiring to the front office.

Last week's main wrestling bout at the Hume Arena proved anything but satisfactory, the fans grumbling to no end regarding the Pavich-George affair and rightly so. Sensing the patrons were in anything but a happy mood the local grappling promoters got their heads together and decided the only way to get back into the good graces of the grappling public was to engage some better known matman and when they swung into action their results were surprising. Right off the top came Jerry Savold, the Michigan Herculean giant, to meet the Masked Marvel, the latter getting himself very much disliked for his pugnacious attack on Tom Wells last week. The "hooded horror" is a young up-and-coming grappler and Savold will have his hands full in this scrap. Then Al Dunlop, once a villain but now a local favourite, meets George Pavich and it's safe in assuming Pavich will not try any of his fistic attacks on the veteran Dunlop, but on the contrary will have to resort to some orthodox wrestling or else get his ears pinned back. This card is just what the patrons have demanded, here it is for your entertainment.

Judging from the results of yesterday's junior Interscholastic six-man football games it appears as though the city title will be decided between St. Michael's Academy and the Belleville Collegiate sextettes. Cliff Yerex's "Collegians" ran rough shod over the O.S.D. kids winning 68 to 0, while Jack Doran's "Irish" sank the Albert College sextette 17 to 1. Both St. Mike's and the Collegians boast of powerful strong linemen, who make deep indentations in the oppositions' defence, thus accounting for the high scores. Incidentally Coach Jim Rickaby of the O.S.D., was forced to select a complete new team for this season, after winning the group honors in 1939. So young and inexperienced were the kids from the Deaf school, that they failed to gain a single scrimmage during the second half of their game with the Collegiate, but another year and the Deaf lads won't be the push-overs they were yesterday. They average 15 years of age.

Leaving London For Weekend Like Taking Vacation

By FRANK BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 19 (CP).—Leaving London for a week-end is like taking a fortnight's vacation in peacetime.

Early one Saturday morning after my night's work as office boy in The Canadian Press Bureau, I caught a train that took me to a town about fifty miles west of London. A salvo of bombs that fell 500 yards away sped me on my way.

When I reached the town I was told that the sirens had wailed only twice since the start of the intensified air war. London in the same period had received more than 100 warnings.

Shopping centres were open and thronged with people who took their time, not, as in London, rushing to get home before the next warning sounded. There were no glass-littered streets to walk through and gas masks were rarely seen.

Cinemas were packed, and at seven o'clock, instead of people lining up before air raid shelters, they lined up for movies.

Night fell and no sirens came. For the first time in a month I had an uninterrupted sleep.

The following day I returned to London. As the train pulled into the station, the sirens began to scream. I knew I was home.

DECLARES MONEY

we lose the war our money will have no value."

Col. Drew predicted that before the war ends the products of Canadian soil will play as big a part in victory as other materials being sent from the country in the national war effort. He believed that the hunger of Hitler's conquered people and the promise of food from Canada would force those people to throw off the Hitler yolk.

Mr. Dewan said that despite the possibility of surpluses in farm products, Canadian farmers must produce to their full capacity as "it is better to have over-production than under-production."

Not Taking War Serious Enough.

Premier Hepburn said the Canadian people were not taking the war seriously enough. "Do we have to face an actual invasion before we realize our national security is at stake?"

He said Canada had drifted into a state of apathy while Hitler, "with rubber money", built a vast mechanized force with which he seized nine European capitals. The trouble in Canada had been that millions had been spent on relief while Hitler was producing arms.

"We were afraid of this money problem. We said we had strong money and were safe."

He said: "We must not put money in the driver's seat. It must be no consideration when our national security is at stake. You can't bankrupt the national authority. That authority can pay off debts with newly issued currency. We must not use this national debt as a bogey.

"All our bonds are purchased by the people of Canada. Increase our debt by 10 billion and we have a corresponding increase held in bonds in the hands of those who loaned the money. Apply taxation and it may be levelled out."

During his address, Mr. Hepburn thanked President Roosevelt for separating the navigation and water diversion issue from the power issue in the recently-announced plan between Canada and the United States concerning the St. Lawrence waterway development.

Declares Ontario Will Benefit

He said Ontario would benefit from the new plan by having adequate power available so there would be no danger of a shortage. On the other hand, he said he always had known that the canalization of the St. Lawrence River for transportation was not feasible and "surely Canada has enough over-production of transportation."

The final day's attendance at the ploughing match was estimated at 75,000 which brought the total attendance for the four days close to the 200,000 mark.

In the contests 19-year-old Ronald Marquis of Sunderland, Ont., was named top ploughboy with a total of 80 1-2 points. He was a member of the victorious Ontario county team which won the Inter-county competition with 219 1-2 points. Morley Paish and Howard Thaxter of Uxbridge were other members of the team.

NEW JAPANESE MINISTER TO CANADA ARRIVES IN OTTAWA

A bloody fight broke out on the San Francisco waterfront when members of the A.F. of L. sailors' union fought their way through a picket line established by the C.I.O. ship scalers' and painters' union. A jurisdictional dispute between the two unions was blamed for the establishment of the picket line.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at the paper and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, saying, The world is upside down, wrong side out and standing on its head.

Dont remind me, ma said, and pop said. From the near East to the far West there is nothing but upheaving, down-tearing and cross purposes.

Now Willyum, I've been delibritly skipping every depressing headline, Men are tearing down each others fields and blowing apart each others friends.

For land sakes Willyum I'm reading about the wholesale hardware mens convention, in which I have no intrist whatever, just to keep my eyes away from war news, so why do you have to harp and harp? ma said, and pop said, Depth bombs splitting the depths of the sea and torpedoes churning its surface and bersting shells blotting out the sun above, everywhere turmoil and confusion and black outs and smash ins and rack and ruin, nowhere to go to and fewer places to come from.

Now Willyum I've had enough, ma said, and pop said, Then why do you persist in reminding me?

Me reminding you, how, for land sakes? ma said, and pop said, By the fearful and wonderful way you're mishandling that newspaper that I haven't even glanced at yet for Peet sake. There's not a crease where it ought to be, its poor insides are hanging and dangling in pitiful folds and revolting angles, it looks as though a tornado had hit it just where a cyclone had left off and you expect me to sit here with a thing like that before my very eyes and still keep my mind off the upset state of the world, it's perposterous.

And so are you, I intend to hand you this paper exactly the way I found it, ma said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 19.—(CP)— The Toronto Stock Market today was enlivened in the closing session of the week by the buoyancy and active trading in Preston. It registered an advance of 24 cents to $2.60 on turnover of about 30,000 shares up till noon. Gold shares generally were a bit soft and other groups were practically unchanged. Turnover for the first two hours was around 150,000 shares.

Profit-taking on the week's rise resulted in minor recessions for Coniaurum, Perron, Senator, and Kirkland Lake. Chesterville was higher at $1.19 and Upper Canada firmed 2 cents to $1.45.

Base Metals were dull. Steep Rock weakened 3 cents to $1.45 and Ventures was 3 cents up at $2.73.

Industrials had their quietest day in weeks and the pivotal issues remained steady in price. Silverwoods gained a point to 4. Abitibi Common weakened 5 to 75 and other newsprints were unchanged. Goodyear Pfd. at 55 was up 1-2.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Stock market leaders loitered in narrow territory today as traders displayed their usual week-end apathy. While small gains were to be seen in most departments, fractional declines were equally well distributed at the start of the final hour.

Ahead occasionally were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, General Electric, Dupont, Kennecott, American Telephone, Loew's and Texas Corp.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Oct. 19 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at Stratford and Hull, bacon-hog markets reporting today.

Dressedweight: Stratford $11.50 plus transportation, Hull $11.30.

Prices were unchanged at Chatham, liveweight $8.25, dressedweight $11.15.

MERCURY DIPS TO 18 DEGREES

Coldest Night Since March Causes Damage to Crops Not Harvested

The city and district shivered last night under the lowest temperatures since the snowy days of March. The mercury dipped to 18 degrees in the coldest night of the season.

In some parts of the city private thermometers registered two degrees below the official mark of 18, early this morning.

Curling smoke spiralling into a cloudy sky early today bespoke the activities of householders who awakened to the chill of a frosty morning. Ice was frozen solidly in many parts of the city while creeks, ponds and other bodies of water had a firm covering.

Apples in the orchards of the district, which awaited picking were damaged to some extent, farmers stated, but only in a few isolated cases are heavy crops of the fruit yet to be harvested. Some pumpkins were spoiled but in the main this crop has been taken to barns or canning factories.

The weather man does not give much hope for a respite, in fact he predicts showers with cold north winds for the week-end .

TURNS PHEASANT OVER TO GAME WARDEN

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 19 (AP) — Ernie Reusch was in his garage checking his car preparatory to a hunting trip. Pheasant season was due to open in two days. Into the garage walked a fine pheasant rooster. After a struggle Reusch succeeded in "bagging" it—with a wicker basket. But he didn't eat it. Not sure it was a fair catch, he turned it over to the game warden.

ELECTRIC PHOSPHOROUS FURNACE EXPLODES

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Oct. 19 (AP) —An electric phosphorous furnace exploded in an electro-chemical factory here late yesterday, resulting in the death of one man and injuries to seven others. Coroner Harry R. Emes identified the dead man as Charles Hardie, 61, and said his body had been burned from head to foot by molten fluid from the furnace.

Better Eggs Advance Butter Steady

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Further sharp advances occurred on top-grade eggs on the Toronto market this week because of scarce supplies and good demands on these grades. The gains of 6 to 7 cents a dozen imparted a stronger price trend to the lower grades. Pullets came in for more attention, although these receipts still showed slight accumulation and a better movement of eggs out of storage also was evident. Three cars were shipped to the Maritimes for export overseas and another car was being assembled for shipment early next week. Government inspected lots of graded eggs moved at one cent per dozen premium during the week.

The butter market made little headway following the brisk rise during the previous two weeks, but the undertone remained firm as day-to-day buying proved sufficient to keep the light offerings of storage and fresh make butter clearing steadily. While an odd lot was reported sold early yesterday afternoon at 27½ cents a pound, No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids closed the week ¼ cent higher at 27¾ cents.

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Produce market prices here yesterday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter — First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29c; first-grade solids, jobbing price, 28½c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, current receipt price, 27¾c; Quebec No. 2, 26½c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, fresh and regraded, wholesale jobbing price, 28½c; Quebec No. 2, 27½c. Receipts: 547 boxes.

JAPAN WILL GET OIL EXPORTS FROM EAST INDIES

Agreement Covering the Exports Signed in Batavia

BRITAIN WATCHING

Tokyo, Oct. 19—(AP)—The newspaper Asahi reported today in a dispatch from Batavia conclusion of an agreement governing oil exports from The Netherlands East Indies to Japan. No details were given.

A Japanese mission has been in Batavia for some time discussing economic relations between the two countries.

Japan has been interested in maintaining and increasing her petroleum exports from The Netherland East Indies because of anxiety lest the United States place a complete embargo on oil shipments to Japan.

Asahi said that discussion of other economic issues is continuing at Batavia.

London, Oct. 19—(CP)—Authoritative sources said today Great Britain is watching closely negotiations Japan is conducting in an effort to get high Octane gasoline from The Netherlands East Indies.

"There is no likelihood of immediate agreement," it was said, "since the Dutch output is earmarked for Britain."

Japanese were forced to seek new sources of high Octane gas recently because of the United States embargo, it was explained.

Trenton Woman Seriously Injured When She Collides With Truck Trailer

Believed Mrs. Flora Clarke Sustained Fractured Back in Accident

TRENTON MARKET

Trenton, Oct. 19 — Mrs. Flora Clarke was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital this morning in a very critical condition. It is believed she is suffering from a fractured back as the result of an accident that happened on Dundas Street on Wednesday afternoon.

The injured lady was walking across Dundas Street from the Gilbert House to the Post Office when she came into collision with the trailer of a truck driven by Donald Brick. The lady was knocked to the pavement by one of the protruding beams of the trailer.

Fowl Story

There are hitch hikers of various kinds, but one of the Air Force truck drivers ran into a new kind of hitch hiker yesterday afternoon. The driver returning from the bombing range found that there was a large turkey perched on the floor of his truck.

The driver reported the incident to Chief W. Bain and the bird was left with the police until the owner should claim it. In case the owner does not claim it the truck driver will have the greater part of a turkey dinner, when the turkey is turned over to him.

Trentonians are either getting careless with their money or they are throwing it away. This morning two purses were found by honest townsmen, who promptly turned them over to the police. One purse was claimed by its owner, Mrs. R. W. Winters of Scott Street, but the other purse with a considerable amount of money has not been claimed.

Trenton Market

Prices on the Trenton market took an upswing this morning with eggs reaching a new high of 40c a dozen for grade "A" selects. Second grade eggs were sold for 37c a dozen. Butter also took a jump selling at 30 cents the pound and 55c for the two-pound roll.

Vegetables remained fairly constant, with last week's prices, with the exception of tomatoes that were slightly higher in price and fewer in quantity. Frost is reported to have killed and frozen all tomatoes in the field and only those that were picked before the frost were offered on the market.

18,000 Candidates To Write Civil Service Examinations

Ottawa, Oct. 19—(CP)—Approximately one-third of the 18,000 candidates who write civil service examinations across Canada today will be selected for employment, a spokesman at the Civil Service Commission said today.

While no fixed pass standard will be set, enough high-ranking candidates to meet the needs of the commission will be chosen, he said.

The examinations are for grade one and grade two clerks needed to staff new government departments set up since the war began, and to provide for expansion in others. Registered packages containing examination forms have been mailed to presiding officers in centres through Canada. They will be returned to Ottawa as soon as the examinations are written.

Instead of the usual three papers, the examination this year will be limited to one. Questions in arithmetic, spelling and English, others to test applicants' general intelligence and accuracy constitute the test.

In Ottawa alone, 6,600 candidates from Ottawa and vicinity will throng local schools to write the examination.

ROME HINTS AT NEGOTIATIONS

Usually Reliable Circles Say Talks Will be Launched Between Axis and Russia

Rome, Oct. 19 (AP).—Usually reliable circles said today that negotiations between the axis powers and Russia for an understanding over future policies "probably" will be launched in the near future.

If such negotiations take place, some foreign observers say, they may envisage fixing Russia's sphere of influence in the Near East in the event of trouble between the axis and Turkey.

Germany, in such an event, supposedly would seek Moscow's assurance that Russia would not interfere in the Dardanelles in exchange for a free hand in Iran and Afghanistan.

(The Soviet News Agency, Tass, last night denied a Japanese report that Russia planned a conference with Japan, Germany and Italy. "The report does not correspond to reality," the agency said.)

JAPANESE CLAIM

A Domei, Japanese News Agency, dispatch from Bombay said 2,000 trucks made in the United States were leaving for Chungking as part of the supply-laden caravans which started for China yesterday.

The announcement by the Japanese South China Fleet headquarters that the road had been bombed indicated that the Japanese planes struck from nearby, newly-acquired bases in French Indo-China.

Squadron Leader Reports.

A Japanese squadron leader was quoted as reporting:

"Although clouds hampered visibility near the Yunnan Province-Indo China border, the sky was clear when we appeared over the route, permitting us to score direct hits on a bridge forming our main objective. There was no opposition in the sky or on the ground."

Domei reported that one bombed bridge spanned the Lantsang river, forming the upper reaches of the Me-Kong river in Yunnan Province between Kunming and Chungking.

The Japanese army announced the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Jun Ushirogu as commander in chief of the South China Expeditionary Forces succeeding Lieut. Gen. Rikichi Ando, moved to the army general staff.

5. Abdication of King George II of Greece, resignation of Premier-Dictator John Metaxas and formation of a pro-axis government.

Greece Friend of Britain

Greece stands as one of Great Britain's two remaining friends in the Balkans and holds a British pledge of assistance in case of attack. Turkey, Britain's other friend, has indicated she would come to the aid of Greece in the event of an axis thrust.

(Observers regarded the inclusion of the Bulgarian demand as highly significant. Bulgaria, an ally of Germany in the last war, has called for restoration of the Aegean strip, taken from her after 1918, for many years.

(Intervention by the axis powers aided Bulgaria only last month in obtaining satisfaction of long-standing demands on Rumania for return of southern Dobruja.)

(Coupled with the reported axis demands on Greece, the recall yesterday of Radu Ginvara, Rumanian Minister to Greece, took on added significance as possible evidence of pressure.)

Metaxas Greece's Strong Man

Premier John Metaxas has been Greece's "strong man" since the coup d'etat of Aug. 4, 1936, when he dissolved the Chamber of Deputies, suspended civil rights and took the portfolios of foreign affairs, war, marine, air and education for himself.

He was Minister of War in a non-partisan cabinet when the monarchy of George II was restored in 1935, and became Premier in April of the next year. His state was modelled, with modifications, on the Italian form of government and under his rule relations with Turkey and Italy improved. Most modifications, on the Italian form of government and under his rule relations with Turkey and Italy improved. Most of the nation's trade was with Germany.

When Italy invaded Albania, however, Greece moved into Great Britain's sphere of influence. Her regular army is 65,000 strong, but she recently was estimated to have about 100,000 men under arms. Military service is compulsory for men between the ages of 21 and 50.

Demands Imminent Says Press

Rome, Oct. 19—(AP)—Relazioni Internationali, a Fascist weekly, indicated today that German and Italian demands on Greece and Turkey to bring their governmental policies in line with the axis are imminent.

"Italian influence on the Balkans and Mediterranean countries is destined to have future developments," the paper said. "This influence, in relation to war necessities, is henceforth not to be restrained."

Diplomatic circles in Rome regarded as "at least premature," reports from Cairo that the axis already has made demands on Greece. Italian authorities said they knew nothing of such reported demands.

Berlin Denies Story

Berlin, Oct. 19—(AP)—Informed sources denied today that any demands had been made on Greece as reported from Cairo.

These sources said, however, that if Greek diplomats had inquired in Berlin or Rome concerning the axis attitude toward Greece, they were assured that so long as Greece has a British guarantee she must be considered a friend of Great Britain.

CHIPPEWA-CREE INDIANS PROTEST SELECTIVE SERVICE

Great Falls, Mont., Oct. 19 (AP)—Representatives of the Chippewa-Cree Indians attending the annual Montana Indian Convention contend the Selective Service Act conflicts with the treaty they signed in 1870 in which they agree never to take up arms against a human being. A committee was named to meet at Helena with the Montana Selective Service Board to protest the drafting of any Indians covered by the treaty.

QUEBEC PREMIER MAY BECOME A FEDERAL MINISTER

LAPOINTE MAY QUIT

Montreal, Oct. 19 (CP) — The Gazette, in a story from Ottawa, today says that many in political circles there are "expressing open conviction that it is by no means impossible," that Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec may become Minister of Agriculture in the Federal cabinet.

Among the "plausible enough arguments advanced by the arm-chair prophets" the Gazette lists the opinion "that French-Canada's leader of Parliament Hill, Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, is aiming to retire from active public life because of indifferent health."

The paper adds that a new "white hope from the banks of the lower St. Lawrence will eventually have to be groomed" to take Mr. Lapointe's place, and says that "Mr. Lapointe had publicly designated the Quebec Premier as his successor, not once, but several times."

No Confirmation Available

Ottawa, Oct. 19 (CP)—No confirmation was available here today of a story published in the Montreal Gazette which said Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec may become Minister of Agriculture in the Federal cabinet.

However, if Mr. Godbout were appointed, he would not be the first agriculture minister from Quebec since Hon. Sidney Fisher served in that capacity for some years under Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It was assumed here that reference in the Gazette to the possibility Mr. Godbout would "succeed" Justice Minister Lapointe was in reference to Mr. Lapointe's position as leading Quebec member of the cabinet, not as Minister of Justice. Mr. Godbout is not a lawyer, and government sources do not consider he would be suitable for the Justice post.

Recently, some western interests have taken the position that the portfolio of agriculture is so important with the western wheat situation as it is that the present Agriculture Minister, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, could not fill that post satisfactorily and at the same time act as Minister of National War Services.

Hitler's Horoscope Showed September 16 As Last Day to Attempt Invasion of Britain

New York, Oct. 19. — (CP) — Under Hitler's horoscope as set up for the eclipse of the sun last April 7 his last auspicious day for an attempt to invade Great Britain was Sept. 16—the day the Royal Air Force bombed an invasion army out of its ships along the German-held French coast.

Observers recalled, following announcement in London of the successful R.A.F. attack, that on Sept. 14 Cmdr. Walter M. Wynne, United States Navy, retired, remarked in an interview here that if Hitler's actions are based on his astrological portents, as reputed in some quarters, his best time for an invasion attempt would be two days later, Sept. 16.

At the time Cmdr. Wynne, who termed himself an engineer and astronomer who dabbles in astrology, said the horoscope set under the eclipse of the sun of April 7 fitted in with every move the Fuehrer has made against Britain.

At the time of the interview, Cmdr. Wynne said the invasion attempt would be "risky—the Nazis will be hindered by the fact that the moon will suffer an appulse, or semi-eclipse, a sign of weakness."

Oct. 1 was the date of the sun's next eclipse when a new horoscope fo rthe Fueherer was to have been set.

Eighteen persons were reported drowned in the City of Gerona, 53 miles northeast of Barcelona, when a bridge was swept away. Water ran deep in Gerona's streets, reaching the balconies of homes in low places

Gen. Franco ordered relief sent to the families of flood victims. The Ministry of the Interior headed a list of donations with 100,000 pesetas (approximately $9,000).

Fear Dispelled

Fear for the safety of students of Sacred Heart College in Manlleu was dispelled by frequent broadcasts over Spanish radio stations saying that all were safe and that marines were being sent with food and clothing.

Virtually all towns on the lower side of the Llebregat River near Barcelona were flooded. Crops in that fertile valley were ruined. Poultry and livestock losses were heavy. Damaged gas, water and communication systems added to the distress of flood victims.

Other towns where casualties occurred were Manlleu, Cornella, Molins Del Rey, San Baudilio, Hospitalet, Martorell and Pratt De Llobregat.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELIZABETH J. EARLE

After an illness of one week's duration, Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Earle, residence, 224 Ann Street, and widow of Harry C. Earle, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital early this Saturday morning.

The late Mrs. Earle was born in Shannonville, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Milton Williams. Forty years ago she came to make her home in Belleville and during her residence here she held a high place in the esteem of all who knew her. In religion she was a member of Bridge Street United Church.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Record Yield of Carrots Reported

Indicative of the splendid yield which is sometimes realized from certain small seed garden produce, is the record of seventeen bushels of carrots grown from only 10 cents worth of carrot seed by Mr. Cecil Sine of the 5th of Sidney. Mr. Sine said that he planted the carrots in three short rows and was surprised at the yield which such a small amount of seed produced.

Ringing Challenge to Democracy Given by Albert College Principal

Dr. Howard Predicts New World Will Arise Out of Present Chaos

FULL OF OPTIMISM

A ringing challenge to a democracy that is "soft, decadent and flabby", one that should be the concern of everyone, was issued by the Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College in an address before the Baptist Brotherhood in the dining hall of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Thursday night.

Democracy in Canada, seventy per cent of which is "soft and decadent" should be a challenge to every Canadian citizen," Dr. Howard said.

We, as a people are greatly blessed, Dr. Howard pointed out. No words can express how we ought to feel regarding our blessings. He urged his listeners to take two pieces of paper and write down their blessings and their "tough breaks." Compare them, he said, and see how grateful you should be for the good things that have come to you. Optimism in a world of darkness is a priceless thing. The letters received from overseas, the speaker said, "are appalling but exude a spirit of optimism, that is beyond all price. Such expressions as "Jerry thinks he has us licked" call for real heart-searching on our parts."

Hold Heads High

People should hold their heads high, and look up, not down, he continued. This in itself is a challenge to men. Referring to religion, Dr. Howard charged that the men in the churches today are not "pulling their weight." The women are doing it. If the small groups of men, that are the backbone of the churches would expand, great things could be achieved.

He predicted that out of the present chaos a new world would arise, quoting the Right Hon. Churchill: "They can destroy every building in London but that doesn't say they have defeated us, as out of the ruins shall rise a greater London than ever before and a greater and grander people." That, Dr. Howard declared, is looking forward not backward, and we, as Canadians can do no better than follow this advice.

Urged All to Help

In conclusion, the speaker urged that everyone "lend a hand." There are men the world over, who are ready and willing to do their job for the world and their very actions constitute a challenge to all to help them to the very limit. "Playing ball is the greatest game the Empire has ever had to play," he said. 'Let us all play the game."

The guest speaker was introduced to the members of the brotherhood by its president Charles Franklin, while the Rev. Claude T. Olmstead, minister of the church, closed the meeting with a prayer and benediction.

Prior to the address a delicious supper was served by members of one of the young ladies' classes of the church. Several important business problems were discussed during this part of the meeting. J. L. "Teddy" Gerow led a hymn sing at the meeting, that was well attended.

Although Bob Burns "growed" down in the Ozarks around Van Buren, Arkansas, it's easy to tell where his family originated by the expert manner in which he handles the bagpipes. Bob's new Paramount picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain" opens at the Capitol Theatre. Old Timer, of the Fibber McGee radio program, who has an important role in the film, seems to be having more difficulty handling the bazooka.

Checkerboard Love

By JOSEPH McCORD

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was almost lunch time the following day when Judge Castle arrived home from the city and greeted his newly returned son. "But where's Olive?" was almost his first question. "I particularly wanted to see her."

"I left her at home," was the brief explanation.

"When do you expect her down?"

"Soon, I dare say."

After that the conversation among the three Castles was of a general nature, devoted largely to an account of the wedding trip, business and political conditions as Jeffrey had observed them. When the trio left the table, Mrs. Castle smilingly remarked that she would retire to her room for a little while. "Jeffrey," his father announced, "I have an errand before we settle down to a visit. I shall need the car. Tell Dean that you will drive for me, if you don't mind."

"I'll be very glad to, sir." Jeffrey was experiencing a momentary thankfulness. He had intended to blurt out the bad news to his father without any preliminaries, once they were alone. But this made it easy to postpone the ordeal.

Down at the road gates, the Judge indicated a left turn and did not speak until they neared the Ross estate. "In here, please, Jeffrey." The latter negotiated the circular drive in some surprise, brought the machine to a stop at the foot of the porch steps.

"I've a key somewhere," the Judge said. "The deed and title search for this place came through the office not long since. Quinn looked after it for us." He stepped heavily from the car. "I have been curious to see the general condition of things. Come along. Let's have a look."

Jeffrey followed his parent without much enthusiasm, helped him with the door and the two began a circuit of the cheerless rooms.

"I should say that it is in excellent shape," the Judge decided when the inspection ended. "You know it was never occupied. Poor John Ross died before he saw the place finished. Attractive, don't you think, Jeffrey?"

"Quite. But a fire would make it a lot more comfortable this morning. It feels much better out in the car."

"Surely. We'll go back." When he dropped into the seat beside his son he lifted one gloved hand, indicating that the latter wait before starting the motor. "How do you like that house, my boy?" he inquired abruptly.

Jeffrey felt his heart sink. It was his first premonition of a fresh disaster. "Nice place," he managed dully.

"Do you think it will appeal to Olive?"

"To Olive?"

"Come now, Jeffrey. I will concede your astonishment, but there is no occasion for such denseness." Judge George gave vent to a throaty chuckle. "This is your home from now on, my son . . . and Olive's! A little gift from your mother and me." The words seemed to be coming from some distance off. "We've always known that we couldn't keep you at home," Jeff heard dimly. "But it has been our pet dream to have you close by so that we could enjoy our grandchildren."

Jeffrey sat staring at his father with such a vacant expression that the Judge emitted an exasperated, "Well, what ails you?"

Almost from the hour of his arrival, Jeff Castle had been rehearsing various interviews with his father. He had come to the conclusion that there was but one way to handle the situation. That was to be curt and incisive, make it clear that he must manage his life and affairs in the way he thought best. Here it was now. But instead of curtness and incisiveness [illegible] voice, there was only discouraged appeal. It was almost as [illegible] a small boy again, trying to muster courage to confess to a misdemeanor.

"I . . . I wish I had known about that, father. Wish you had told me. It's perfectly swell of you and mother. But it's like this. I'm not just sure how much of the time we'll be here in Parville after this. You see . . ." he waited miserably. At all events, it was out.

"No, sir. I confess that I do not see at all."

"Well, it seems since we've been away, Father . . . that is, Olive likes the city. You see she's never lived in a small town or in the country and the idea sort of gets her down."

"Interesting, really. May I ask where she does intend to live? Most women follow their husbands. As long as your work is here, I do not see how you can maintain a home elsewhere."

"That's it. She wants me to take a position in her father's office. Mr. Harrison has been kind enough to . . . to arrange it."

"What sort of a position? What are your duties?"

"Oh, executive of some sort. We really haven't threshed out the details, naturally."

"Naturally. But you are thinking of allowing your wife to support you."

"Of course I'm not! Harrison's is a huge concern. There is no reason why there can't be a future in it for a young man."

"But not for you, Jeffrey. It is only a polite way of writing you off as a family liability. You are aware of that. And you will learn that they have not the slightest need for your services. I wonder that you can accept that situation. We spoke of it once before, prior to your marriage. You were quite independent then. You led me to believe that you would settle down here as we had planned so many times."

"You don't quite understand, father. I . . ."

"I understand this much. You accepted an education. You have accepted money and travel . . . all leading to one thing. Now that the time has come for your parents to expect a happy return for their investment in you . . . not to mention sacrifices . . . you decide that the country and the law are not suited to your attainments. Is that what you wish me to infer?"

"No, I do not! You seem to forget that I am married, Father. My wife does not wish to live in Parville. What's more, she WON'T live in Parville. What am I expected to do? Forego my own happiness just to carry out traditions which I had no part in making, come and live by myself in this new house? I'm sorry, but that's how it stands."

"I presume," the Judge went on coldly, without apparent heed to the outburst, "that this was all arranged before you were married. Did you know it then, Jeffrey, or did you not?"

"I did not. Well, Olive had spoken of it, I'll admit. But I felt very sure that when the time came she would be glad to do whatever seemed best for me."

"I dare say that would be her explanation now," was the dry retort.

"Father, you are talking about my wife. She is the woman I love, and she loves me."

"If that is modern married love," the Judge snapped, "I am profoundly thankful for my generation. I presume there is no more to be said. This house is still yours, of course. I will see that the deed is turned over to you before you leave us. Drive on, if you will."

Not another word was exchanged between the two men until the car turned into the wooded road leading up to the Castle house. Jeffrey turned appealingly to his father. "See here, sir!" he exclaimed. "I can't let it stand like this, if there is any way out of it. I'm thinking about that house. I know that Olive was under the impression that if we came here we would live with you and Mother for the time being. A real home like the one you have given us may appeal to her. She could have her horses and all that sort of thing . . . don't say anything to Mother yet. I'll drive back tonight and have a talk with Olive tomorrow morning. Don't you think it would be a good idea?"

"You are a better judge than I, Jeffrey." The older man's voice sounded suddenly tired. "Did you tell Quinn that you were not going to remain here?"

"Yes. He was thinking about leaving."

"But he will remain now?"

"He wasn't sure. Said he would have to think it over."

"He will stay here, by gad!" the Judge retorted explosively. "I do not intend to be let down by everybody."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Scatterbrain"

Judy Canova in "Scatterbrain" one of the biggest laugh hits to come out of Hollywood, is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre for the last time. Do not let anything stop you from seeing this fun and musical show. The program also presents John Wayne in "The Man From Monterey", a splendid story of old California.

"So This Is London"

There's an American, an Englishman, as well as a devastating blonde somnambulist in "So This Is London," the 20th Century-Fox release which is coming next to the McCarthy Theatre, starring the famous English comedy team of Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton with George Sanders.

The Englishman can't understand Americans, and the American won't bother to comprehend Englishmen—while the blonde sleep-walker puzzles them both in a film that is fun from beginning to end. "So This Is London" maintains all the hilarity it had when it was produced on the stage with George M. Cohan in the starring role.

The cast also includes: Berton Churchill, Fay Compton, Carla Lehmann, Stewart Granger, Lily Cahill, Mavis Clair, Ethel Revnell and Gracie West.

A twenty minute musical comedy hit, "I Dream of Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair", an amusing Krazy Kat Kartoon and latest McCarthy-Fox News Events, presenting splendid scenes of Canadian Fliers going into action in battle for defence of Britain.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Comin' Round the Mountain"

A new high in co-operation between motion pictures and radio in appealing to movie audiences is reached in Paramount's new Bob Burns starring picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain," opening with a preview performance which numbers eight well known radio personalities in its cast.

Formerly little credence was given radio names as potential screen personalities and eyebrows lifted along Film Row when Jack Benny made "Man About Town" with Phil Harris and Eddie (Rochester) Anderson in the cast.

Bob Hope caused some consternation when he took Jerry Colonna from his air show into the cast of "Road to Singapore" but this, like "Man About Town" was a smash hit.

Benny went overboard when he made "Buck Benny Rides Again" with not only Harris and Rochester from his radio show, but Andy Devine and Dennis Day as well.

Following these successes, Paramount snatched the Aldrich Family from the airways for its recent production of "What A Life," and the results were so gratifying that a second picture was put into production called "Life With Henry," which will feature the Aldriches.

Paramount also bought the title of the popular air show, "I Want a Divorce," and commissioned the high salaried Adela Rogers St. John to write a screen play around it—then cast Dick Powell, now of radio, in the leading role.

In "Comin' Round the Mountain" Paramount has, beside Bob Burns and Una Merkel, a host of outstanding radio stars, many of whom are newcomers to the screen. They are, Pat Barrett, better known as Uncle Ezra of Rosedale; Mayor Gildersleeve and the Old Timer of the Fibber McGee program; Don Wilson of Jack Benny's show; Jerry (Yahoodi) Colonna; "Mirandy" and Cliff Arquette, that Slap-happy Granpappy.

AT THE BELLE

"Lucky Partners"

Bracketing two of the screen's top favorites for the first time, "Lucky Partners," brings Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers to the Belle Theatre today in what is said to be the sprightliest comedy-romance of the season.

From the ultra-modern, sophisticated pen of Sacha Guitry, "Lucky Partners" cast Colman as David Grant, an artist with a secret past and Miss Rogers as Jean, a clerk in her aunt's Greenwich Village book shop.

Jean is engaged to Poughkeepsie's coming tycoon, Freddie, and as soon as she earns a bank account for emergencies, she plans to marry him. Circumstances cause Jean to believe that David brings her good luck, and she urges him to join her in the purchase of a sweepstakes ticket.

Intrigued with the idea, David agrees, but on one condition—that Jean shall accompany him on a platonic honeymoon before she weds Freddie. Freddie, it seems, believes the nuptial journey is a waste of time and money, whereas David considers the event essential. This honeymoon, David assures Jean will be strictly make-believe; they'll travel like brother and sister.

Jean consents, dubiously. However, they draw a horse, and Freddie secretly sells the ticket, which yields $6,000. David considers the event essential. This falls on the first leg of their trip, hotly pursued by Freddie who has come to the conclusion that he doesn't trust David after all.

How David and Jean fall in love with one another without daring to reveal it, the complications caused by Freddie's arrival, and David's solution of the problem by running off and starting back to New York, only to be arrested on a charge of theft, all lead up to the hilarious climax of the picture. A trial scene during which David's real identity and the secret of his odd behavior is revealed, and the satisfactory conclusion of the hectic romance, are featured in this fast-moving ending.

As the erratic and gallant David, Colman has his best screen role in years. Ginger's interpretation of Jean is delightful. Jack Carson has his best opportunity to date as the self-satisfied Freddie, while Spring Byington as the heroine's aunt, Harry Davenport as a judge and Cella Boftus and Brandon Tynan as an elderly married couple, enact the principal supporting roles.

"Putt-Putt Trouble" is the title of a very funny Donald Duck cartoon to be presented with the popular Belle News Reel.

Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 21 (AP)—Reports that Russian-Turkish military talks had been instituted and that Turkish military preparation was increasing along the strategic Dardanelles—gateway to the Near East—were heard today in the Balkans.

At the same time, Rumania inaugurated a blackout for Bucharest and the nearby oil fields.

Travellers from Turkey said in Athens that railway lines to Adrianople, a Turkish city in territory wedged between the Bulgarian and Greek borders, were jammed with troop trains, while 500,000 Turkish troops were said to be already in the region of the Dardanelles.

A rumor that Soviet-Turkish military talks were under way in Adrianpole was carried by the Budapest newspaper, Magyar Nemzet, while other unconfirmed reports said the Turks were building new fortifications and communications.

Why The Weather?

Science Service Meteorologist

Winter storms! Weather moves. Its speed is determined by the speed of the storms or cyclones. In the United States and in Canada, winter cyclones which are soon to commence move eastward about 700 miles a day; that is, it takes them about four or five days to cross the continent. This greater activity is due entirely to the greater temperature difference between the north and the south. While the south gets colder in winter as well as the north, the greater differences occur in winter as well as the north, the greater differences occur in winter because the north gets colder in proportion. In summer, it may be remembered the midafternoon temperatures in parts of Canada are often higher than those in New Orleans.

New Steps Taken To Expedite Removal Of People to Safety

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—The Government took new steps today to expedite the removal of London's civilian population to places of safety outside the capital and improve the lot of those compelled to stay in the danger zone.

Malcolm MacDonald, Minister of Health, told authorities in the reception areas to use their compulsory billeting powers "without hesitation where necessary and to make the fullest possible of empty houses."

He disclosed that many civilians are arranging themselves to leave London and this exodus, together with the government removals, necessitates more extensive use of the billeting system.

To eliminate long lines in front of public air raid shelters used for sleeping, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, authorized the London Civil Defence region to issue admission tickets as an experiment.

"I have been anxious to do away as soon as and as far as possible with the abomination of the queue," Mr. Morrison said.

"The people of London have quite enough to put up with at present without the hardship and waste of time involved in queueing up for shelter or arriving in the shelter hours beforehand to reserve places."

He added that the scheme would begin with a few shelters.

Reds Feature News Of British Blows Against Germany

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—The increasing scale of offensive action by the Royal Air Force against Germany was emphasized in the Moscow radio's review of military events of last week.

"Massive blows have been struck against industrial centres in Northern, Southern, Western and Central Germany and notably Berlin," the Soviet observer said.

Reviewing the war in North Africa, the observer stressed the difficulties the Italians are facing in Egypt in transporting water supplies as well as being harassed by British and South African forces.

LONDON DISTRICT MAIN TARGET OF ALL-NIGHT ATTACK

Air Ministry Said Number of Casualties Not Large and Raids Comparatively Light

PLANES STRIKE SINGLY

Eight German Planes Destroyed, One Being Brought Down in a London Street

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—Nazi air raiders, roaring across the coast above an unusually heavy anti-aircraft barrage, fanned out today in scattered hit-and-run attacks on Britain.

Alarms sounded twice in London during the morning. Two bombs fell on the capital just before the sirens shrieked the first time. The throb of the invaders' motors was heard during the second alert.

In the first raid, the Germans again sent over fast, single-engined planes to run the anti-aircraft fire in ones and twos.

At times the barrage was as heavy as during some of the biggest night raids. Batteries thundered along the Thames Estuary, trying to pick off invading planes dodging low to take cover among clouds on that aerial highway to London.

Liverpool is Target

Liverpool also was a target of the daylight raiders.

Ten persons were injured and one worker was believed killed in a bombing of a northwest town. Five workers were killed in a south coast town when a twin-engined Nazi bomber unloaded five bombs before fleeing from a British fighter.

Bombs also struck a large residential estate near a public park in an outlying London area. One house was destroyed and three persons injured.

Fighter planes and anti-aircraft fire chased away the first Nazi plane which struck at Liverpool during the morning. Other planes were seen in the northeast and near Midlands towns.

A drizzle made it impossible to see planes overhead.

Some Children Killed

Reports from last night's raids disclosed that a number of persons, including some children, were killed when a bomb hit a line of shelters in a working class district.

A direct hit on the children's ward of a London hospital in the overnight attack was disclosed today. Although a number of children were in the building no serious

Shop Windows in Streets Broken But Not Single Case of Looting Occurs

(By Gladys Arnold, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 21—(CP)—It's harder for Capt. Gerald Arthur to sleep through the singing of early-rising birds outside his Ottawa window than it was to sleep through the rattle of anti-aircraft guns in London.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announcer has just returned from six months' work for the CBC at British Broadcasting House, London.

"It's so quiet here at night that I can't sleep," he said today. It gives me the jitters waiting for something to break the stillness—and then the birds start singing around 4 o'clock in the morning. That's more penetrating than anti-aircraft guns."

"Spotters" Stationed

Mr. Arthur told how the British Broadcasting Corporation and the CBC were carrying on despite German air raids on the Empire capital. "Spotters" were stationed on the roof of the big broadcasting centre, and gave the alarm when enemy planes are in the immediate vicinity. Bombing had to be "uncomfortably near" before anybody quit work.

But Mr. Arthur admitted it was sometimes difficult to keep one's mind on the script when the explosion of bombs or burts of anti-aircraft fire could be heard plainly.

"You don't talk about it if a bomb drops in your street or next door," he said. "It's only when it lands right on your own doorstep or chimney-pot that you have a right to talk in London. People just laugh in your face otherwise."

Mr. Arthur said of broken sleep that Londoners did not look worn or tired.

Taxi, Bus Drivers Heroes

"It's amazing how little sleep one really needs," he added.

"The real heroes are the taxi and bus drivers," Mr. Arthur continued. "Nothing stops them. They drive right through in spite of everything, for in a city like London people must get about and get things done."

Little glass was left in the bombed areas of London, but Mr. Arthur did not hear or read of a single case of looting. He described some streets in which all the shop windows had been destroyed by night raiders. For hours jewellery and other merchandise lay within easy reach, untouched.

Despite the damage, business went on as usual in the city.

The people of London were ready for much bigger raids than any so far. They believed raids in which the enemy used 300 or 400 planes were merely "small stuff," searching for weaknesses in the defence.

"But Londoners can take it," Mr. Arthur said. "I've seen them and they're magnificent."

We Must Carry Fight Into Enemy's Fields, Accept No Stalemate

'We Are Daily Convoying Our Ships, Our Troops, and Our Supplies to Theatres of War in Which the Victory Will be Driven Home,' Says Alexander, First Lord of Admiralty

London, Oct. 21 —(CP)— "We have to carry this fight into the enemy's fields," A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared today in a speech warning against acceptance of a stalemate.

"We are daily convoying our ships, our troops and our supplies to theatres of war in which the victory will be driven home," he said.

"Having, by the courage and endurance of the civil population as well as of the fighting services, warded off the enemy's attack before he could achieve victory, we must not find ourselves up against a position of stalemate."

HUNDRED DROWN DURING FLOODS IN FR. PYRENEES

Damage Estimated at Billion Francs From Torrential Rains

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Vichy, France, Oct. 21.—(AP) — More than 100 persons were reported dead or missing today and officials estimated damage of 1,000,000,000 francs as a result of torrential rains and floods which forced thousands to flee their homes in the French Eastern Pyrenees.

(The franc no longer is quoted but before the German occupation of Paris it ranged from 1.73 cents to 2.26 cents this year.)

Details of the week-end disaster became known in Vichy today as telephone communication with Perpignan capital of the stricken region, was restored. Perpignan itself had been evacuated when the swollen river Tet inundated the lower parts of the city.

Prefectural authorities there estimated 100 persons dead or missing in Pyrenees-Orientales Department alone.

Thousands Homeless

(In the Eastern Pyrenees of Spain 182 persons have been officially reported missing or dead as a result of floods. Heavy rains continued to hamper the rescue work there.

The little mountain pass of Amelie-Les-Bain, where 25 persons were reported missing Vernets-Les-Bains, Arles-Surtech, and others suffered heavily. Houses, summer hotels and even the large Thermal establishment at Amelie were carried away by mountain torrents.

Most coastal villages and ports such as Canet-Plage and Port Vendres were cut off from the mainland and little was known of the plight of residents.

Urgently needed supplies— food, clothing, medicine—were rushed into the region by Red Cross worker using planes, since all road and rail connections were smashed by the floods.

New Purchase Tax Comes into Effect

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—A new purchase tax went into effect today, causing the already high cost of living in wartime Britain to take a sharp jump.

The tax, one of the measures enacted by the government to help pay for the war, levies up to 33 1-3 per cent on the wholesale price of goods.

Retailers pay the tax on the wholesale value to the wholesalers, then collect it from their customers. Estimates on how high the tax will reach in comparison with retail prices vary, but most experts expect it to go to 25 per cent.

The customer gets one break. Raymond Evershed, chairman of the central price regulation committee, told a press conference it is "illegal under the price of goods act for a retailer to add the tax to goods he had in stock on Oct. 21."

"As retail stocks are understood to be substantial the public should be able to obtain goods at the lower untaxed price for a considerable time to come," Mr. Evershed said.

Three Others in Car Fight Way From Back Seat to Safety

COLLAPSE ON BANK

Toronto, Oct. 21 (CP)—Trapped in an automobile which went out of control and landed top downward in 15 feet of water in the Humber River at Bolton, 20 miles northwest of Toronto three Toronto men lost their lives late Sunday. Three others in the car fought their way from the back seat to safety.

The dead are: Harold Scaife of Toronto, driver of the car; his brother, Howard Scaife, of Suburban Longbranch, and a third man known to the survivors only as "Art."

Saved were Fred Scaife, another brother of the driver, and two fellow members of the Irish Regiment of Canada, Melville Green and Douglas Harper, all of Toronto.

Harold Scaife was driving his brother, Fred, and two other soldiers to Camp Borden after a week-end leave in Toronto and, police said, was travelling at a high rate of speed when the car reached a slippery part of the pavement caused by a light fall of snow.

Goes Out of Control

The car went out of control on the Humber River bridge, cleared the guardrail, shot over the footpath at the side of the bridge and somersaulted into the river.

Police believed the three men in the front seat were stunned sufficiently to prevent their escape from the car. The soldiers, after getting out of the car, waded ashore and collapsed. They were unable to give a coherent account of the accident.

Police officers began immediate efforts to bring the car from the river and learn the identity of the third passenger in the front seat.

The three survivors all suffered bruises and shock. Fred Scaife received a deep cut on his head and was given hospital treatment.

Bombing Planes Thunder High Over Swiss Territory

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 21 (AP)—Bombing planes thundered high over Swiss territory last night and early today.

An army communique claimed the planes were British. The communique said Swiss anti-aircraft guns fired at planes. There were alarms just before and just after midnight in Berne, Zurich, Geneva and other cities of Western and and Central Switzerland. The planes came from the northwest, crossing the Jura Mountains.

The army communique said:—

"During the night of Oct. 20 to 21 our territory was violated many times by English aviators. These planes crossed the Jura frontier, flying in a southeasterly direction in many places. Our anti-aircraft batteries opened fire on the invading planes."

NAZI WARSHIP AT HAMBURG BELIEVED HIT

Naval Docks at Wilhelmshaven and Hamburg Heavily Bombed Sunday Night

RENEW HAMMERING

Daylight Raids Believed Carried Out on Invasion Ports by R.A.F. Bombers

London, Oct. 21.—(CP)— Germany's naval docks at Hamburg and Wilhelmshaven were heavily bombed last night and "a large warship is believed to have been hit", the Air Ministry announced tonight.

London, Oct. 21.— (CP)— The Royal Air Force was believed to have renewed its hammering at German-held invasion ports across the English Channel in daylight raids today.

Explosions from across the water were heard along the southeast coast of England this afternoon and shortly afterward heavy aircraft which observers said were British bombers crossed the coast and flew inland, apparently returning from an attack.

Czech Ace of R. A. F. Killed in Action

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—A Czech ace of the Royal Air Force, identified only as Sqdn-Ldr. "Joseph F." but credited with a bag of 27 German planes, was killed early this month, it was announced officially today.

He escaped from Prague after the German occupation of March, 1939, and joined the Polish air force before the outbreak of the war. He was credited with shooting down 11 German planes in the brief German-Polish war and later 16 more over France and England. His victims included several bombers with large crews.

Residents Prepared For Second Blackout

Bucharest, Oct 21.—(AP) — Air Raid defence work went forward today in the Rumanian capital and the populace prepared itself for the second night of a complete blackout.

Gendarmes made numerous arrests for violations of the first blackout, which began at midnight Sunday. Motorists with unauthorized lights were forced to park their cars and walk home.

Trams and buses were suspended at midnight and even the red lights in cemetery shrines were extinguished. A bright moon reduced accidents.

200 Tons of Bombs Dropped On Berlin Since September 1st

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—The Royal Air Force has dropped 200 tons of bombs on Berlin since Sept. 1, it was learned today. There have been 14 separate night raids involving a total of 225 bombers.

It is believed in official quarters that R.A.F. bombers are doing far more damage to Germany's war machine than the German air force is inflicting on essential points in Britain.

"We are dropping fewer bombs but I think they are better aimed," The Canadian Press was told by an official.

As one counter measure to the German night raider, the R.A.F. has been increasing the number of night fighters in operation. Some of these are American-built machines which experts say compare favorably in all essential features to battle-tested planes constructed in this country.

Air experts here believe the R.A.F. has conquered Germany's day bomber, judging by Goering's new tactics of using fighters to carry small loads of bombs in hit-and-run raids. They have done little damage since British fighters upset Hitler's invasion plans Sept. 15 by shooting down 185 German planes and forcing Goering to conscript his fighters as light bombers.

Some of these fighter-bombers fly as high as 30,000 feet and dump their bombs as soon as they see a Spitfire climbing toward them.

During overcast days Goering is sending a few cloud-hopping bombers over but these attacks are desultory and haphazard.

The big problem remains the night raider, for which no answer has been found. London is taking the bulk of the attack but Liverpool, Birmingham, Coventry and other industrial cities in the midlands also have been raided.

"This problem of the night bomber has not been solved and it doesn't look as if a solution is just round the corner," The Canadian Press was told. "The best scientific brains of the country are being used to find a device that will locate the German planes and direct fighters to them."

Britain is reinforcing her air force in the middle east in anticipation of a winter campaign against Egypt. This can be done without depleting the squadrons in this country due to the ever-increasing number of American planes crossing the Atlantic and the big increase in British production.

Oft-Bombed Bases Along the Channel Special Objective

15,000 Bombs Dropped In Two-and-a-Half Hours Over a Wide Area

London, Oct. 21.—(CP)—Two Cabinet Ministers predicted today a British offensive as Royal Air Force bombers struck back with raids stretching to Berlin and Northern Italy.

"The day we can take the offensive approaches steadily", Colonial Secretary Lord Lloyd declared in Glasgow.

"We have to carry this fight into the enemy's fields . . . we must not find ourselves up against a position of stalemate", declared A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty.

To Britons, their words stirred 135-year-old echoes of Lord Nelson who laid down his life at the Battle of Trafalgar Oct. 21, 1805, to secure this island Kingdom from the forces of another continental conqueror masses, then as now, across the Channel.

It was that battle off the Spanish coast 135 years ago today which smashed Napoleon's fleets and set the stage eventually for Waterloo.

As the Ministers spoke, German guns were pounding the Dover shores presumably in reply to a 100-bomb-a-minute air raid last night on the same bases across from England where Napoleon's barges were massed.

The severity and breadth of the raid in which British warships and land guns also were believed to have joined could be recognized on this side of the Channel today.

Long after the sun had risen, a red glow resembling great prairie fire could be seen plainly across the water. It stretched in an unbroken line for miles and gave the impression that a great part of the French coast not only was in ruins but also still was blazing fiercely.

The glow was visible through the Channel haze up to noon, the result of an "avalanche" of deadly steel in which the Press Association said 15,000 bombs fell in 2 1-2 hours.

Berlin, other parts of Germany and Northern Italy were targets of British night bombers engaged in "extensive operations", the Air Ministry announced.

The attack on Berlin was the 14th since September 1 and 225 British planes have dropped 200 tons of bombs on the German capital since then.

NO REPORTS OF BOMBS DROPPED

Valetta, Malta, Oct. 21 (CP)—This naval base was under air raid alarm for more than an hour this morning and hostile planes were seen dodging among the clouds over Malta. However, there were no reports of bombs being dropped.

THIRTEEN KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Victims Included Three French and Four German Officers

Names of all victims of the accident are not yet known here.

(Vichy reports said three French and four German officers and six German soldiers were killed.

(The plane, reports from Vichy said, plunged down in a severe storm while en route from North Africa to France and several bodies washed up on the North African shore. News of the accident was the first received that members of the Armistice Commission were in North Africa.)

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

FIRST SNOW FLURRY OF SEASON SEEN

Belleville and district had its first real taste of winter weather over the week-end when in addition to the somewhat frigid temperatures which had prevailed since late last week, the first snow flurry of the season occurred on Sunday afternoon. Several districts throughout Ontario reported snow flurries on Saturday but it was Sunday afternoon before Old Man Winter made his appearance in Belleville.

Highway conditions were made hazardous by the sudden flurry of snow which continued for the better part of an hour and several accidents were reported as the result of the slippery surface and hampered vision. Again near midnight on Sunday, motorists report the district was visited by a second flurry which made driving hazardous but which lasted for only a few minutes.

HUGE POTATO WEIGHS 2 POUNDS 6 OUNCES

Mr. George Adams, Hilton, Murray Township farmer, brought to the Ontario Intelligencer office on Saturday two potatoes of record size which were dug from his fields recently. One potato measuring 21½ by 12½ inches in circumference weighed two pounds and six ounces, while the other, measuring 19 inches by 13½ inches, weighed two pounds three ounces.

These potatoes are from the new variety called the Chippewa. Mr. Adams planted sixty-five bags of certified seed in seven acres and dug 1,750 bags of good-sized potatoes, of which these large-sized samples were taken.

ATTENDS CONVENTION

County Treasurer James Haggerty, president of the Ontario Good Roads Association, leaves for Quebec today where he will attend the three-day convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association. Many important problems will be discussed and as head of the provincial organization, Mr Haggerty is expected to take an important part in the proceedings.

THEFTS OF CHICKENS BLAMED ON FOXES

Reports of hen roosts being robbed and of foxes being seen slinking in the fence corners north of the city has led to farmers putting two and two together and holding the foxes responsible for the epidemic of chicken thievery which has continued all through the summer. In many instances farmers claim finding the remains of chickens in their corn fields where foxes left them after raiding the hen roosts.

Farmers are keeping a strict watch over their hen coops in an effort to catch the wily marauders but in at least one case the hunted scored over the hunter when one Foxboro resident laid in wait with his shotgun for a would-be thief. After watching his hen coop for some time, the farmer was startled by a noise behind him and turned to see the fox disappearing with a chicken in his mouth.

MINISTERIAL ASSOC. SPONSORS CONCERT IN AID OF RED CROSS

The first in a series of monthly sacred concerts sponsored by the Belleville Ministerial Association for the Red Cross took place Sunday evening in St. Andrew's Church following the evening service.

The minister, Rev. W. J. Walker was chairman and the interesting program was greatly enjoyed. Congregational singing opened the concert, the accompanist being Mr. Harold Kitney organist of the church. Misses Helen Barnum and Helen Glover, students at Albert College delighted the gathering with a vocal duet. An organ recital by Mr. Alec Gordon was the feature of the program and the numbers by this talented musician were greatly appreciated. An offering was taken for Red Cross work.

The concerts will be held the last Sunday in each month, the next program being arranged for Christ Church, in November.

CITY WORKS DEPT. TO COLLECT LEAVES

The Department of Public Works have started their annual seasonal job of gathering leaves from the city streets and City Engineer Charles Mott asks that residents get same off the boulevards by the end of October.

City Hall officials have received information that some residents are getting rid of the leaves on their property by putting them down storm sewer basins. "This practice must stop," warned the city engineer, "and if persons are caught in the act of putting leaves down sewers they will be severely punished."

A & P Warehouse Damaged by Fire

Fire of an unknown origin caused approximately $3,000 damage to the warehouse and stock of the Atlantic and Pacific grocery store on Campbell Street Saturday evening and caused firemen a three-hour fight before the stubborn blaze was brought under control.

Of stone construction and without windows, the building is situated directly across a gangway on Campbell St. from the store proper and was used to store grocery stocks and canned goods. Damage to stock amounted to approximately $1,800 while the building was almost completely gutted by the blaze.

The fire apparently started in the southwest part of the building and had gained considerable headway before being discovered by one of the employees of the A. and P. store as he went to the warehouse shortly before nine o'clock. A small amount of stock was taken out of the building and saved from the flames, but other grocery stock and $800 worth of canned goods were damaged.

Traffic was halted on Campbell Street while firemen were fighting the blaze which attracted considerable attention from Saturday evening shoppers. Smoke from the cardboard boxes and foodstuffs drifted in dense clouds across Front Street and entered several stores and business places causing slight smoke damage.

Fortunately firemen were able to limit the fire to the building in which it originated and prevented it from spreading to other buildings.

Other Minor Blazes

Two other alarms, both for minor blazes were answered by the fire department over the week-end. Saturday at the noon hour a call was received from the home of Wm. Dix, 77 College St., where furnishings in an upstairs room were found ablaze. Early Sunday morning a call was received from William St., where a motor had burned out. Damage in both cases was negligible, it was stated.

Splendid Program At Band Concert

Held Under Auspices St. Julien Chapt. I.O.D.E.—Sum of $110.55 Realized

Living up to their reputation of being one of the finest service organizations of their kind in Canada, the band of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Trenton, delighted a capacity audience at the Capitol Theatre Sunday night with a splendid concert held under the auspices of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. The fine sum of $110.55 was realized through the medium of a silver collection taken at the door.

Assisting artists included Mrs. W. Hammond, wife of Flying Officer Westin Hammond, Assistant Provost Marshal of the Air Base, whose splendid voice was heard in "There'll Always be an England," and "There's a Land". Mrs. Hammond received a splendid ovation at the conclusion of her solos; Ken McAdam who sang the Irish favorite "Killarney" and an encore, and the Christ Church Boys' Choir under the direction of Mr. George Maybee. The youthful singers gave evidence of fine voices and excellent training in their ensemble numbers which delighted the large audience.

The band, under the baton of Flight-Sergeant Tommy Cooper, reached musical heights in their various numbers. "The Washington Greys" opened a program that was replete with instrumental and other ensemble numbers. "Wings at the Dawning," a number composed by a Miss Couts, of Trenton, received well-merited applause as did "In a Chinese Temple," the march "We're on Our Way," the overture "Martha" and a fine baritone solo, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," sung by Aircraftsman Marsh.

Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone presided as chairman and at the conclusion of the concert expressed the appreciation of the members of St. Julien Chapter for the fine response of the general public, also the Capitol management for the donation of the theatre.

During the concert, Mrs. Hammond was the recipient of two lovely bouquets of flowers.

HOLLOWAY ST. CHURCH MARKS ITS ANNIVERSARY

Special Evening Service Attended by Bridge St. and Tabernacle Congregations—Rev. J. A. Dilts Preaches on Duty of Church Attendance

Holloway Street United Church anniversary was duly celebrated on Sunday, Rev. J. A. Dilts, the pastor, preaching at both morning and evening services which were of a special character with appropriate music. In the evening the other two United Church congregations worshipped with the Holloway St. congregation and their pastors, the Rev. Dr. J. Semple of Bridge St. Church and the Rev. D. T. McClintock of the Tabernacle Church assisting in the service of worship. During the evening, Mrs. E. Hubbs at the piano and Mr. William Connor at the organ played a duet. The choir under the direction of Mr. S. Anglin rendered very effectively an anthem. There were large congregations.

The Rev. Mr. Dilts spoke on the subject: "Why Go to Church?" and founded his address upon the Scripture words: "forsaking not the assembling of yourselves together."

Foundation of Church

"The church is the only institution which Christ founded," said the minister, "and it is the greatest institution on earth. It has done more for society and the world than any other. It is what the soul is to the body. It has changed human society, it has raised the status of woman, it has created a new order and a new world. I cannot understand the attitude of those who in this day are indifferent."

"Those who are indifferent would not like to see the church abolished and yet," said the pastor, "such people are doing more to abolish it than any others. I am not so much afraid of the enemies, the agnostics, the infidels, the communists, we know where they are, but frankly I am more concerned about the people who are indifferent."

Mr. Dilts dealt with the excuse that there are hypocrites in the church. The pastor asked who stayed out of business, refused to associate in politics, or to enjoy social life because there were hypocrites in these? The man indifferent to the church will associate with these but he virtually claims that he is too good for the church. He is the most self-righteous one of the lot; the worst hypocrite who makes this claim.

To Worship

The preacher turned to list the reasons for going to church. He went to church to worship God for he believed in God and cannot get away from worship in the church. Man cannot explain the universe for himself. Man cannot understand the universe without God and without worship. He cannot fathom the mysteries of God but he believes in God the Father Almighty and because he believes he worships Him and the church helps him to worship.

Attendance at church satisfies the soul's hunger.

Man should go to church to hear the Gospel read, interpreted and sung. Man needs a continuous experience of God, week after week and day after day. To keep the saved condition it is necessary to keep close to Christ and the church. In the reading, interpretation and in the organ music and in singing, the soul is lifted to God.

Help in Christ's Programs

Man should go to church to help in some little measure in the program of Christ in the world. Christ's way is the only way. Friendship is costly and demands sacrifices and readiness to serve. Man's first duty is to seek the Kingdom of God and to take up the cross, it means to go into the world, to preach the gospel and to heal the sick.

Today there are great divisions separating men, nationalism, Fascism and so on but there is one institution alone that helps to unite mankind, helps men to live longer in the world and that is the church of Jesus Christ. It breaks down barriers that the others are striving to build up.

Then man should attend church to set a right example. The pastor pointed out that a great majority of those who are sent to prison come from homes of those who are unconcerned about the church which they account of little value. The best insurance against lawlessness and crime is in the church and Sunday School, Mr. Dilts said and added if a person who was associated with the church went wrong and erred from the path of rightdoing he still had the memory of the church and parents that others did not have.

Church attendance must be cultivated, said Mr. Dilts, for as the body needs food three times a day, so there are daily spiritual needs. "The best place to find God is in one's room and the next best place is in church in the congregation of the people."

Finally man should attend church because Christ likes him there—as a witness for His truth.

With the possible exception of the Cornwall training centre, all men called up for military training in the second draft in Military Division "C" with headquarters at Kingston, will be 22-year-olds it was revealed in Kingston on Saturday. Trainees going to Peterboro and Brockville in November will all be 22 years of age while there will be some 23-year-olds in the Cornwall camp.

No definite time has been set for the men to report for training, but it is expected that the date will be around November 22. Within the next few days notices will be sent to the next class advising them to report for medical examination.

Men whose call for training was postponed a month will not receive a notice to report for a medical. Letters will be forwarded to them giving the place and time where they must report. Divisional offices do not expect as many requests for postponement of training, because most of the farmers are now completing their fall work.

ILLICIT STILL FOUND IN BUSH OFF MONK ROAD

Police Arrest Passenger Who Solicits a Ride Near Bancroft

MAN FOUND DEAD

William Kidd, 72, Taking Care of Neighbor's Home Found Dead on Floor

Bancroft, Oct. 21 (Special)—Hitch-hiking a ride on the Monk Road near here, proved costly to both Matthew Stone and John Baumhour, local residents, over the week-end. Stone solicited a ride with Provincial Constable S. Palmateer and County Constable G. Wells, as he was walking along the Monk Road Saturday.

Stone was carrying a bag over his shoulder, but when he placed the bag on the floor of Constable Palmateer's automobile, the two police felt they heard the distinct rattle of bottles. Continuing to Bancroft the officers later searched the bag and discovered two forty-ounce bottles of alleged illicit liquor. Constable Wm. Beatty of the R.C.M.P. at Belleville was immediately notified and after Stone had been questioned the police later discovered a complete still hidden in the woods off the Monk Road.

Later John Baumhour was arrested in connection with the case in Bruten Township. Both Baumhour and Stone were charged with the operation of a still, suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. The pair were lodged in the jail at Belleville awaiting trial here on Tuesday.

William Kidd Dead

William Kidd of Kidd's Corners some 18 miles west of Bancroft on Highway No. 28, was found lying dead on the floor of the home of James McGregor, at Cheddar, yesterday noon. Mr. Kidd was looking after the McGregor farm while the family was visiting in Peterboro.

The late William Kidd was a 72-year-old bachelor and had consented to remain at the farm of Mr. McGregor during their absence. At noon yesterday 11-year-old Clifford Nichol, son of a neighbor of the McGregor family, went to the farmhouse to invite Mr. Kidd to dinner. When there was no response to the knocking at the door by young Nichol, the lad entered and found Mr. Kidd lying on the floor dead.

Dr. Speck, Haliburton coroner, and Provincial Police investigated and it was later announced Mr. Kidd had doubtless died as the result of a heart attack and no inquest was deemed necessary.

The late William Kidd was an employee of the Ontario Forestry Department, having been employed in the capacity of a fire ranger for the past 22 years in charge of the Apsley tower.

Over $9,000 Raised In Red Cross Campaign

Officials Express Gratification to Public and Appreciation for Services of Volunteer Workers

OBJECTIVE $8,000

They did it. Belleville's ever-generous public, always ready to assist a humanitarian cause, came through the campaign of the Canadian Red Cross in a blaze of financial glory. The quota assessed Belleville in the Dominion-wide campaign for five millions of dollars was $8,000 and figures released today by local campaign officials reveal that this city went "over the top" with an amount well in excess of $9,000.00.

Campaign Manager Howard Clarke and Treasurer I. G. Hefkey expressed the grateful appreciation of a hard-working committee today.

"We are indeed grateful to the residents of this city and district for their fine response to our appeal for funds," Mr. Clarke said. "Our faith in this city in rising to an emergency such as the Red Cross appeal has been upheld, and we are not only grateful but proud.

"The continuous bombing of London," Mr. Clarke continued, "provides an ever-increasing need of supplies, and the public of this city can rest assured that their fine contribution will be used to the best advantage."

In expressing his appreciation, Mr. Hefkey paid tribute to the untiring efforts of city service clubs, women's organizations, canvassers and all who took a large or small part in the successful prosecution of the drive for funds. "We are grateful, too," he added, "to the Ontario Intelligencer for the fine publicity given the campaign, which was no small factor in its ultimate success."

POLICE COURT

The names of three juvenile lads who had been placed on parole by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., some months ago, were called in court today. "These boys have reported weekly to me and I'm glad to say two of them are now working," revealed Chief Kidd on the lads' behalf. The trio had previously admitted charges of stealing money from milk bottles left for collection and also of petty theft.

"Apparently these boys have learned the folly of their erring ways and are now behaving themselves," prompted Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson as His Worship suspended sentence upon the three lads.

Several motorists entered written pleas of guilty when charged with speeding and operating motor vehicles on city streets in violation of the traffic ordinances. The minimum fines were imposed in all cases. Irving Kellar, Napanee, was convicted of drunken driving and sentenced to seven days without the option of a fine. The charge arose out of an accident on Highland Ave. last Friday night when a motor car driven by Kellar collided with a truck. "There were no injuries and the only damage resulted to Kellar's car," revealed Detective Fred Isard.

Three inebriates who had imbibed too freely of intoxicants over the week-end, intimated they would have to serve 14 days in the default of the payment of the conventional fine assessed drunks.

STRUCK BY CAR

Alliston, Ont., Oct. 21 (CP) — Ulysses Grant Beatley, 65, of Matheson was killed last night when struck by a car on the highway three miles from here. Police said the car was driven by Thomas Bowers of Alliston.

Police Blotter

Complaining his automobile had been struck by another vehicle, which did not stop at the scene, Bryon Seeley, Roslin, was quite concerned when he reported a motor accident to city police last Saturday night. Mr. Seeley told police he was proceeding north on Front Street, when a south-bound motor car struck and damaged the fenders of his car. The second vehicle sped away, but Mr. Seeley told Constables Thomson and Wright the possible number of vehicle that struck his car. The matter is being thoroughly probed by police.

Fred Lewis, 196 Bridge Street, informed police that the bicycle licence on his little daughter's bicycle had been stolen while the bike was parked at the upper end of Front Street Saturday. Later Traffic Officer Doug. Ellis recovered the licence which was numbered 728.

An attempt to short-change an employee at Hannah's Bakery was frustrated Saturday night when the clerk discovered the ruse. The man, who was described as being well dressed and about 30 years of age, beat a hasty retreat from the store when confronted with his attempts.

A soldier lad, who had imbibed too freely, was taken into custody at the rear of a local hotel late Saturday night, where it was alleged he was endeavouring to promote a fistic engagement. The soldier was escorted to the police station where he was detained until in fit and proper condition to be sent home.

Three other inebriates also found themselves in the clutches of the law as the result of drinking too freely of intoxicating beverages over the week-end. Charges were preferred in the latter cases, however.

Dr. D. L. Curtis to Leave Marmora for C. A. S. F. Dental Corps

Marmora — Citizens in general regret the removal of Dr. D. L. Curtis this week to Lindsay. He his given up his dental practice here to take over the practice of Dr. Mansbrough who has joined the Dental Corps of the Canadian Active Service Forces. During the years he has been in Marmora, Dr. Curtis has made a reputation as a competent and clever dentist and he will be greatly missed on this account. Also he will be missed as a citizen. For several years he has been a member of Marmora Hydro Electric Commission and he previously served as a member of the Village Council. He has been a valued member and elder of St. Andrew's United Church and took a keen interest in affairs of the village generally. He is a Past Master of Marmora A. F. and A. M. 222.

Unknown to many residents because of his rare allusions to it, he served in the last Great War as a member of an Engineers' Corps. He will take with him the best wishes of a large circle of friends for success in his new surroundings. Mrs. Curtis who will remain in Marmora until about the middle of November will also be missed in church organizations, the Women's Institute and in social circles.

Defeat Stirling

Marmora High School girls softball team ended their season in a very satisfactory manner on Friday afternoon when the defeated the Stirling girls at Deloro by the score of 56-20. Playing conditions were very unsatisfactory owing to the cool weather and the wet and slippery condition of the field. The home team showed up better in the field than in some previous games. Good batting on the part of all the Marmora players accounted greatly for their overwhelming success. The Marmora team finished the season with half of their games won and considering the majority of their players were making their debut at the start of the season, they are to be congratulated upon doing so well.

C. E. Lackner Addresses Annual Banquet of Madoc Cheese Board

Madoc (Special) — On Thursday night Madoc Cheese Board held their annual banquet in the I. O. O. F. dining hall. About 175 men were present including many cheese buyers, cheese makers, and dairy men of the district and visitors from Ottawa, Campbellford, Belleville and surrounding districts enjoying the festive board, with the members of Madoc Institute catering for the banquet. Following the supper hour the meeting was called to order by the past president of the Board, Mr. John McCaffrey and a splendid program followed.

A short address by Mr. John McCaffrey followed. Reeve Geo. West of Madoc village in a few well-chosen words welcomed the guests to Madoc and mentioned some of the highlights of the year, Reforestation Day, Madoc Fair and also that the largest number of visitors had come to Madoc this year than for some time past.

Mr. J. Irvin in introducing the guest speaker, Mr. C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying for the Province of Ontario, commented on the price of cheese on the Madoc Board being slightly higher than other boards. Mr. Lackner in his address reported an increase of 18 per cent. in the production of cheese in the Province. Ontario produces 72% of the cheese made in the Dominion, Quebec produces 20%. A few counties do not produce cheese but increase in cheese production must come from the counties now producing, the factories in Eastern Ontario are not producing to capacity. Diversion of milk from butter to cheese would cause a shortage of butter up to Sept. 1, 1939. Ten million pounds of butter were exported, more than in 1940. Consumption of butter in Canada has increased and a surplus is not probable.

When a request came from Gr. Britain for more cheese the Department of Agriculture urged producers of milk to increase feeding and to hold cheese factories open later in the fall and remain open all winter if possible. An increase in price cannot be expected because Great Britain cannot pay out a large price for food because of the excessive cost of the war. Quality of cheese greatly improved during the year and by supplying a quality product now we are building up a market for cheese in the years to come, after the war when the British market will be able to get cheese from other sources. Some cheese factories still need improving and cleaning up. Some of the smaller factories the women assist (presumably the cheesemaker's wife) and these factories in most cases are kept cleaner. Following this address, Mr. Cowan gave a number "John Bull's Letter Bag."

Mr. J. Murray, Instructor for Campbellford District, gave a short address. Cheese boards used to exist in Peterboro, Lindsay and Bancroft; now Campbellford and Madoc are the only ones on the border line of the cheese industry in Eastern Ontario.

Mr. J. Burgess, chief cheese grader, spoke in place of Mr. Singleton and gave statistics of the cheese industry, making comparisons regarding quality. In 1923 per cent of grade 1 was 78, in 1928 grade 1 was 92, in 1935, 96. Cheese Factory Improvements Act in 1939 provides payment according to quality and expects 96 per cent of 1940 make of cheese will be 1st grade. Cheese factories not having efficient curing rooms should take advantage of assistance by the Federal Government to instal up-to-date equipment. Milk must be of excellent quality for high scoring cheese. New Zealand made arrangements with the British Ministry of Food to supply 1500 tons of cheese more than last season. New Zealand and Australia received about ½ cent per lb. less for cheese than Canada. Selection by Miss Evans "Mother Machree" was greatly enjoyed.

Geo. White, M. P., for Peterboro-Hastings, was the next speaker and enlarged on the statement by Mr. Lackner that Canada was the second line of defence and that the farmer as a producer of food, the factory worker and mechanic as a producer of war machines and munitions, the miner, the lumberman, all take their part to keep the man in uniform supplied.

Mr. P. Murphy, cheese buyer, in a few words told of attending a dairyman's convention in Madoc 40 years ago and always enjoys his visits to Madoc, after which a most profitable and entertaining program was brought to a close.

The singing of "God Save the King" and Mr. Rice pronouncing the Benediction brought the Rally to a close.

MOCK INVASION OF LACHUTE AREA IS SUCCESSFUL

5,000 Troops Taking Part in Games Over Weekend Now on Way to Camps

STAY IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Oct. 21— (CP)— Successful in their mock invasion of the rolling Lachute district, north of Montreal Island and Ile Jesus, troops from Ontario training centres started back home today.

They moved out of the city in the trucks, armored cars and on motorcycles which carried them parading into Montreal yesterday after the week-end war games with units from the Montreal area.

More than 250,000 people were estimated to have greeted the invaders when they reached Montreal after noon. The crowds were lined along a seven-mile route. The file of vehicles in which the troops rode was itself more than five miles long.

The invaders who achieved their tactical objective of capturing bridgeheads at Riviere Des Milles Iles were artillery, engineers, army service corps, ordnance corps from Petawawa. The Governor-General's Foot Guards from Ottawa and a detachment of the Royal Canadian Signal Corps from Barriefield.

5,000 Troops Take Part

They were joined in their attack by the Victoria Rifles of Montreal and a Montreal motorcycle regiment while the Royal Canadian Dragoons from St. Johns, Que., acted as the defenders.

Altogether nearly 5,000 troops were active in the manoeuvres which were in charge of Maj.-Gen. G. E. McQuaig of Montreal, Commandant of Petawawa Camp.

The Ontario units reached the 30-square-mile area marked out for the manoeuvres Saturday. They were billeted for the night at Lachute, St. Jerome and Oka.

They broke camp before dawn Sunday and moved through the dark to concentration points along a line running from St. Placide, on the north shore of the Ottawa River, through Belle Riviere to Ste. Scholastique

Swung in Three Columns

The actual mock warfare in which the invaders swung in three columns against defended bridgeheads at St. Eustache and Ste. Rose brought roaring activity to Sunday quiet of the hilly rural district.

Noisy motorcycles ridden by scouts made the first contacts before artillery was in position and barking away with blank ammunition.

There were captures, and "destruction" effected with paper flour sacks representing bombs, as the main battle in the game developed in an area known as Grand Chicot, about six miles from St. Eustache.

Twin columns moved on parallel roads to the St. Eustache bridgehead forcing numerically inferior defending forces to fall back and the battle was declared over.

Then the troops rolled into Montreal. For the night they were billeted in Montreal Armories. Though the main force moved back to their Ontario centres today, some of the artillery detachments stayed behind and will make the trip home today.

THE VICTORY OF THE AJAX

In this war there are done countless deeds of glory, many of which will not receive the world's attention because there are so many acts. But the achievement of the Ajax in battling eight Italian warships and sinking three of them in the Mediterranean is something that tells so much of the true facts of the war at sea. The Royal Navy has won imperishable renown. Truly can it be said, never will its glory fade.

The Ajax is one of the vessels which played a part in the victory over the Graf Spee. There the Ajax figured in conquest over the Huns. A few days ago she repeated against the Italians off Sicily. Other Italian ships had an opportunity to play a heroic part but avoided battle with the Ajax and fled without offering aid to a battered Italian ship, the Artigliere. This vessel was later being towed by another Italian ship, but the latter fled and left the Artigliere which was afire, to its own resources. The York coming up signalled the Italians to abandon the Artigliere and when they had done so the York sent the Artigliere to the bottom. Then the York looked to the safety of the Artigliere survivors though a concentration of Italian ships and submarines was known to be near.

The British in the recent battle of the Mediterranean upheld the highest traditons of the sea, bravery and high sense of duty, initiative and enterprise and at the same time a feeling of chivalry for the enemy sailors.

The Ajax, the product of British engineering and workmanship, has won a glorious name but her glory is the glory of the men who made her famous.

If ever the British people have shown themselves to be fit leaders for a world which sadly needs good leaders as this age shows, it is on such an occasion as this. The land and the race which can express themselves in such valor in fighting against such odds, in such perfection of mechanism, in such rare skill, and in such humanity in trying to save enemy survivors, have proven themselves worthy of the trust which the verdict of history has imposed in them.

HITLER A FAILURE LIKE NAPOLEON

Hitler is now numbered along with Napoleon as one who has seen his plan frustrated for an invasion of Great Britain.

Three months before at his headquarters Hitler danced a jig before high-ups of the Nazis and was photographed doing a Teutonic jig or step for the movie fans of Germany. Then he was gloating over the fall of France.

But he counted too soon. His speed in overrunning France brought him to a halt. He had to prepare against Britain and time was necessary. Time was a friend of Britain and the winds and the seas were also friends of the stalwart defenders. And when he came to strike, Hitler found what Napoleon found, an invincible people who were to deliver him a smashing blow that was to upset all his plans.

What were Hitler's feelings on the 16th of September three months after the fall of France? On the other side of the channel was still Albion or Britain, still strong and defiant and victorious over his attempt at invasion, before him the channel with its broken ships and his lost soldiers, on the Nazi-held shore of France, were his disembarked armies which had not a chance to shove off from shore. Where was the confident Goering at that time, the man who flew over London a day or two before and what were the Marshal's feelings? Did the sands of imperial power not seem to be running through their hands? A picture of the German leaders in the hours which followed realization of the British victory would be interesting. Hitler saw to it that he should be photographed in the movies doing his war dance in June but there were no movies taken by the Huns at the end of that day, September 16th. It was a story the German people dare not be told.

In the wisdom of the British Government official statement was withheld until Friday and now the free world knows, but not Germany and Italy if the stranglehold of the Nazi and Fascist censorship can keep out the news.

Larger Doses of Viosterol May Be Needed to Cure Acne—Pimples

There is nothing more important to the boy and girl at, or following puberty, than their appearance, the condition of the skin of the face. When, therefore, pimples (acne) appear, whether there are just two or three pimples or many times two or three, the boys and girls are greatly distressed and embarrassed. The appearance of their face keeps them from enjoying dances and games. They are often so ashamed that they develop an inferiority complex and their mental and physical health may go below par.

There are many methods of treating acne—diet, gland extracts, ointments, sun baths, Xrays—all of which seem to help some cases.

Unfortunately many physicians, because pimples appear at puberty, tell these young patients to forget about their acne because it will disappear without treatment. This is true in many cases as the boy and girl finally emerges into manhood and womanhood.

There is, however, a large percentage in which the pimples persist for many years despite treatment by diet, ointments, gland extracts and even Xrays.

A few years ago, two professors at the University of Chicago report their success in the treatment of their own cases and in 14 cases of students, by four weeks treatment with viosterol.

I have heard of a few cases where the viosterol treatment did not help the acne or helped it only slightly and I have wondered if there was something about the make-up of these patients or whether the dose was insufficient that might be the cause of the failure. The dosage recommended was: take 10 drops viosterol daily, gradually increasing dose until at the end of two weeks 20 drops is taken daily, continue to take 20 drops for two more weeks.

It is interesting to read of the success of Dr. M. T. R. Maynard in treating two large groups of acne patients as recorded in the Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, Chicago. In the first group of seventy patients, 75 per cent were cured, and in the second group of sixty patients, 83 per cent were cured, within a period of three months. In Dr. Maynard's cases the dose of viosterol was almost twice as large as that given by the Chicago professors and was continued for three months.

It may be that some cases might be helped more by larger doses for a longer time than one month.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

OCT. 21st., 1920.

Great activity is evident in the Belleville harbor as a result of the trans-shipping of coal from sailing vessels and barges into cars. Years ago Belleville was the central distributing point for grain and in those days it was no uncommon sight to see from fifteen to twenty schooners loaded with grain leaving Belleville. That this city has natural shipping advantages is obvious. During the last ten days the barge White and Friant, capacity 700 tons, has unloaded two cargoes of coal here. The steam barge Hiskly and the schooner Filer have also been in port this week. The Horace Taber with 450 tons of coal is discharging her cargo to day and the schooner Oliver Mowat, 425 tons capacity, is enroute from Oswego to Belleville. These barges and schooners are all under charter by the Schuster Company, to which the traffic is consigned.

Balloons Prove To be Effective

London—(By Mail)—In England, as earlier in France, the balloon barrage is proving its worth. Neither in England nor in France has the enemy ever succeeded in breaking the combination of balloon barrage and anti-aircraft fire. Neither in England nor in France has a dive-bombing attack ever been made within an area protected by balloons.

The balloons in fact, which have so long been familiar as friendly figures above London and other cities, have done precisely and exactly the job which they were meant to do. The fact that they have brought down a number of the enemy is merely incidental. The object of the barrage is not to bring down the enemy, but to "position the pheasant"—that is, to keep enemy bombers at the height at which A.A. gunners and R.A.F. fighters like to see them, and to prevent dive-bombing. High level bombing is not, of course, their concern.

Both the British authorities, and the German, have clearly shown what they think of the value of our balloons. The Germans have shown what they think by deliberately attacking our balloons with machine-gun fire. Most of these attacks have been made by Messerschmitt 110's. This is a particularly useful type of aircraft, which can be employed either as a fighter or as a bomber. It is a reasonable guess that these Messerschmitts would not have wasted their time and ammunition in potting balloons, if potting balloons were merely regarded as an idle pastime. A likely explanation of these attacks is that the German Air Force is afraid of the balloon barrage—that they look on it as an obstacle to be removed, if possible. So far they have not been able to remove the obstacle. Enough balloons have never been brought down at the same place and the same time to leave the way clear for the dive-bombers, which would no doubt have tried to follow if they could.

The British authorities have shown what they think of balloons by making a steady increase in the strength of the barrage. Both in balloons and personnel, the numbers of the barrage have been more than doubled since the war began. Many new jobs have also been found for the balloons. They have been used, as is now well known, to help to protect convoys from air attack. And, as is well known to Germany, balloons have for a long time played an important part in the air defence of Scapa Flow.

Week by week, more balloons take the air. It may look an easy matter to keep them flying, calmly as it seems, high above. But balloons, as a race, are temperamental. "Playful as kittens" is the description given by one officer to his charges. It is a skilled business keeping a family of balloons well and on the job.

WHAT NAZIS SAY WHEN FISHED OUT

Godfrey Winn, of the London Sunday Express, Takes a Trip (and Finds Himself Machine-Gunned) in One of the R.A.F. Rescue Speedboats

By M. B.

I have just returned from a trip with the marine section of the R. A. F. who man the speed launches capable of 40 knots, that cost £30,000 each. They are standing by all round the coast, ready at a moment's notice, night and day, to dash right over to the French coast if necessary, to pull out of the ditch any airman who has been seen to bale out.

Any airman. That is the important word. The enemy crews just as much as our own. No difference is made in the speed of the rescue or the risks that are run. The only difference is in the manners of the rescued. Those of the German airman differ considerably.

For instance, there were three who were picked up far out in the North Sea—a miraculous escape for them—but the officer who had been master at the time of that particular R.A.F. boat, assured me that when they pulled them on board, even after an imersion of hours, the Nazi pilot's first reaction was, not to thank his rescuers, but to arise his hand and shout "Herr Hitler!" in an aggressive, belligerent voice.

On the swaying deck of the 60-foot craft, his two comrades, as though on the parade ground, clicked their heels behind their leader and heiled away.

"What was your answer?" I asked with some curiosity. "Oh, I did not trouble to say anything; I just stripped them of their wet clothes and put them into boiler suits." The perfect reply, I think you will agree.

Cringing Boy

Right at the other end of the scale was the boy whom they picked up on Goodwin Sands. He was terrified and cringing, and even when they gave him a drink of sal volatile, shied from it as if it were poison.

At the same time, ironically, this particular prisoner had in his possession a German-French phrase book with a paper cover, published at Lille, in which such optimistic sentences occurred as: "I want to thank you for your kindness" and "You speak German very well."

I looked through it myself and I found that it had been composed with the usual thoroughness of the German mentality. Every contingency was covered. Under the title of "General expressions of usefulness," I found: "Where is there a music-hall?...a laundry?"

Between the back pages I found a coupon that had come out of a cigarette packet. Apparently, if you collected enough coupons, you could send them up, and in exchange you received a wonderful present. For five coupons you got a free picture of the Olympic Games of 1936; and for six coupons a picture of Herr Hitler himself.

I asked several of the crew whether, when they picked up a German, they felt like giving him a cigarette. Some did. Most did not. One of them quoted to me a story that he had seen in the paper of how, when a German prisoner was passing through a London station, a woman rushed forward and stuck a Spitfire box under his nose, and he contributed a five-mark piece with a grin. That story enraged the boy. To him it set the whole scene completely out of perspective.

Shower of Bombs

At that moment a call came through from Group headquarters, which meant that yarning was over for the time being and action was here again. Swiftly we helped each other on with our lifebelts, as we started to nose our way through the harbor entrance and made for the open sea.

To our left, a convoy, coming round the corner, was suddenly enveloped in an avalanche of bombs. Great cascades of water soared towards an angry scarlet sky. To one side of us they were shelling Dover. We ourselves, steering middle course, were out to search for a Blenheim that was supposed to have come down roughly half-way between the French coast and our own.

The vibration of the boat was tremendous. As we gathered more and more speed, and I fought to keep a footing somehow on the railless deck, I remembered what the flying-officer who had served with gallantry with the merchant service right through the last war had said to me a few hours back.

"I like my job, going out in these rescue boats, because I have reached the stage in my existence when I would rather save one life than destroy a hundred."

Besides my self and the officer in charge, there were 10 of us on board, engineers, deck hands, wireless operators, coxswains. And I suppose I ought to add, two Lewis guns.

Anyway, we all wore our tin hats and hoped for the best.

I knew that this section of the R.A.F. have an unwritten code that nothing shall stop them reaching their objective. Just as I knew that we must have arrived at the spot where the machine was thought to have crashed, when we ourselves started to slacken speed.

Like Vultures

As we all strained our eyes, the fellow at my side, who came from West Hartlepool, shouted above the engines jerking his thumb towards the French cliffs: "Looks as though we'll have our pint tonight in Calais. What's the beer like over there, mate?"

Before I could answer there was a spattering of tracer bullets on the water round us. Up went our heads, to a man, for in the intentness of our search upon the water's surface we had failed to see the six Messerschmitts 109s bearing down on us like black vultures.

Here was a chance for the boy in the rear gun turret. Unprotected as he was, I watched him go into action with a grin.

They must have been about 800 feet above us. With the odds six to one against him, he gave as good as we got. With the boat rocking as it was, it was incredible that he could be accurate at all. Good shooting, "Yen," they ought to be proud of you down Bridgewater way. And anyway, they made off, didn't they? Could they have been afraid of us? It seems impossible. Maybe they were out for bigger prey.

The one thought of the crew was not for their escape, but for the rescue in which they had been frustrated. Often when they are looking for the crew of one machine, they effect another rescue by chance.

The last time my boat had been over near the French coast one of our pilots baled out from a Hurricane so close to them that, as the captain put it, "If we'd had a blanket, we could have caught him in that." As it was, they reckon that he must hold the record to date for the brevity of his dip in "the ditch."

Sigh of Relief

He was the squadron leader of the formation of Hurricanes above their heads, twice decorated already, and his first words on board were: "Fancy the old man being caught out like that." Then he made a gesture to feel for his pocket book, opened it and exclaimed, with a sigh of relief: "I was afraid my petrol coupons might have been spoilt."

It was almost dark when we got back ourselves. An Anson guarding the convoy, circled round us, demanding the right recognition signal. This was supplied by the boy from Cardiff, who as we had set out had said: "Now for some fun and games." But the real fun and games was later, when we linked up in the pub and swapped experiences with some of the soldiers of a famous Irish regiment guarding this section of the coast.

Many of them had had German prisoners to deal with, sometimes acting as their escort to London. Indeed, one of them, a red-headed lad from Liverpool, agreed that it had been the happiest moment in his life when he had been able to point out in London familiar landmarks that the German had been assured were razed to the ground, like the Houses of Parliament and Buckingham Palace.

Much Surlier

He told me, too, that the prisoners belonging to lower ranks were much surlier than the officers. He suggested that many of the regular German officers of the Luftwaffe struck him as being "browned-off" because they were no longer allowed to return to the same base from which they had flown. This was designed by Goering to prevent them from realizing their losses, and it was getting on their nerves. So much so that it was almost a relief to have crashed and be a prisoner.

Which reminds me of something a doctor told me, who looked after two German members of a bomber crew. Despite all his efforts, one died from his wounds. The other boy showed no sorrow. The doctor was surprised and challenged him. "Why should I care?" the Nazi retorted. "I have never seen him before we took off to bomb London."

Again, all the Germans who bale out over the S.E. make a similar request. It is to be directed to the nearest post of their own infantry, whom they fondly imagine have landed before them.

Many of them boast freely about victory. When one of the officers had his exaggerated claims refuted and was told that he knew nothing about the real course of the war, this was his reply: "But I do not want to know anything. Why we lost the last war was because the officers knew too much. We know nothing. We trust Hitler blindly. It is best—that way."

Another prisoner, after the usual bombast, added something which struck me as rather significant. He volunteered: "We think that America may come in on your side."

"And if she does, what will happen then? Will you still win the war?" his captor queried.

"I hope so." But for the first time there was doubt in his tone. Another prisoner asked if he could listen to the wireless. But this was curious. He did not want to listen to Hamburg or any other of his own stations. He wanted to listen to the German propaganda broadcast from our own BBC. And for this reason, he was anxious to hear the list of captured prisoners given at the end.

"But do you listen to our German broadcasts at home?" he was asked. "Surely that is punishable with death?" The pilot shrugged his shoulders. "Yes, we do listen," he replied.

What a Nazi Said

That is encouraging news for the BBC. But what cheered me most, in view of the happenings of the last few days, were the first words with which an airman, bailing out over the south-east, greeted a friend of mine who raced in his car to the spot.

This Nazi did not need to carry a dictionary. He spoke excellent English, for he had spent three years in Manchester. And this is what he said. "I have been over your country thirty times. I am sorry I have crashed. I would have liked to have flown over it another thirty times. because of the damage that you have done to my country."

Remmeber that true admission, straight from the Nazi's mouth, and chalk it up in letters a foot high on the wall of your shelter, I intend to in ours.

Capital Damaged But Unbroken Under Air Raids

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—In six weeks of constant air attack, day and night, with only a few brief breathing spells, Hitler's bombing force already has chipped away at the stone and steel and people that make London.

Even its most patriotic inhabitants do not deny that London has been hit hard by the pounding it is trying to take with chin up.

Parts of it lie in ruins. Half its population lives underground. The ordinary business of living grows ever more difficult. Ripped-up streets, shattered buildings and unexploded time bombs slow up transportation. There are districts without any gas, water or electricity.

Londoners are carrying on, but they are liking less and less the nightly pounding they take from the Nazi raiders. It is a hard existence, especially in the poorer districts where homes have been destroyed.

Take Tea in Pub

The worker comes home, picks up his wife and children, stops in a neighborhood pub for tea—there is no gas at home—and then goes to a public shelter for the night.

There he twists and tosses in an effort to get a little sleep on hard bunks, gets up in the morning, washes and has tea anywhere he can find water and gas, and then goes back to work again.

Half of London goes to public shelters every night. The other half goes underground to private shelters, none of which, incidentally, are as safe as the public ones.

That means the loss of virtually half of every day. Lines outside the deep subway shelters start forming about noon, for example, as one member of each family takes his place, loaded down with quilts, blankets and pillows for all the other members.

At 4 p.m., when police open the underground shelters, the placeholders may enter and deposit their bed clothes. That reserves places for the family up to 7 p.m.

Subway Only Home

Two lines are painted on the subway platforms—the 4 p.m. line and the 7 p.m. line. Those lucky enough to grab places behind the first can spread out an extra two feet after rush hour traffic is over. That leaves eighteen inches for travellers to pick their way in and out of stations, stepping above the teeming thousands who make their underground caves their second homes—in some cases, the only home they have.

The same situation exists in the trench and surface shelters.

Servants in one home, for example, get the afternoon off to be able to wait in line at a near-by shelter. Then, dinner has to be served at 6 p.m. so they can get the table cleared away before the sirens go.

Like many other Londoners, they come home only in time to make the morning tea. In their case, however, it is made from near-boiling water from the bathroom faucet, since there is no gas on which to boil it. That's also the reason dinner now is always cold cuts.

One of the big difficulties in London today is the cumulative effect of six weeks of bombings. One row of houses knocked down does not look so bad. What gives the real appearance of devastation is to let the debris lie around day after day until another hit is scored in the same neighborhood.

"Disgusting Delay"

London newspapers already have started a campaign backed by letters from business men against what they call "disgusting" delay in carrying out demolition work and repairing essential services needed for business.

It is getting so now that a sixth sense tells you when you get to a bombed area. First you look up into shattered windows. Then comes the ghastly mess of piled-up matchwood and masonry where once stood a house, store or factory.

As would be expected, the swiftest withdrawal of civilians to safer areas is from the hardest-hit districts.

Most damage has been inflicted night after night in the same districts, which the Germans apparently have marked out as primary targets. Many bombs also have been scattered haphazardly on other sections from altitudes of up to three miles—where a bombardier's sneeze might make a difference of half a mile in his aim.

Removal of civilians from these districts has complicated the transportation problem because workers who used to live within walking distance of their jobs now have long rides to work.

SKILLED DRAFTEES FOR MOST PRODUCTIVE TASKS

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP)—The United States army has completed arrangements for identifying skilled draftees so they may be used in the military tasks at which they will be most productive.

Officials said today that the system would operate "more effectively" than the classification procedure during the last war. Ready now, it will first be applied to conscript soldiers when the initial contingent of 30,000 is called up November 18 for military training.

REFIT 'AMERIKA' FOR TRANSPORT

Vessel Seized by U. S. From Germany Years Ago is Being Reconditioned

Baltimore, Oct. 19 — (AP)—A great red and gray liner, seized years ago from Germany and used as a United States troopship, came out of retirement today to feel the pound of hammers and slap of paint brushes as workmen prepared her for service.

Exact use to be made of her has not been announced, but the Amerika—as she was known when she was a liner of the German fleet—has been ordered reconditioned as a United States army transport.

The call to duty that brought the 700-foot war prize from quiet, out-of-the-way harbor at Solomon's Island in lower Chesapeake Bay came eight years after she was delegated to the Maritime Commission's "ghost fleet" of wartime vessels.

The vessel was seized in Boston when the United States entered the war in 1917 and quickly converted to a troopship. After the war she was put into passenger service as the America, and twice achieved fame with rescues in mid-Atlantic.

Now, in addition to her new paint and fixtures, she will get a new name to avoid duplication with the new America recently put into service by the United States lines.

COLONY MEMBERS SAFE AFTER STORM

Terrific Storm Passes Over Wake Island in the Pacific Ocean

Honolulu, Oct. 21—(AP)— Radio signals hummed from Wake Island with word that all members of Pan American Airways' colony there are safe after a terrific storm.

The message which dispelled the growing concern felt for the inhabitants of the little island was relayed from Midway Island to the Pan American station here. Wake Island's last direct report before communication was disrupted Friday, said the radio station had been partly wrecked by the storm.

In San Francisco, Pan American officials persuaded woners of the freighter Black Osprey to divert her from her course near Wake Island to learn just what damage the storm had done. Long before the ship could reach the island, however, word came through that all was well.

About 35 persons, all Pan American employees and their families, make their homes on Wake Island.

(In San Francisco, Pan American Airways reported later that radio despatches from Wake, relayed by the Black Osprey, established that 75 per cent of the buildings on Wake had been damaged.

(Part of the hotel was unroofed, a fourth of the dock was knocked down, and the station launch was capsized.

(The radio operator on the island said he was transmitting with power from storage batteries on the spare launch.))

GIVES PAIR LIFT, ROBBED OF $165

Police Searching for Man Woman Who Allegedly Assaulted Man

London, Ont., Oct. 21 (CP)—Gordon Humphries of Strathroy, was robbed of $165 on the outskirts of London Saturday night, while giving a ride home to a man and a woman. Police are searching for the couple.

Humphries was struck on the head by the man's fist, and bruised. He was on his way home from Windsor, and made a stop in this city, officials were told. While here he met the pair and undertook to drive them home.

They directed him south of the city and he was told "We get out here," and stopped his car.

The man got out of the automobile, walked around to the driver's door and struck Humphries with his fist. Then he dragged the driver far enough out of the car to take his money.

The victim reported to city police, who directed him to Provincial Police, because the affair took place beyond the city limits.

Sharp Upswing In Sale of Used Cars is Noted

Ottawa, Oct. 21—(CP)—A sharp upswing in sales of used motor vehicles in Canada and a slight increase in new vehicle sales were reported today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in its September report on the financing of motor vehicles.

The bureau said 12,974 units were financed for $5,265,143, up 27 per cent in number and 26 per cent in dollar volume above the 10,183 vehicles financed to the extent of $4,122,465 in September last year. The volume of business was greater than for any other September in the bureau's records, and surpassed the previous high point September, 1937, by four per cent.

Financing of new motor vehicles was up four per cent in number and 13 per cent in amount of financing over September last year.

Village of Tamworth Threatened by Fire

Tamworth, Ont., Oct. 21—(CP)—Half a dozen residents of this community, 38 miles northwest of Kingston, were credited today with controlling a fire which broke out Saturday and threatened the entire village.

Volunteer firemen and a bucket brigade kept up a steady flow of water until a detachment of the Kingston fire department and a group of fire fighters from Napanee arrived.

'Cultivate Further Act of War' Advice Given Jap Leaders

His statement was issued after a military review attended by Emperor Hirohito.

"All officers and men of the army and navy must realize the heavy responsibility imposed on them to renew loyalty and strengthen solidarity," General Tojo said.

"While enhancing our military prestige we must cultivate further the act of war in order to build a premier position in the world."

SLIPPERY ROADS CAUSE 6 DEATHS OVER THE WEEKEND

Accident Death Toll Reaches Fourteen, the Highest in Some Weeks

THREE DROWN

(By The Canadian Press)

The season's first fall of snow in the southern districts of Ontario caused scores of traffic accidents as highway pavements became slippery, tied up a number of Royal Canadian Air Force training planes but resulted in a minor death toll from automobile crashes.

Although many cars got out of control on the wet, icy pavements only a handful of crashes were accompanied by fatalities. Of a total accident death toll of 14 during the week-end, six were due to motoring accidents Saturday and Sunday, two were results of previous accidents, three were due to gas, one to burns, one to a plane crash and one to a fall.

Out of Control

Most serious accident occurred late Sunday when a car operated by Harold Scaife of Toronto, got out of control crossing a bridge in the Village of Bolton, 20 miles northwest of Toronto, hurdled the side and landed top downward in fifteen feet of water in the Humber river.

The driver, his brother Howard and an unidentified third man in the front seat of the sedan were trapped in the machine and lost their lives. Three members of the Irish Regiment of Canada, including the driver's brother, Fred Scaife, Melville Green and Douglas Harper, fought their way to safety from the back seat.

On Saturday Aircraftsman Dick Milne of North Bay, flying an R.C.A.F. training plane in "dog-fight" practice, crashed near Toronto and was killed.

Crashes Into Culvert

Mrs. Mina McGarry, 45, of Greenville, S.C., and on her way home after a visit to Ottawa, was killed ten miles north of Toronto Saturday when her car went out of control and crashed into a culvert.

James Beamish, 27, of Islington, Ont., was killed early Sunday when his car collided in a Toronto suburban district with one operated by Neil M. Wilbur of Toronto. Police said Wilbur was charged with manslaughter.

Victor C. Kirk of a Toronto suburban district died of carbon monoxide poisoning in the cab of his truck early Sunday.

At Welland two young store clerks, Gilbert Lane, 18, and Grant Misener, 17, were asphyxiated by gas in their lodgings when they apparently fell asleep waiting for a gas heater to heat water for baths.

Falls From Scaffold

A third fatality occurred in Welland when Gordon Downey, 30 was killed in a 35-foot fall from a scaffolding on which he was working.

Two-year-old Billy Hunter of London died seven hours after his clothing caught fire in a gasoline explosion in his home.

Mrs. Edith Irvine, 60, of Toronto, was killed on a city street Sunday night when she was struck by a car which did not stop.

MUSSOLINI PILOTS HIS OWN PLANE

Inspects Armed Forces and Then Returns to Rome

Rome, Oct. 21—(AP) — After a lightning inspection of Italian troops near the Yugoslav frontier, Premier Mussolini returned to Rome today amid ominous Balkan rumblings and renewed Fascist propaganda attacks on Greece and Turkey.

While Mussolini, piloting his own plane, was speeding to three northern towns to visit his armed forces for the second time in the last few weeks, Virginia Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, charged that Greece and Turkey "are dangerously mixed up in insidious British policy."

But he added "it is their affair and does not concern the axis."

During the inspection yeterday, Mussolini visited units in Ronchi Del Legionari, Sappiane and San Pietro Del Carso. Recently he present five days with troops in the vicinity of Padua.

Anti-American Feeling Shown at Kaifeng

Chungking, Oct. 19.—(AP) — Central News, an agency of the Central Chinese government, reported today a renewal of anti-America outbursts at Kaifeng, Japanese-occupied capital of Honan province and said Japanese were forcing a withdrawal of Americans there.

The headlines of the Chinese press dwelt on Chinese-United States relations, reporting that a further United States loan to China is being considered.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM
1941

YOU'LL like the size of this trim new McLaughlin-Buick SPECIAL for '41—its room, its softer ride, its Permi-firm steering, its smart style.

But more important still is what happens under that broad bonnet—the thrill and the thrift you get from that husky, big, 115-hp. Buick FIREBALL* Eight.

For in each flame-packed cylinder of that silk-smooth power plant a flaring ball of fire is set off with the firing of each spark plug.

Packed to higher compression than ever before, fuel gives up more power and more mileage — power when you need it, economy throughout the whole driving range.

Indeed, so great is the power at your command that at 30 you use only one-eighth of the energy at your disposal. All the rest is there waiting for pick-up, hill-climb and sudden getaway. Even at 50 you use less than one-quarter of your available power.

More than that, to this engine you can likewise add Compound Carburetion—and step up both power output and your mileage. At 30 you'll get nearly one and one-half more miles per gallon, at 50 almost two.

But that's just one side of the story—the facts side. Only one thing will give you the stirring feel of Buick's thrill-packed behaviour on the road.

That's a demonstration — and it's yours for the asking. When will you be in to ask for it?

Make-Up Kit Yours Alone

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUNG THINGS, prettying up between dances, have a way of handing round a lipstick. Must not do! Of toilet articles, neither a borrower nor a lender be.

A soiled powder pad, which has been fluffed over a skin that is beset with pustules, can harbor germs that cause infections. It is a horrid practice to use pads that aren't strictly clean. Some day we'll do away with them, substituting material that can be thrown away.

It isn't safe even to dip into somebody else's cream jar. Certainly one should never use a washcloth other than one's own, or a towel either. Every member of the family should have his or her own supply of linens. Hair brushes used by individuals who are afflicted with dandruff can communicate the parasitic growths that produce scalp scales.

Use Fresh Pad

Those tiny pads that fit in vanity cases for the purpose of laying on the complexion's dull finish and pretty blushes should be renewed frequently; women are all too careless about that matter.

Beware especially of the borrowed lipstick, which is a menace. Throat infections are passed along that way.

Please, you teen age girls, pay heed to these warnings. Be fastidious. Without fastidiousness a girl cannot be dainty, and daintiness is one of the elements of beauty.

x x x

If, when you awaken in the morning, you have a metallic taste in your mouth you can be pretty sure that your breath is unpleasant. An offensive breath may be due to infections of the teeth, throat or nasal passages. Again, it may be caused by digestive disturbances. Repeated colds leave the mucous membranes of the nose in an unhealthy condition.

Don't bear with this affliction. See the family doctor, who will make an examination, discover the source of the trouble and correct it.

Silk Stocking Ban Causes Eng. Women To Turn to Slacks

(By J. Norman Lodge)

London, Oct. 21. — (AP)— The women's shops of London looked like department store bargain basements Saturday as the fair sex of this beleagured capital swarmed in to buy silk stockings, lingerie, handbags, powder, rouge and other articles of feminine beautification.

It was another phase of the war. The purchase tax which is expected to raise £110,000,000 (about $440,000,000) for Britain's war needs will become effective Monday and these things will bear a levy of one-third the price.

The woman, it seems, pays in this case, too.

Another point of the program is that, starting today, women will be able to buy only nineteen shades of slips and panties: Navy, gazelle, coffee, cloud, new nectarine, new lilac, R.A.F. blue-grey, khaki, new mist, opaline, black, ivory, lagoon, new peach, azure, champagne, rose, nile and pompadour. Ah, me!

The lingerie dealers, it seems, adopted a shade card which is now standardized.

The shops did a big business, too, in slacks.

The women seem hard-hearted about this, apparently concluding it's better to hide their legs than to show them in anything but silk, because after Dec. 1 legs must be encased in something other than silk—unless you think silk made out of wood shavings and other ersatz products are nice to look at.

More essential commodities than women's accessories, things like drugs and medicines, will carry a one-sixth of the purchase price tax. Children's clothing will be exempted.

There's still a lot of confusion about the tax in the minds of the people. Tailors are particularly bitter, complaining that a suit ordered some time ago but delivered after Monday, must carry a tax—not on the cloth, but on the tailoring.

Jewelry also is to be taxed and taxed highly, but the only rings I've noticed hereabouts lately are those people wear under their eyes from lack of sleep.

A portable room cooling device has been invented that is operated by an electric fan drawing fresh air from a window through a wall of excelsior kept moist by water pumped from a three gallon reservoir.

Electromagnets carried by a truck driven by a Missouri highway maintenance crew picked up more than 5000 pounds of nails and other pieces of metal on roads in three countries within a month.

Charming Lynn Carter and Robert Young featured with Lewis Stone in the racing drama, "Sporting Blood," next at the Belle with "The Sea Raider."

Indecisive Child

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

A child or adult's chronic indecision not only makes him unhappy but causes other people a deal of annoyance. Consider how the clerk must wait and work because her prospective buyer can't make up her mind. See also the cost and trouble resulting from the return of goods by the purchaser who was uncertain when the purchase was made.

A mother writes:

"Dear Mr. Myers: Although we have three children, five, eleven, and thirteen years of age, we have not had any serious problems. They are healthy, smart and amenable to reason. My husband and I, by cooperating, have been able to avert many seemingly potential problems . . .

Irritating Trait

"But we do have one problem that has not vanished. Our eldest daughter is a victim of indecision. This trait, besides making her unhappy, upsets the whole family at times. I have tried to help her by letting her select her own gifts, shoes, dresses, books, or anything in which she might have a preference.

"When the belt of a favorite dress was torn, she had the money with which to buy a new one, and made three trips to town before she could decide what style to buy; all the while bemoaning the fact that she could not wear that particular dress. When we are going anywhere that the children might enjoy, the other two children always know where they will go or stay; but not Esther. She see-saws around, weeps quietly, and (I admit with shame), usually makes me angry so that I command her to go, or to stay..."

I am not sure my answer to this mother helped her much, but suspect, as I wrote her, that some items in this child's experience must have caused this painful habit of indecision. No doubt, too, she feels that the younger children and parents conspire against her. I urged the mother not to rebuke this child for her indecisions, but to try being patient with her and help her to be satisfied, even happy, over her selections once they are made. Her indecision is far more emotional than in a similar problem with the very young child, and deserves more consideration.

Honor Choice

To parents of younger children: Give them opportunity to choose but once they have chosen try to hold them to their choice. The tot of three says he wants bread with butter and jam on it. When you have it prepared he decides he wants jelly instead of jam, let him take the bread with butter and jam or none. He says he doesn't want to go with you to the market but as you are stepping on the starter he comes running and shouting "I want to go along." Tell him then it is too late. Honor the child's choice when it is at all reasonable, but once it is made expect him to stick to it.

FASHION FLASHES

SEEING SPOTS these days means seeing leopard and ocelet fur. To dress up a simple frock, try a belt of leopard or ocelet with matching bracelet studded with chunky jewel-colored stones.

LITTLE GIRLS are dressing up too this autumn. A delightful dress coat for a young miss is of purple tweed, made with three slanting rows of tiny velvet-covered buttons from neckline to waist. Velvet collar and velvet cuff pipings.

THERE'S DRAMA in many of the new accessories. Take a bag that is also half muff and is made of an enormous fox head with feet and paws forming the handle.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Business Girl Finds Domesticity Boring

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I haven't any business in the world writing you, as I should be riding the crest of the wave. I'm married to a wonderful man, with a good income, have a beautiful baby a year old, and have no financial or family worries. I should be the happiest person in the world.

Before I married I held a responsible position as secretary and my work was interesting. I made good money, but worked hard for it. Now I feel so useless and dumb. I miss the excitment and the independent feeling that work gives a person.

Don't misunderstand me. I have no maid. Do all my housework, including laundry, because I wish it so. But it doesn't seem to fill the bill. Are there more women like me? I love my husband and baby, but why shouldn't I be content with this new life?

What do you think of my returning to work, when there really is no need for it? B. E. D.

It seems to me if you should go back to office work at the present time, you'd miss the best months of companionship with your baby. Never is a toddler so engaging as when he's taking an interest in the world about him, and loving you with all his heart. Perhaps after another year, if you still feel dissatisfied and want to go back to an office, you could manage by turning the baby over to a trained nurse. Some women just find domesticity a bore. And there's no arguing about that. I think you'll lose a good deal if you give up the baby at present.

She Wants Him To Be of Age Before Marrying

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a young man of 19, in love with a girl four years my senior. She has been avoiding me lately for no reason whatsoever, but always says to wait until 1943 and then things might be different. What does she mean by that? Do you think I should wait that long for her, or forget her entirely?

It makes me turn green with envy when I see her talking to other boys. I've tried taking out other girls, but they don't seem to interest me, and I'm bored to death when in their company. Will you please advise me?

Mel.

As this young lady is four years older than you are, apparently she wants to make sure that you are legally of age before she consents. But don't you think 19 is pretty young to tie yourself up in an engagement and suffer pangs of jealousy when you see this young lady talking to other boys?

The sensible thing for you to do would be to force yourself to take an interest in other girls. It can be done. If things are propitious by 1943—there you are.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bereaved Family Welcomes Friendly Words

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I just learned today that a friend of mine passed away three weeks ago. Needless to say it is quite a shock. I would like to know whether I should telephone her mother, just send her a sympathy card, or write a note of condolence?

2. She had been married about eighteen months but I never met her husband so it wouldn't be necessary to extend my sympathy to him personally, would it? I have been told many times that I had a "knack" of writing lovely letters for any occasion, but I feel that this is one time I need your advice.

E.

1. It would be appropriate to extend your sympathy to this friend's mother by telephone, or by a really-made sympathy card. By all means write her a letter of condolence at once, telling her of your sympathy, of your devotion to her daughter, of your wish to help, if there is any possible way in which you can help. If the mother lives in the same place in which you live, I suggest that you ask her if you may come to see her to offer your sympathy in person, and to see if there is anything you may do to serve her. I know you will make your letter deeply understanding, a sweet comfort to this broken-hearted mother. "When the shadow falls" we need warmhearted words, friendly words, words of real sympathy.

2. Yes, I do think that you should also right a note of condolence to this friend's husband, even if you have not met him, he will appreciate your good words of sympathy.

Announcing Arrival of Son

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Just two weeks ago you gave us some very valuable advice on how to arrange wedding affairs. Now I am coming to you again for advice in our next stage of life, which is the birth of our first child. We are very much in doubt as to how to word our announcements, and we do want them to be correct.

If we are blessed with a boy, is it necessary for him to bear his father's full name in order to be a junior? If we name him William Lands, as we have planned, must we sign the announcements as "William Lands, Jr." or can we sign them "Billy Lands, Jr.?"

D.

I'm proud indeed that you write me about this grand news of the "next stage of life" and every good and friendly wish to you and your husband.

If the newcomer is a boy, it must be given his father's full name to be a "junior". Then, on the baby card, the name would read, William Lands, junior, or William Lands, Jr. (The word junior is written with a small letter when it is spelled in full, and with a capital if abbreviated, Jr.)

Do not, on this announcement, use the nickname.

Weight Chart Misguidances

I find that too many mothers take weight-height tables too seriously. Of course, you all have seen the tables to which I refer; the ones that tell you what your child should weigh if he is a certain age and a certain height.

These weights are simply an average for a large number of children a sort of standard. The fact that your child doesn't weight what the tables show the average to be for his age and height doesn't mean there is anything the matter with him.

The Dionne Quintuplets, now aged six weight between fifty and fifty-two pounds. Charts in popular use show the average for their age and height to be 43 pounds. Taking the Charts too literally, you would say that these children are seven to nine pounds overweight. That isn't the case. These children are of the stocky type, with large bones. The French-Canadian, as a type, is a stocky, sturdy. If we dieted the Quintuplets down to 43 pounds, all five would be badly undernourished.

When you seek to judge whether a child is over or underweight, you must do more than measure his height and ask his age. Heredity must be considered. Are his people large or small boned; stocky or slender? Build depends a great deal on race. Weight tables compiled in India, for example, show that Hindus weight 18 per cent less than Americans and Canadians of the same age. The point is, a child may be of the stocky type, and so naturally weight more than others of his age, or he may be of the slender, slight type, and weight less.

However, don't get the idea that I am trying to discredit these weight-height tables. I'm not. They have a very definite use, and mothers do well to have them and study them. If a child is more than 10 per cent heavier or lighter than the tables how the average to be, then it would be a good idea to have him looked over by your family doctor.

If the child should be overweight, he'll tell you, and at the same time prescribe a proper and safe diet to bring his weight down within the right range. He will give you a diet that will give the child plenty of energy without too much fattening materials.

The Quintuplets, for all their stocky type do have a tendency to be overweight, and we watch their diet closely. Fortunately in this we have the hundred per cent cooperation of the children themselves. They are very conscious of their tenency to get fat, and they are always asking us if it is all right to eat this or that. All we have to do is tell them something or other is fattening and they leave it severely alone.

Sometimes the Quints see the nurses eating something that isn't in their own diets. Without envy, they say:

"Miss Dubeau will get fat if she eats that".

Napanee Trucker Dies of Injuries

Percival Furrs Injured in Automobile Accident Late Friday Evening

Percival Furrs, Napanee trucker, died in the Belleville General Hospital this morning after receiving injuries in a motor accident near Marysville early last Friday evening. An inquest opened before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson and following identification the body was released for burial and the proceedings adjourned until Nov. 18th next.

Furrs sustained fatal injuries on Friday night when the truck he was driving was in a head-on collision with a motor car, being driven in the opposite direction by Frank Correll, Manager of the local branch of the Canadian Department Stores. Mr. Correll sustained a badly fractured jaw and internal injuries and is seriously ill in the hospital, while A. E. Ray, a passenger in Mr. Correll's car escaped with minor hurts.

As the result of the crash Mr. Furrs was found wedged inside the cab of his truck and it was only after considerable effort on the part of garagemen that he was released. He sustained several internal injuries and facial lacerations. No details as to the cause of the accident were given out by investigating police at the time.

The coroner's jury as summoned by Sergeant Arthur Booth today consisted of Messrs. George Meagher, foreman, W. J. MacLaurin, Robt. Miles, Wm. Symons and C. McBride.

Identification was made today by Rev. A. C. McCallum of Napanee, while Dr. R. A. Flynn attending physician, also told of treating the deceased man upon his arrival in the hospital. Coroner Dr. Robertson ordered a post mortem to be completed.

No Mercy to be Shown To Hit-and-Run Drivers—Conant

Toronto, Oct. 21 —(CP)— No mercy will be shown hit-and-run drivers in Ontario, Attorney-General Conant said today as he reviewed the week-end's high toll of traffic fatalities. Renewed efforts are to be made at once to stem the rising tide of fatal accidents.

"These hit-and-run drivers will get no mercy from me," Mr. Conant said. "It's the most despicable form of lawlessness. People who stop (after an accident) and take it on the chin may have some sympathy but the fellow who hits someone and runs is a bad citizen."

The traffic accident figures make the situation look "alarming," the Attorney-General said. He proposed to call a conference of various law enforcement officers to study means of improving the situation.

The death of Mrs. Edith Irvine yesterday brought Toronto's death toll from traffic accidents to 61 for the year and led to the comment today by H. G. Fester of the Ontario Safety League that if the rate continues to increase, the death toll in Canada will be equivalent to "a perpetual state of war."

"Primary responsibility rests on reckless, careless, thoughtless and indifferent drivers," Fester said. "The careless, indifferent, intoxicated or semi-intoxicated pedestrian ranks second."

Toronto's death toll from traffic accidents in 1939 was 61.

Will Blow Up Wells In Dutch East Indies If Japanese Attack

Johannesburg, South Africa, Oct. 21—(CP)—Oil wells and refineries in The Netherlands East Indies would be blown "sky high" if the Japanese attacked the islands, Lt.-Cmdr. Harloff, chief of The Netherlands Air Force in Britain, said today.

Harloff, here en route to the East Indies, said the Japanese had been so warned. He added that the Japanese could be held off a long time if they attacked the East Indies because "there are no fifth column traitors."

HELD IN SPY PLOT

Adjournment Asked To Permit Mental Examination of Accused

Sweetsburg, Que., Oct. 21.—(CP)—Counsel for Clarence Hebert, on trial in Court of Criminal Assizes on a charge of murdering his wife, the former Phyllis Upton of Guelph, Ont., today sought an adjournment to Wednesday to permit a mental examination of the accused.

Patrick Delaney, counsel asked for the adjournment in order to give Dr. Adrien Plouffe, alienist at Bordeaux prison, time to examine Hebert and testify at the trial on his mental condition.

Judge Louis Cousineau said he would give his decision this afternoon.

Body of Mrs. Hebert, who disappeared in the Spring of 1939, was found under a clump of bushes two miles from Granby, Que., last December. Hebert is a resident of St. Albans, Vt.

Appearing as witness today were Euclide Hebert of Guelph, Ont., and Mrs. Mary Hopsteter of Hamilton, Ot., brother and sister of the accused and Mrs. George Hebert, Granby, Que., his aunt.

Easily Influenced is Claim

The brother and sister both testified Hebert was easily influenced by others. Euclide said his brother preferred playing with children instead of talking to adults and was "too young for his age".

Mrs. Georges Hebert, at whose home Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hebert lived for a time, said the accused had no authority over his wife, who, she added, was "not normal".

Speaking of his nephew's wife Mrs. Hebert said it was necessary to watch her constantly, for she would "fly into rages" and "leap at her husband and pull his hair".

Addressing the lawyers, she said: "Hebert was very patient and there is not one among you who would have endured that. Hebert's wife would not choose her places to quarrel. She quarrelled everywhere."

No More Enlistments For General Duties Required by RCAF

Ottawa, Oct. 21—(CP)—The Air Ministry announced today that while the Royal Canadian Air Force is still enlisting skilled tradesmen and men for flying duties as pilots, air observers and air gunners, recruiting officers have been forced to decline, for the present at least, further applications for enlistment for general duties not requiring any particular skill.

"This ruling of course does not apply to aircrew or skilled tradesmen whose services are still in great demand," the Air Ministry said in a statement.

The greater part of the Air Force personnel is enlisted for specific duties—pilots, observers, gunners, mechanics, instrument makers and numerous skilled trades, the Air Ministry statement said, adding:

"But in addition to these the response from many thousands of young Canadians, anxious to serve but unable to qualify for any of these specific assignments, has been so great that applications now on file will take care of all requirements for many months.

"Rather than accept applications and keep the men waiting for long periods, it has been decided to suspend acceptance altogether in this category."

Only recently it was announced that the R.C.A.F. was recruiting 1,000 experienced wireless and electrical mechanics for almost immediate overseas service and aero engine mechanics, airframe mechanics and other skilled men are also being enlisted promptly.

Frank Correll's Condition Given As Favorable

Hospital officials announced today that the condition of Mr. Frank Correll, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Department Stores, who was injured in a motor accident on Friday evening last, was quite favorable this afternoon. Mr. Correll suffered a multiple fracture of the jaw.

Today Dr. Farmer, a specialist in such matters from Toronto, assisted by Dr. R. A. Flynn, operated on Mr. Correll to reduce the fracture, following which it was announced Mr. Correll was resting quietly.

The injuries were sustained when an automobile, which Mr. Correll was driving, collided head-on with a truck, driven by the late P. Furrs, of Napanee, near Marysville. Mr. Furrs died in the hospital this morning.

Pembroke, Ont., Oct. 21—(CP)—On remand since last Thursday when she pleaded guilty to placing an obstruction on the Canadian National Railway tracks near Wolfe Station, Oct. 14, Doris Schwartz a 17-year-old Wilberforce Township girl, was sentenced to an indefinite term in the Mercer Reformatory at Toronto by Magistrate T. M. J. Galligan today.

The girl pleaded guilty to placing a metal bar, 18 inches long and weighing 15 pounds on the track. Asked by the Magistrate why she did such a thing, the girl said she "just wanted to see if the bar would flatten out when the train ran over it."

Beaverbrook Aims To Fill Skies With British Aircraft

Britain Has More Planes Available for Operational Service Than Ever Before

London, Oct. 21 (CP Cable) — Britain has more planes available for operational service than ever before, Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, told newsmen today but added: "I am still not satisfied."

The Minister was not bemoaning the speed of production. He meant that he is not going to be satisfied until the sky is swarming with British aircraft. He said that from the time he took over the Ministry he had made up his mind that he would not be satisfied until production reached this peak, but added: "I feel a lot more comfortable about our condition than last June."

He paid tribute to the plant output of Canada but said: "This is sort of spasmodic at present." Britain is still getting a "good flow" of planes from the United States, he said, adding there is "no reason to expect" that winter will force a postponement of ferrying bombers across the Atlantic."

Fliers of Five Nationalities, Avenging Rape of Their Countries, Take Part in Defence of Britain

(By Godfrey Anderson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 21 — (AP)—They shout "contact" in five foreign languages these days on the flying fields of Britain.

When a German raider, dodging his way through the barrage above the white cliffs of Dover, sights an avenging fighter on his tail he does not know if his foe is British or a native of one of the countries which Germany has overrun—Czecho - Slovakia, Poland, Norway, The Netherlands and France.

And soon his doubts will be complicated by Americans of the Eagle squadron, now in training as the newest addition to the "flying foreign legion."

The Poles are numerically the strongest unit of the legion. Over their stations British and Polish ensigns flutter from the same staffs.

Strange foreign tongues sound in villages where the Allied airmen are encamped. Few could speak English when they reached these shores and interpreters and pantomime had to convey the words of Royal Air Force instructors. Soon they picked up a few words of English and quickly learned to fly British planes.

Most of the Polish airmen reached Britain through Rumania, Syria and France after their country collapsed under German and Soviet Russian invasion. They have their own officers unlike some foreign units whose higher trades are staffed by Britons.

"When the Poles first came to this station they said, "we want to do everything just as you do, please," a senior R.A.F. officer told me.

"They insisted on mounting guard though we had to put an English sentry on duty with every Pole in case it was necessary to challenge anyone. The Poles couldn't make themselves understood."

Two Polish fighter squadrons are flying Hurricanes in defence of London. One of these destroyed 71 German planes in 18 days. A Polish ace, Sgt. Josef Frantisek, shot down five planes in a week.

Czech airmen who escaped to France as the Nazis executed their pre-war occupation of Czecho-Slovakia were removed from France in British ships and planes after the Vichy government signed its armistice with Germany. Like the Poles they brought their own mechanics.

A Czech Hurricane squadron, led by a British officer, has brought down 38 German planes in the last six weeks of the siege of London. There are also two Czech bomber squadrons. One is in Africa with the R.A.F. middle east command.

The flying Netherlands and Norwegians are co-operating with the R.A.F. coastal command, making sea reconnaissances, protecting convoys and attacking U-boats. Most of the Hollanders, formerly of The Netherlands naval air service, flew directly from France to the Free French leader, Gen. Charles De Gaulle, are still arriving from French North Africa. Some have flown with the R.A.F. on raids into Germany while otehrs have been on reconnaissance over Libya, Ethiopia and Egypt.

In a single week recently nearly 40 French pilots reached Gibraltar to offer their services to the R.A.F.

TRAFALGAR DAY MARKEDINLONDON

Wreaths Are Placed at Foot of Column in Honor of Lord Nelson's Victory

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—Great Britain, again on guard against forces massed across the English Channel awaiting an invasion opportunity paid little notice today to the naval hero who saved her from invasion by Napoleon 135 years ago.

Trafalgar Day, anniversary of the battle in which Horatio Nelson broke up Napoleon's navy off Spain Oct. 21, 1805, is usually the occasion for celebration.

Today, however, the constant danger of German air raids prevented parades and kept crowds from assembling in Trafalgar Square, which is dominated by a statue of Nelson.

Portsmouth, where Nelson's flagship "Victory" rests in permanent drydock, also was quiet.

Navy League officials and descendants of the tars of Nelson's fleet walked through the rain to lay wreaths at the foot of the Nelson column.

A bomb burst nearby recently, leaving a crater, but failed to mar the statue or its base. Nelson's admirers saw this as a favorable omen.

At Portsmouth, from the modernisteel masts of the "Victory" fluttered the famous signal which has been the watchword of Britain in every succeeding war—"England expects that every man will do his duty."

Halifax, Oct. 21 (CP)—Headed by Rear-Admiral S. S. Bonham-Carter of the Royal Navy, 200 naval men observed Trafalgar Day at a dinner here Saturday night.

Cheers greeted by the reading of a signal sent H.M.S. Ajax by H.M.S. Achilles, co-partner in the fight against the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee off the River Plate last year. The message, sent after the recent Mediterranean battle in which the Ajax sank two Italian destroyers and damaged a third, read: "Hearty congratulations. Don't sink them all before we have a chance to get at them."

Premier Hepburn Talks With Finance Minister

Toronto, Oct. 21 (CP)—Premier Hepburn conferred here today with Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Dominion Minister of Finance. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon and Chester S. Walters, Controller of Finances, also attended the conference.

"We were discussing financial matters," Mr. Hepburn said.

In view of Mr. Hepburn's recent statement there would be no new or increased taxation levied by the Provincial government, it is believed here. The Federal government may be preparing to make some adjustment to the province on its income tax collections.

British Communique

London, Oct. 21—CP)—The Air Ministry issued the following communique Monday night:

"A number of single enemy aircraft crossed the south coast this morning and flew towards London. A small number also penetrated to the midlands and the northwest.

"These activities were repeated on a small scale this afternoon. Bombs were dropped in the London area, mostly in the outskirts. Some houses were hit and a block of flats damaged. The number of casualties is small but included some persons killed.

"A factory was damaged in Manchester and some further damage was done at several points on the Channel coast. Casualties were nowhere large in number but some persons were killed.

"Our A.A. guns and fighter defences have been in action throughout the day and one enemy bomber is known to have been destroyed.

"It is now known that four enemy aircraft were destroyed during the night."

Argos 41-6 Defeat by Ottawa Worst Suffered Since Hayman Took Over Club 5 Years Ago

TOO MUCH POWER

Balmy Beach Headed Sarnia Battery While Montreal Defeated Hamilton

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

The championship bubble around Toronto Argonauts blew up in Lew Hayman's face today on the cold evidence that Ottawa Rough Riders have the defence of the Interprovincial Union Football championship well in hand.

There was nothing else in Saturday's football fashions to compare with the manner in which Riders dressed up a 41-6 pasting of the Argo machine at Ottawa. Even the 14-5 victory of Toronto Balmy Beach over Sarnia Battery in the Ontario Union, a victory taken on an impressive attack and stout defence, paled beside the Rider accomplishments on the day.

The other results were Montreal's 9-4 triumph of the season, to take third place in the Big Four, and a 10-10 tie between Camp Borden and Hamilton Alerts at London. Montreal whipped the Tigers at Hamilton.

Too Much Power

The Argo defeat was the worst suffered since Hayman took over the club five seasons ago. He had called this year's team to dethrone Ottawa and win the Canadian championship and the Riders took the challenge in stride.

With their stored-up power exploying almost every minute, the Riders rolled to seven touchdowns, yielded only one on Elwyn Morris' 80-yard run with a fumbled ball and left the Argos a bruised, bewildered and thoroughly-beaten football club. Their only consolation was that they had played without four regulars—Red Storey, Roy Kent, Chuck McLean and Tuffy Smith, but no one could say that these four would have made much difference.

Passing Attack Wins

Five thousand Toronto fans watched with pleasure and amazement as Beaches uncovered a passing attack to whip Sarnia handily and take over sole possession of first place in the O.R.F.U. Bobby Porter was the star. After getting a field goal on an orthodox ground drive in the first three minutes, Beaches picked up a single, another field goal and a touchdown from the passing of Porter and Art Walker.

Hugh Tunnicliffe and Walker kicked the field goals and Alexander drove over from the four for a touchdown in the fourth quarter. This offset the major score Ike Norris got for Sarnia when he dribbled the ball 50 yards after Harry Hampton broke through to block Porter's kick. The Beach line played brilliantly aside from that breakdown. They tackled fiercely and stopped Hank Galloway, Joe Woodcock and Ralph Perry with minor gains.

Turned on Power

Montreal's veterans turned on the power to beat the Tigers. Ray Millins kicked two placement field goals and Gord Noseworthy two singles in the first half for an 8-0 lead that the Tigers dented only with George Wright's placement in the third quarter. Noseworthy and Wright shared last-quarter singles.

The Alerts led the soldiers from Camp Borden 10-9 with only a few minutes to play, but they gambled the victory away. They were on their own 17 and decided to make a third-down stab for yards. It failed and Eddie Thompson tried a field goal for Boren but it went wide and the single left the clubs tied. Texas Dudley for Borden and Demarche of Hamilton scored the touchdowns.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By The Canadian Press)

Style notes: Conny Tudin, an amateur defenceman making a good impression with Montreal Canadiens has been taking quite a kidding from Coach Dick Irvin ever since he came to training camp with six suits.

"I've been around hockey players for more than 30 years", said Irvin "and Conny is the first one I've ever seen to have so many suits of clothes". Then Irvin pointed to two youngsters who had come from Lachine, Que., where Conny played last year, to watch Tudin in a couple of workout: "Heck, he's even got two valets to look after all his stuff".

When wedding bells ring in the New York Rangers' Camp, the member of the team who walks the middle aisle gets a set of silver flatware in an attractive case. The Rangers adopted the silverware as a standard wedding gift last year and six players were given sets last Autumn. Three more married within the last year received the sets this Fall—Clint Smith, Alf Pike and Johnny Polich, who plays with Philadelphia Ramblers in the Rangers' chain.

New York's world champion Rangers drifted through New York Americans' new "Kid Line" for three of their goals in beating the Americans 5-2 in an exhibition match in Winnipeg Saturday night. However, win, lose or draw Manager Red Dutton of Americans said that he would keep the youngsters on the team all season. All three, Bus Wycherley of Saskatoon, Bill Benson of Winnipeg, and Squee Allen of North Battleford, showed plenty of drive and the fans liked them.

Paul Haynes, veteran centre with Montreal Canadiens, covered nearly 1,000 miles last Spring in a search for talent in his capacity as scout for the Habitants. It was on this trip that Haynes saw Ken Reardon of Edmonton and had the 19-year old youngster's name put on Canadiens' negotiation list. Around Canadiens' camp now they say the trip was well worth while just from the standpoint of getting Reardon who has been starring in workouts.

Dutch Hiller became New York Rangers' first casualty in the exhibition game with Americans Saturday. Hiller pulled up with a sore knee shortly after the game got underway.

The Brothers Bruneteau are doing all right with Detroit Red Wings. Modere and his younger brother, Eddie, scored successive goals in the final period last night to give the Wings a 5-3 victory at Detroit over Indianapolis of the American League. Indianapolis is a Detroit Farm Club.

DICK KOWCINAK AND J. McCREEDY MAY SOON PART

Lure of Professionalism May Split Pair That Have Played Together for Four Years

WON FOUR TITLES

Both Are at Leafs' Camp at St. Catharines and Showing Fine Form

(By Dick Sheridan)

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 21.—(CP)—Hockey's current version of Damon and Pythias—the playing partnership of Dick Kowcinak and Johnny McCreedy—may soon vanish.

The youngsters who have skated the amateur ice lanes together since shortly after graduation from their tin-can shinny days on Winnipeg's side streets, admit the lure of professionalism may send them along separate paths.

Both are showing up well in training here with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League. Each has an open mind on the subject if one and not the other is offered a Leaf contract.

"There's no particular reason why we have played together so long and there's no reason why we shouldn't part if either of us can better himself", said McCreedy.

Since 1937 the boys have played together on four major amateur championship clubs. Should they move up to the Leafs together they might take their good luck with them and bring the Toronto Club its first Stanley Cup since 1932.

Kowcinak and McCreedy gained first National prominence when they helped Winnipeg Monarchs win the Dominion Junior title in 1937. The following year they went to Trail, B.C., and the Smoke Eaters won Canadian Senior honors.

In 1939 the Smoke Eaters toured Europe and won amateur tournament. Back in Canada, the Westerners played with Kirkland Lake and last winter the Blue Devils brought the Allan Cup to Northern Ontario's gold belt for the first time.

They have signed to perform this season with Sydney Millionaires, a team Kirkland Lake eliminated in the Senior playdowns. If they don't make the grade with the Leafs, the boys will return to Nova Scotia to shoot for their fifth straight amateur championship.

After the Blue Devils' third straight victory over Calgary Stampeders in the Allan Cup finals, when asked what he thought about it all, Kowcinak replied: "Boy that McCreedy is the greatest hockey player of them all—you can have your Drillons and Blakes, but give me Johnny—three scoring chances, three goals."

Buffalo Buys Chuck Shannon

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 21 —(AP)— Two newly-acquired players will report for practice with Buffalo in the American Hockey League today.

They are Chuck Shannon, rugged defenceman, formerly with the Syracuse farm team of the Toronto Maple Leafs, and Art Thompson, a wingman last season with Port Colborne, Ont., seniors.

Manager Tiny Thompson announced their purchase over the week-end.

THE CHAMP REGISTERS

Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, signed articles on the U. S. registration day, but of a kind to which he has not affixed his famous signature heretofore. The picture was made when Joe registered for the selective service draft, at a Chicago school. Standing and looking on is Joe's manager, Julian Black.

Here is a rough moment in the tense Balmy Beach—2-26 Battery R.C.A., of Sarnia tussle. The Beaches boys had the artillery squad blanked in the first two periods and with two placements and a kick to the deadline had piled up a count of 7. In the third period the cannoners got a touchdown and the Beaches a rouge making it 8-5.

FAMED AMATEUR LINE TRAINS WITH LEAFS

ALBERT COLLEGE DOWNS COBOURG BY 18-2 SCORE

Coach Beach's Alberts Stop Maher and Open Up Game to Win

WILSON INJURED

Albert College Player Sustains Broken Collar Bone and Will be Out for Season

Paced by the driving force of their captain, Des Partridge, the Albert College gridders vanquished Cobourg Collegiate 18 to 2 here Saturday to remain in the running of Bay of Quinte senior C.O.S.S.A. football pictures. In wining Coach Pete Beach's Albert squad moved closer to group-leading Belleville Collegiate team, which they meet for the first time next Saturday. The defeat meant practical elimination for the courageous Cobourg squad, who have lost two of their three starts.

There was no score in the initial quarter, the only outstanding play of the stanza being Bruce Wilson's 60 yard run to place the pig-skin on Cobourg's ten yard line. The visitors held well, however, and there was no score that frame. On the second play in the next quarter Jack Hayman punted high and hard and Haynes was rouged to give Albert their first point. Wilson sustained a broken collar bone on the play and was removed from the game.

Partridge Scores

As Cobourg fumbled an Albert punt, Francis recovered and Partridge promptly cracked the Cobourg line for a try that was not converted. Eddie Carter snatched a Cobourg forward pass as he leaped into the air and ran it 35 yards for a touchdown that was converted and Albert College led 12-0 at the halfway whistle.

Albert College opened the game widely in the third quarter and Cobourg resorted to aerial attacks but no score resulted. Hinman punted over the Albert line and a safety touch was called making the count 12 to 2. Partridge again went to the fore to take Brawley's forward for a gain of 30 yards but Cobourg held well, Brawley speared a Cobourg pass to give Coach Beach's squad the ball on Cobourg's 25. A lateral, Bailey to Ralph, saw the latter romp over for a major score that was converted making the count 18 to 2 for Albert College.

Albert Stopped Maher

The Albert squad stopped Maher, Cobourg's driving force, while their line held well with the punting about even. Cobourg attempted 11 forward passes and completed two, while Albert tried an even dozen via the aerial tossing route but only two went for a gain of yards, one being the commencement of a major score, however.

The line-ups—Albert College—snap, Rankin; insides, Hankinson and Burrows; middles, Carter and Partridge; outsides, Francis and Taylor; quarter, Hayman; halves, Ralph, Wilson and Brawley; flying wing Ridout. Cobourg—snap, Ridley; insides, Parkinson and Runciman; middles, Turpin and Moore; outsides, Bennett and Jones; quarter, Maher; halves, Haines, Robertson and Benson; flying wing, Hinman.

Referee — MacDonald, Albert College.

Umpire — Donahue, Cobourg.

CALGARY BRONKS GAIN PLAYOFFS

Defeat Regina 7-1 and Will Meet Winnipeg for Western Title

Calgary, Oct. 21.—(CP)— Calgary Bronks today started two weeks of intensive practice after gaining a play-off berth against Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Western Provincial Football final by defeating Regina Roughriders 7-1 here Saturday.

The Bronks victory ended Regina's hopes of reaching the playdowns, leaving them in the league's cellar four points behind Calgary with only one game to go—against Bombers at Winnipeg next Saturday in the last scheduled game.

The finals, a two-of-three series, start here Nov. 2. Second game will be played in Winnipeg Nov. 9 and the third, if necessary, at Winnipeg November 11.

Turning Point in Fourth Quarter

Turning point of Saturday's game came in the fourth quarter. Dan Capraru, youthful Regina halfback tried to drive around the end, was tackled hard and fumbled.

Jimmy Gilkes picked up the loose ball, shook off three Regina tacklers and raced 73 yards for a touchdown. Big Ed Rorvig converted from placement.

Soon afterwards, Bronks pushed the anxious Riders deep into their own zone. Rorvig tried a field goal but the ball went wide and rolled over the deadline for a single point.

Before Capraru's fumble, Regina appeared headed for victory. For more than 30 minutes they protected a one-point advantage after scoring a singleton in the first quarter when Wollie Hughes was roughed by Ken Thompson before he could run Norm Geller's punt from behind Calgary's goal line.

CALLING 'EM

with Ken J. Colling

The baseball umpire—that hated figure who supposedly lurks about in daylight and darkness just thinking up reasons and ideas as to how to make baseball players and fans miserable—has at last gained the holy of holies in newspaperdom, the sanctum of the editorial pages of the New York Times. Under the heading—"What! No Umpires?" the editorial page of the New York Times recently carried this extremely interesting article on the subject of "his majesty of the diamond"—"At the national semi-pro baseball congress in Wichita, Kan., there was a citizen with a love of sport, a gift for invention and a dislike for umpires. For him baseball's arbiters govern best who govern least. Long ago he began his campaign to strike them out of the game. By creating an automatic plate duster, he proposed to eliminate the traditional stoop and squat that are as much a ceremony as a duty. With his retractable plate microphone, he further mechanized a warm, human personality. Now, by applying the principle of the electric cell "magic eye" to an automatic ball-and-strike indicator, he would dispense with the plate umpire entirely. A strike would be registered if a pitched ball broke the eye's rays by crossing the plate. Thus hairline decisions would be scientifically correct, absolutely impartial and beyond appeal.

"But how could an outraged batter vent his feelings on a machine? And would the game be complete without an angry buzz revolving around decisions? Brave indeed is the umpire who calls a close one against the home team. A tide of boos rises from the stands. Bats are brandished. Dust is scuffed. See the rolling eye, the vengeful glare, the choking fury of the baserunner. Through it all the personage of august majesty is as immovable as Gibraltar, manificently scornful of a horrible fate. He is Daniel among the lions, Orpheus in Hades. He is also blind, couldn't see with eyeglasses. He is a "robber" and a "bum." He is always bribed by the other team. At any other profession he would be talented. He is prejudiced, bigoted, plays favorites. His powers are arbitrary, his decision capricious. Attacks on him should be made with intent to kill."

No self-respecting manager considers himself in the ball game without at least one loud and raucous "squawk". No newspaper would let a week go by without a picture of an umpire patiently listening to "reason", in an expurgated version. The old days left the umpire to defend his own decisions physically. Now he silently toes a line in the dust and encamps behind it. The crowd is tickled by the tight-rope walking that follows. The umpire is an institution, beloved and hated. Not his the mythical character that legend builds around the hard-hitting outfielder. He is steady, homely perhaps, but from him springs much of the color and excitement of the national pastime. Anybody who wants to change him is subversive and un-American and should be investigated by a Congressional committee."

More than the usual street talk is being circulated up and down the main stem relative to the Jerry Sovold—Masked Marvel wrestling bout at the Arena tonight. After last week's donnybrook, that bordered a riotous outbreak and necessitated police control, fans settled back to realize this new "hooded horror" is a wrestler of parts and really is serious about his chosen profession. Like most all other "bemasked grapplers" of the past, the new Marvel is a young up-and-coming grappler who neither asks nor gives any quarter. All he has in mind is success and ultimately reaching the top brackets as did Al Getzewitch, Joe Cox and others. Of equal importance will be the Al Dunlop-George Pavich scrap, which was arranged primarily by popular demand in order to appease the fans, who have been demanding a suitable opponent to tame down the pugnacious Dunlop. There's the main attractions and they should prove crowd-pleasers.

Taking as their cue—"Stop Doug. Maher and you halt Cobourg," Pete Beach's Albert College gridders remained very much in the Bay of Quinte Senior Interscholastic running as they not only abruptly halted Maher, but went out to win a clean cut 18 to 2 win over Coach Cleaver's Cobourg kids Saturday. The visitors were repeatedly guilty of fumbling Hayman's punts for the loss of much yardage. Coach Beach's line held strongly and Captain Des Partridge provided the driving force to inspire his colleagues. Albert's real test comes Wednesday when they meet Morley Baker's B.C.I. squad.

Do you remember when Lefty Grove, Baltimore pitcher, and rated tops in the International League, failed to last an innings against Kansas City in a little world series game at Kansas 17 years ago today. He was yanked after walking four men and allowing three run.

Sport Spice — Ottawa Rough Riders' 41 to 6 victory over Argos came rather costly Saturday, as the Bytown squad lost the services of their star line-plunger, Tony Golab.... Golab sustained a back injury in a scrimmage and will be out for the remainder of the season.... The Ottawa management are protesting that the injury was the result of "piling on" on the part of Argos. Montreal won its first Big Four decision since 1937 when they beat Hamilton Tigers 9-4.... Oshawa baseball interests still trail Belleville when it comes to winning senior O.B.A. titles.... On Saturday the Motor City nine collected but two hits off the offerings of Pete Cople and Niagara Falls won its first senior O.B.A. title after 20 years of trying.... Yes, George Campbell's softball and baseball fond hopes were both dashed this year, the Falls nine beating Oshawa 7-0, which makes us wonder just how Tracy Shaw's ballisters won the first two games of the series.... Get out them red flannels.

Dutton is Allowed To Sign Lofvendahl

Edmonton, Oct. 21 —(CP)— The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association last night gave Mervyn (Red) Dutton, manager of New York Americans of the National Hockey League, permission to sign Vic Lofvendahl, Winnipeg junior, to a professional contract.

The case of a second Winnipeg junior, Andy Branigan, also sought by Americans, has been deferred until further information is available, Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, chairman of the C.A.H.A. player committee, announced here.

Lofvendahl was a star defenceman with Kenora Thistles, Memorial Cup finalists last spring, and Branigan held down a similar position with Winnipeg Monarchs. It is reported Lofvendahl will go to Seattle Seahawks in the Pacific Coast League for seasoning.

THIS WAR HEARD MORE THAN SEEN

(By Robert E. Bunnelle)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 21. (AP) — You hear this war more than you see it.

You hear by night the casual hum of a bomber hunting a target, then the groan of the accelerating motors when the pilot makes his run to lay the eggs.

You hear the bombs screech and hit and you feel the shake when they explode. You hear the splash of shattering glass.

You hear the clinking smack of shell splinters and the whoosh of the blasts of bombs and guns when they are near you.

You see by day little clouds of anti-aircraft shells and by night a twinkle like bursting stars, but you hear far more of the irregular drum of gunfire than ranges up and down the scale according to calibre.

What the Eye Sees

By day you see the faint ribbons of exhaust vapor—sometimes specks of planes—but day and night you can always hear the machine-guns and the wheeling, turning and manoeuvring of aircraft.

By day you see a few score bomb craters, smashed buildings, glass, debris, littered streets. Night and day you hear hundreds of bombs. You see the glow of a few fires but you hear the bells and motors of many hustling fire engines.

You see people on stretchers but the scream of frightened women, the cry of a baby or the curse of a man does more to your nerves.

It isn't what you see but what you hear that keeps you awake in a shaking bed when the stuff is dropping.

And you get so conscious of noise that you hear sirens when there aren't any sirens and bumps and bangs which you think are guns or bombs, when it's really only somebody slamming a door.

You hear too much.

SOMEONE SAID "PROCRASTINATION IS THE THIEF OF TIME."

Berlin Communique

"A submarine sank a British Auxiliary cruiser of over 10,000 tons. Two submarine commanders participated in the destruction of two British convoys.

"By so doing Lieut. Bleichrodt increased the score of his latest cruise against the enemy to 53,300 tons and Lieut. Schepke to 40,565 tons.

"In the evening hours of Oct. 20 torpedo planes sank three strongly protected merchantmen off the English coast, totalling 20,000 tons.

(British merchant ship losses since the war began have averaged 53,000 tons weekly. Today's German claims are therefore extraordinarily high.)

"Light battleplane units yesterday carried out retaliatory attacks on the British capital and other cities in Southern and Central England. Dock and port facilities, as well as vital supply centres, were successfully bombed.

"Fires visible from afar resulted from raids on big tank concentrations at Thameshaven. In the course of the day and night, several air fights developed which we won. During the night, heavy combat units increased their raids on London, dropping a large quantity of bombs of all calibres and causing numerous new conflagrations and heavy destruction on both sides of the Thames.

"Armament plants in Central England and port facilities on the British west coast also were effectively bombed.

"As already reported, heavy artillery of the army and navy shelled two big enemy merchantmen in Dover harbor. Ships and port facilities were covered by several salvoes causing severe destruction.

"In response, one enemy long range battery fired a few shots across the English Channel without damage.

"Last night enemy planes entered Germany, dropping bombs on the Reich's capital and other places. The single military objective hit was railway tracks in Western Germany, without, however, interrupting traffic. Otherwise, during raids on residential sections, several houses were destroyed and a number of civilians killed.

(No details of last night's attacks on Germany have yet been issued by the British Air Ministry.)

"The foe lost 19 planes yesterday, 16 in air fights, three by anti-aircraft, of which one was bagged over Berlin. Four of our own planes are missing."

(Seven German aircraft were destroyed over Britain yesterday. The R.A.F. lost three planes.)

British Communique

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—An Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security communique today said:

"The enemy's main attacks during the hours of darkness were directed against the London area and the midlands. Both commenced soon after dusk.

"The attack on London ceased in the early hours of the morning, but that on the midlands lasted rather longer.

"Two enemy aircraft were destroyed during the night.

"In the London area damage was done to buildings including many dwellings, and several fires were caused. Some people were killed and others injured.

"In the midlands the attack was principally on one town although bombs were dropped in a number of other districts in this area. Damage was caused to houses, shops and commercial premises and some fires resulted. Some people were killed or injured in this area.

"In many other areas bombs were dropped in the course of the intermittent attacks. In the great majority of cases no harm resulted but in a few districts houses and other premises suffered damage.

"The number of casualties reported from all these areas is not large but included some persons killed.

"In all districts the fire services have again done excellent work in dealing with fires.

"Yesterday seven enemy aircraft were destroyed and three of our fighters were lost, but all the pilots are safe."

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—The Air Ministry issued the following communique Monday:

"Last night Royal Air Force bombers carried out extensive operations ranging from Berlin to northern Italy.

"Targets were attacked in both these areas, as well as other parts of Germany.

Attacks were also made on the invasion ports."

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, October 22
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE AUGURIES for this day make for a lively and probably turbulent state of affairs, with the forecast of moderate success through the exercise of good judgment, executive ability, hard work and the support of those in fair financial standing. This effort at giving stability and expansion to the fortunes and putting ambitions on a second road to attainment should not be put in jeopardy by "flying off the handle" or other exhibitions of excess impetuosity or over drastic activities. Handle all writings with caution.

Those whose birthday it is should have their fortunes, ambitions and peace of mind in their own hands during the year, which may hold promise of increase, expansion, stability and fulfilled aspirations if such happy auspices are not imperiled by rash, impulsive, tempestuous and headlong behavior. Over-indulgence or violence of any nature may offset or undermine the efforts of elders, friends and those in prestige and financial power to assist in growth, advancement and security in possessions, power and standing. Be cautious in handling all manner of writings.

A child born on this day should have many stable and sterling traits of character, with energy, initiative and power, which, however, may be nullified by impetuosity, indulgence or over-zealous enthusiasms or reckless activities.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was opening her mail at breakfist saying to pop, Oh deer, Blantch Hipple's dawter has gone and had another baby.

It doesn't sound like an unnatural thing to do, pop said, and ma said, Of course not, but I neglected to send her first one a present. I fully intended to, but I couldn't quite decide what to get, and the result was, a whole year passed and by that time it would of looked a little silly to send an offering to celebrate the baby's berth, so I decided to play the part of discretion and not send anything, and now here comes this other child to complicate everything, ma said.

I dont quite follow, I should think this would be a perfect opportunity to make amends and kill 2 babes with one stone, such as a 2 handled rattle, pop said, and ma said, That's just where my quandary comes in. I mean Blantch may of forgotten by this time that I didn't send her first grandchild any thing, so if I send a gift to this one it will just serve to revive an unpleasant reminder, oh deer, and yet if I just maintain a dignified giftless silence it might merely confirm Blantch in her suspicions, I mean in case she has a half formed idea that I didn't send anything to the first baby, without being quite sure, so what shall I do, Willyum?

Send a present with no card accompanying it, pop said. There's always one card that gets lost or mislaid, and Blantch will say, Well what a coincidence, this must be from Pawleen Potts, and that beautiful silver mug that somebody sent the first baby without a card must of been from her too, well well, pop said, and ma said, Why Willyum that's quite an idea.

Yee gods I didn't mean it seriously but you're still welcome to it, pop said.

The result being ma is still thinking it over.

WARSAW DIVIDED INTO 3 SECTIONS

Best Part of Polish Capital Reserved for Germans, Jews to Have Walled Ghetto, and Poles Rest of City

London, Oct. 21—(CP Cable)—German authorities in Warsaw have divided the Polish capital into three separate quarters, for German, Polish and Jewish citizens, the Polish Telegraphic Agency reported today.

The News Agency said the best part of the city is reserved for the Germans. This section is the southeast of the capital, embracing parts of the finest avenues, the largest homes and many private palaces built at the end of the 18th and beginning of the 19th centuries. All these have been taken over as German residences.

The Jewish quarters, separated from the rest of the city by a wall, will have the character of a closed ghetto. They are situated between the main railway station, the Saxon garden and the Danzig railway terminal.

The rest of the city is assigned to the Poles. Poles and Jews have been ordered to move into new quarters not later than Oct. 31. They are not permitted to remove furniture but can take household linen and personal belongings.

The population of Warsaw is made up of 800,000 Poles, 300,000 Jews and approximately 50,000 Germans, of whom 20,000 are soldiers.

Nazis Will Impose Death Penalty if Belgians Harbor British

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—German orders imposing the death penalty on Belgians harboring British subjects were announced on the Brussels radio today.

The announcer said many British soldiers have escaped from German prison camps and some have Belgian or French identification papers.

(Similar warnings were issued Oct. 14 to residents in the occupied zone of France.)

DEVASTATES COUNTRYSIDE

Das-Es-Salaam, Tanganyika, Oct. 21 (CP).—An area with a 30-mile radius has been devastated by fires, lava and ash-falls from an eruption of the Volcano Masai in northern Tanganyika, according to reports received here today.

The volcano, known to the natives as the "Mountain of God", showed the greatest activity in many years. No human deaths were reported, but many cattle were killed. European settlements beyond the 30-mile radius were spattered with hot ashes.

CHALLENGES NAZI AMBITIONS

'If Germany Arrives at Turkish Frontier She Will Meet Her Match' Says Turkish Paper

Istanbul, Oct. 21 (AP). — The Turkish press reiterated today its previous challenges to Germany's ambitions in southeastern Europe and also commented bitterly on Bulgaria's attitude as reflected in Sofia newspapers.

Turkey wants peace, said an editorial in Yeni Sabah, but a bitter struggle is preferred to "peace gained dishonorably."

The editorial criticized an editorial in the Sofia newspaper Mir which argued that German victory is inevitable and urged that small nations capitulate without resistance.

Says Low Course Is Dishonor.

"Mir suggests such a common, humble low course that it dishonors the Bulgarian pride and patriotism we have learned to know," Yeni Sabah continued. "There is no Turk who would not agree with Hitler that people who do not defend their country's independence with all vigor should be looked upon.

"If Germany comes south she may find Bulgaria bowed before her, but when she arrives at the Turkish frontier she will meet her match, which is the reason she probably will not come here."

An editorial written for the newspaper Tan by Sadru Ertem, a deputy in the national assembly, stated:

"Germany has become Russia's greatest enemy. The tri-partite pact aims openly at substituting the Fascist world order for the Soviet world revolution as a world ideology."

Ertem argued that there is no possibility of a British-Soviet military agreement and, therefore, no need for Germany to hold the Dardanelles, strategic Turkish gateway from the Black Sea to the Aegean and Mediterranean.

500,000 TURKISH

The Turkish press, predicting that the Axis would attempt its next push in the Near East, played up British manoeuvres to counter such a drive.

New Regulations

Bucharest and the rich Ploesti oil fields nearby were blacked out at midnight last night under new regulations.

Although the regulations were announced not long after a British news broadcast mentioned that Rumania's vital oil fields were within easy bombing reach of Greece, an ally of Great Britain, foreign observers regarded the blackout as more of a "disciplinary" measure, designed to impress the Rumanian populace with the alleged necessity of German military occupation, as claimed by the Nazis.

Despite warlike talks, however, most Balkan observers felt it unlikely that an Axis campaign was in the offing but that only strong diplomatic action could be expected for the time being.

Reports that Anthony Eden, British War Secretary, might visit Ankara, Turkey's capital, gained ground despite a denial by the official Turkish radio.

(Eden inspected Palestine garrisons yesterday at Jerusalem.)

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 21 — (AP)—Sir Ronald Ian Campbell, British Minister to Yugoslavia, went to Istanbul today, where he presumably is to participate in a conference with the British Ambassador to Turkey and the British Ministers to Bulgaria and Greece.

His departure caught political observers by surprise since it was at first believed the Istanbul conference would be limited to Turkey and Greece because of strong German influence in Yugoslavia.

It was believed Sir Ronald would confer in Istanbul with Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Charles Palairet, Minister to Greece, and George Rendel, Minister to Bulgaria.

Noted Zionist Convinced Spirit Of London Unbroken

Toronto, Oct. 21.—(CP)— Rabbi Maurice L. Perlzweig, noted world Zionist leader and until recently rabbi of a London synagogue, told a gathering of the Ontario Zionist region here last night that the Empire capital has never seemed more beautiful to him than "when it displayed its wounds".

He said he had lived through one of the cruelest experiences London had ever endured but he was convinced "the spirit of London is absolutely unbroken.

"No one speaks as though what is being endured is ground for weakness or capitulation. The only thing that has been destroyed by German bombs — and it has been destroyed utterly—is Fascism and anti-Semitism. A new comradeship has grown up between the British Commonwealth and the Jewish people an understanding which will bear fruit in the future.

THIEVES SECURE $60

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 21 (CP)—Thieves last night forced their way into the Bell Moore clothing store and adjoining Canadian National Railways Telegraph Office and stole about $60 in cash, $34 from the clothing store. Two weeks ago the Wilson Clothing Company in the next block was pilfered of $60.

LONDON DISTRICT

casualties were reported.

In the renewed attack after daybreak British fighter planes engaged the raiders in dogfights over the London suburbs.

A woman was trapped in the wreckage of one house hit by a bomb. Another explosion nearby broke a gas main.

German planes also were reported near towns in southwestern England and along the south coast of Wales.

London and the Midlands were the main targets of the dusk to dawn attack although raiders also struck at the Liverpool area, Wales and southwestern England.

The Air Ministry said the number of casualties was not large, and observers in London said the 44th consecutive overnight attack there seemed comparatively light.

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador home from the United States to consult with his government, said yesterday the fortitude of London under steady attack made a "tremendous impression" in America.

"American opinion now realizes the necessity for backing up Britain", he declared, adding:—

"American aircraft are now coming to this country in the hundreds and the number will steadily increase next year".

Attacks Begin Early

The German bombers began their attack early last night, quickly following up daylight raids during which five alarms were sounded in London, driving church crowds and Autumn strollers from the streets. There was a short lull after midnight, but the bombers came back again until shortly before dawn.

There was no pattern to the night raids. Some planes loosed bombs from high over London. Others dived through the low clouds toward their targets. They came at the city from all directions and struck singly rather than in large groups.

One plane was shot down in flames in a London street. The Air Ministry announced eight others were destroyed during the day and night. Three British planes were lost.

Some Persons Killed

A communique said some persons were killed and injured in the London area where damage was done to buildings.

There were some killed and injured too, in an un-named Midlands town, the centre of an attack in that section.

Elsewhere the raids were described as "intermittent or isolated."

A radio address to the French people was scheduled for 8:35 p.m. (3.35 p.m. E.D.T.) today by Prime Minister Churchill. His broadcast from London will be sent overseas by short wave radio.

OFT-BOMBED

(Reports from Switzerland said Royal Air Force bombers crossed the Swiss frontier "at many places."

The blasting of the channel ports where invasion threats continued to lurk in prolonged mild weather and reports of Nazi activity, started shortly after dusk last night.

Crowds Ignore Danger

Crowds along the English Channel ignored the danger to peer through the misty evening at the explosion flashes across the Strait of Dover.

Observers said the brilliant flashes and loud explosions indicated that possibly British coastal batteries and warships in the channel joined in the bombardment.

Earlier in the day British and German gunners fought a heavy gun duel across the Strait.

The Press Association said the rumble of terrific explosions rolled up and down the channel like thunder in the night attack.

Dishes rattled in cupboards and the ground trembled underfoot. The scene on the French coast was lit by flares dropped by bombers and by the star-like bursts of anti-aircraft fire.

Earlier, the Admiralty announced that British fliers penetrated north of the Arctic circle for an attack on a German seaplane base at Tromsoe, Norway.

No Details of Damage

Rome, Oct. 21—(CP) — British bombers attacked northern Italian cities early today for the first time since early last month.

Verona, Pavia and Allesandria were among the places bombed. No details of the damage inflicted were given out, the Italian High Command confining itself to claims that non-military objectives, including an orphanage, were hit.

The last previous British raid on Italy was the night of Sept. 5-6 when Turin was bombed.

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP)—Waves of Royal Air Force bomber planes drove thousands of Berliners to air raid shelters early today for the first time in five nights.

Despite heavy anti-aircraft fire, R.A.F. planes flew over the centre of the city. Bright moonlight penetrated a slight haze and searchlights were used sparingly.

Four explosive bombs and a shower of incendiary bombs were reported dropped.

The Nazis claimed anti-aircraft batteries shot down one bomber en route to the capital and another at Berlin.

(A communique issued by the Air Ministry in London said Royal Air Force bombers carried out extensive operations ranging from Berlin to northern Italy last night.)

VINOBA BHAVE IS SENTENCED

Chosen by Gandhi He Preached Last Week Anti-War Propaganda

Wardha, India, Oct. 21 (CP) — Vinoba Bhave, chosen by Mohandas K. Gandhi as first to defy the law in a Nationalist campaign of individual civil disobedence, was arrested today and sentenced to three months imprisonment.

Bhave preached anti-war propaganda last week at Panaur, near here. He declared the all-India Congress (Nationalist Party) could not help Great Britain in the war on "ethical grounds."

Gandhi is expected not to court arrest himself, but to select another follower "spiritually qualified."

The Nationalist leader announced at the beginning of the month that there would be no organized civil disobedience despite his objection to the refusal of the Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, to let him preach against war.

On Oct. 13, however, the All-India Congress working committee approved a revised plan in which, it was understood, Gandhi proposed that at first only two persons should seek arrest.

As the result of an erroneous report last Thursday the Bhave had been arrested the Bombay cotton and produce market closed in protest.

TWEED AND MADOC RUGBY TEAMS PLAY 6-6 TIE

Madoc Lucky to Get Their Touchdown and Convert Early in Game

KICK IS BLOCKED

Tweed, Oct. 21 (Special)—Tweed and Madoc High School rugby teams played a 6-6 tie on the local grounds on Friday afternoon. The play was as close as the score indicates although the visitors were lucky in scoring the only touchdown of the game. A low snap to Meagher, Tweed kicker, on the third down, prevented the kicker from getting the ball away and his kick was blocked. Harrison of Madoc recovered and ran 20 yards for a touchdown Connor, husky Tweed inside kicked a field goal from placement and in the dying moments of the game kicked the ball from the forty-yard line to Madoc dead-line for a single point to tie the score.

Arber, Wager, Meagher and Rivers turned in smart games for the locals, while Keller, Hawthorne and Phillips of the visitors played well. Officials: Rev. Delve, T. J. Calnan, head linesman, Grant Thain.

The girls' softball game also resulted in a 6-6 tie score. The bitterly cold wind which swept across the diamond was not conducive to good ball but surprisingly few errors were made. Madoc opened the scoring with a single tally in the opener. They added three runs in the second and two more in the third inning. Tweed girls scored their runs in clusters of three in the second and third innings. The final score was 6-6.

Madoc—Betty Haggarty, Audrey Smith, Kathleen DeClair, Lorna Keene, Elaine Smith, Verna Stephenson, Bernice Sager, Dorothy Thompson, Helen Downey, Olive Carswell.

BABE BORN IN AMBULANCE

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP). — An ambulance racing against the stork caught fire today and Frank Jonowiak delivered a 6½ pound son to Mrs. Josephine Vanderplum, 23, inside the vehicle while volunteers were putting out the flames. Fire shot from the hood as the ambulance rushed the woman along toward hospital in a 40-mile trip from South Langhorne, where she had stopped overnight in a tourist camp. Mother and baby are doing well.

NAZIS ADD MORE RESTRICTIONS ON MILITARY NEWS

No Military News Can be Sent Overseas From 11 P.M. to 6 A.M.

WRITERS SIGN PLEDGE

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—Driven off once by anti-aircraft fire during the second alarm in London today one Nazi plane circled over the area for several minutes and then came back again. Crowds in the streets watched shells bursting around it.

Anti-aircraft fire bagged one raider a few miles from Ipswich, near the coast north of the mouth of the Thames. The crew bailed out.

Members of the Home Guard asked villagers to keep a lookout for the crew. They were believed to have parachuted safely to earth and to be still at large.

Inhabitants of one northwest inland town heard anti-aircraft fire for the first time in daylight but the day raiders of the midlands appeared primarily to be scouting, as few bombs were dropped.

Four persons were killed when a plane, diving out of the clouds, dropped three bombs in the second raid on one northern town in 36 hours.

British fighters were reported to have shot down a second German plane this afternoon near New Milton, in Hampshire, with all four members of the German crew killed.

Another German plane was seen over a London suburb flying very low, losing height and with smoke pouring from it. British planes were in pursuit.

Berlin, Oct. 21 (CP)—German military authorities decreed today that until further notice no military news of any kind may be sent from Berlin between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. (5 p.m. to midnight EDT).

Berlin correspondents have been required to sign a pledge not to violate this order.

The new curtailment of the activities of the overseas press followed by a week a ban by Nazi authorities on transmission of details as to the duration of British air raids on Berlin. Correspondents also were forbidden to send news while raids are in progress.

Apparently the Nazi authorities are steadily surrounding the work of the foreign newspaperman with a code of rigid regulations. Previously it had been the practice of the Nazis not to impose the type of censorship usual in countries at war, but to permit correspondents to send what they liked as long as it was favorable to Germany from the Nazi viewpoint. Correspondents breaking that unwritten law usually were expelled from the country.

MAKES LONG FLIGHT SAFELY

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Oct. 21 (CP).—A South African Air Force plane flew more than 2,000 miles from Pretoria, South Africa, to Nairobi yesterday in 10½ hours, the first time that this route has been spanned in a day. The plane left Pretoria at 5:50 a.m. and reached Nairobi at 4:20 p.m.

U.S. EMBASSY DAMAGED

London, Oct. 21 (CP).—The United States Embassy in Grosvenor Square and headquarters of the Young Men's Christian Association in Great Russel street were damaged in recent air raids, it was disclosed today. Damage to the embassy consisted chiefly of broken windows.

BR. OIL EXECUTIVES RELEASED

Bucharest, Oct. 21 (AP)—Two of the groups of British Oil executives who have been held by Rumanian police for weeks on charges of sabotage were reported released today. Their names were not available.

(One of the Britons is a Canadian, Capt. John E. Treacy, formerly of Chatham, Ont., and Calgary.)

Trenton and District

Trenton Police Need $70 to Buy Radio

Trenton, Oct. 21.—Approximately seventy dollars is needed to complete the construction of the new radio sending and receiving station for the Trenton police. Townsmen have been donating to the fund in order that the police can become modernized.

The radio is a necessity for the Trenton Police Force which is very small in comparison to the population of the town. With the radio, the police will be better able to cope with any situation that will arise in the future and will mean a closer co-operation of the Trenton and Belleville Police Forces in the apprehension of car thieves and other fleeing criminals.

Overturn Warning Lanterns

Police are investigating reports that children are overturning red lantern left on construction jobs on Front Street. The children are alleged to have overturned the lanterns putting them out and creating a hazard for motorists. The lights are left on piles of earth to warn motorists from hitting them and when the lanterns are not burning the piles of earth are liable to cause a serious accident.

Motorcyclist Hits Car Door

Leonard Taylor of Barber Street, had a narrow escape on Sunday afternoon, when his motorcycle struck the door of a car owned and driven by Alfred Hayne. The cyclists were thrown from the motorcycle but sustained only a few bruises.

Alfred Hayne was driving south of West St., and stopped his car. He opened the door of the car in order to look behind or to get out of the car, when the motorcyclist collided with the door. Damage to the car was estimated at $15.00 and to the motorcycle about $15.00.

Reports Loss of Purse

Charles H. LaBerge of the Royal Canadian Air Force, informed the police yesterday that he lost a wallet containing a large sum of money between Shurie's Drug Store and the Airport. LaBerge is the third person in this town to lose his wallet over the week-end. The other two purses were recovered and returned to the owners.

CORY—BLEECKER

Autumn leaves and flowers decorated the parsonage of the Grace United Church on Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Leah Jane Bleecker, niece of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Weddell to Wilbert Raymond Cory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Cory, at which Rev. G. H. Campbell officiated.

Given in marriage by her uncle, the bride wore a dress of angora winterberry, with a three-quarter length sable jacket, and a corsage of white gardenias and orange blossoms. The matron-of-honour was Mrs. A. L. Smith, wearing a dark grey tailored suit and sable cape. Her corsage was of Talisman roses and an orchid. Mr. A. L. Smith was the best man.

The couple left on a short trip through Western Ontario and will take up their residence in Trenton upon their return.

Funeral of Infant Held

The funeral of the late Charles Ronald Cornish, infant son of Pte. and Mrs. Arthur Cornish, was held this afternoon from the home of the child's grandmother, Mrs. John Hyatt of Water Street.

The child died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday afternoon, after a short illness. Pte. Arthur Cornish, father of the child, is serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now overseas and did not see his child, who was born three months ago.

Interment was held in the Mount Evergreen Cemetery. Rev. G. H. Campbell of Grace United Church conducted the service.

The War Today

By H. M. PETERS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prime Minister Churchill planned today to reassure Frenchmen that their eventual freedom depends upon defeat of Nazi Germany by the ever-growing strength of the British Empire and its allies.

While the world waited for the prime minister's message, his successor as First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, declared that Britain is daily "convoying our ships, our troops and our supplies to theatres of war in which the victory will be driven home."

That appeared to mean among other things that Sir Archibald Wavell's Middle East command is constantly growing more formidable in anticipation of renewed Mediterranean activity at the close of the rainy season about the year-end.

There were indications of Arab indignation over the Italian action during the week-end in bombing oil refineries at Bahrein Island in the Persian Gulf. To get there, the four Italian planes participating crossed neutral territory of the Arabian peninsula, flying near Mecca, the Arab holy place.

The Bahrein raid, stated by Cairo to have been minor in its results, was but one incident in a week-end of constant explosions of aerial bombs.

Berlin was again heavily attacked, and harassed officials there forbade the dispatch of war news at night to prevent unauthorized details of destruction getting out to the world. Northern Italy's industrial sections were smashed anew and The Press Association said that R.A.F. bombers dropped 15,000 bombs on the invasion ports across the channel within a few hours.

Understandable secrecy continued to surround the mission to Egypt of Anthony Eden, British War Secretary. The Italians claimed to have heard he is offering some Italian possessions in Africa to Egypt and Turkey after the war.

Over London the Germans continued their thrusts at the capital by small numbers of high-flying fighter-bomber planes which continued to scatter bombs, causing damage, small in any particular area but apparently considerable in sum. The R.A.F. was reported ready to turn loose newly-designed quick-climbing fighter planes to grapple with this menace.

Meanwhile in the far-off Netherlands East Indies Japan made little progress in efforts to obtain the high octane gasoline which the United States will no longer sell her. Britain has a stranglehold upon this Netherlands supply and as London has stated that the era of appeasing Japan is over, the Japanese would have to make extraordinary concessions of some sort to obtain any privileges from Britain.

Checkerboard Love

By JOSEPH McCORD

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XX.

"Well, and how did you find everything down in the sticks?" Olive Castle smiled up at her husband from her nest of pillows. He had been up for two hours or more, eaten a solitary breakfast in the Harrisons' huge and gloomy dining room at the hands of two servants, and read the papers. He was growing somewhat impatient when a maid appeared to say that Mrs. Castle was having her coffee and would Mr. Castle go up to her room now?

In view of the task in hand, he attempted to assume a jovial aspect. Her question, after he had stooped and kissed her affectionately, sounded like a good lead. "Oh, fine," he assured her. "The folks are both well. Very much disappointed that you didn't come along. Had a chat with old Vic in the office. He looks like a million dollars."

"How's Audrey?"

The unexpected question caught him so off guard that he instinctively repeated Olive's last word. "Audrey?"

"Why, yes. You seem to have rounded up everybody you know in Parville. I took it for granted you wouldn't overlook her."

"Oh, sure. Yes, I did see her . . . wasn't over at their place though." Jeffrey plunged into one of his elaborate explanations. "You see, Father wasn't home when I arrived. Right here in the city, of all things. He didn't get back until noon yesterday. I took a little ride the afternoon before and happened to bump into Audrey on the road. We had a little visit from the saddle. She looked very well, I thought."

"That was nice." There was nothing but innocent pleasure in his wife's face and words, but Jeffrey felt a sudden discomfort. Darn it all, he HAD met Audrey accidentally—merely riding past when he saw her at a distance jumping that roan. It didn't sound so well as a story.

"What sort of a day did YOU have?" he countered amiably.

"Tiresome enough. Looked at two apartments and neither of them suited. The neighborhood was not so unsatisfactory, but one place was too large and the other too small. We really don't need more than ten rooms, if they are arranged right."

"No," Jeff agreed smilingly, "that's five apiece. We ought to be able to keep out of each other's way . . . on clear days. Speaking of abodes, darling, have you ever thought it would be nice to have a country place of our own?"

"Hardly. Dad has his hunting lodge in Maine, the place in the mountains and the one down on the shore. They're almost always empty. And the SYLPH never is used, though I can't stand that sticky salt atmosphere."

"I was thinking more about a . . . well, not exactly a farm, but a modern house near town with good stables. Enough to handle half a dozen horses. That sort of thing."

"I see!" She broke a bit of toast between her fingers and smiled provokingly. "You weren't satisfied when I sprained my ankle. Is it my swanlike neck you have designs on?"

"Oh, no. When I get around to that it will be less complicated to use my fingers. Won't have to shoot them afterwards."

"You're so funny and transparent, Jeff dear. What is up your sleeve now? Come on and tell Mummy."

"I was merely asking if you wanted a country place because . . . well, because we have one. Got the deed over in my room."

"Jeffrey Castle, whatever are you talking about You don't mean to say . . ."

"No. I haven't been shopping I didn't have to. This is a free and unencumbered gift. From your Parville in-laws." He was smiling broadly. "How's that for something pretty nice in the way of a late wedding present?"

"Tell me about it. Everything." Olive's dark eyes met his in a level gaze. "You didn't know anything about it before?"

"Cross my heart and hope to die, darling! You could have knocked me over with a feather. Just after lunch, Father asked me to drive him on an errand and we went to this place. He pulled a key out of his pocket when we stopped and gave me a line about wanting to see it . . . some property reason or other. I never tumbled, I swear. After I had admired it sufficiently, what did he do but tell me that it's a gift from him and mother to us."

"They shouldn't have done that, dear. Sweet of them, of course. Do you suppose there is any market for the place?"

"Market? What do you mean?"

"Well, I shouldn't imagine we'd care to pay taxes on an empty house."

"But I was hoping . . ."

"That I would furnish a place like that and live in it? Listen, Jeffrey. I hate to be tiresome, but you're making me wonder if you made it clear to your folks before we were married that you were not going to settle down in Parville."

"Father knows I'm not keen about law. He thinks old Vic's a wonder . . . the boy's cut the ground right out from under me."

"That's nice for Vic. Let him have the job for keeps, then. Jeffrey darling, your father never gave us such a place . . . spent all that money . . . with the idea that we might be neighbors for a few weeks in the year. He thought it would make you feel in honor bound to go home and slave in that odious office for the rest of your life. And right now you are thinking it's your duty to do exactly that."

"Well, honey, it does put me on a spot. You must be able to see that."

"Just as easily as I can see that you put yourself on that very spot by not being frank with him. You simply couldn't have made him understand what our plans were."

"Well, I figured perhaps we'd better think it over further before we came to a really definite conclusion. Now that we actually own the place, I'd like you to see it. It's just the idea of letting the folks down. You know."

"Apparently that's more important than letting your wife down. I took it for granted that I married you instead of your family. I still want to think so." Olive did not raise her voice, but Jeffrey caught a quiet determination in her tone that he had never heard. Her dark eyes were fixed unwaveringly on his face. There was no suggestion of a smile in them.

He shrugged his broad shoulders. "I don't believe it's necessary to put it that way. And we certainly don't have to be dramatic about things. I want you to be happy and nothing else counts with me. How and where we live is for you to decide."

Olive flashed him a smile. She reached for her husband's nearest hand and patted it softly. "You're sweet, Jeff. About everything. That's one of the things I liked you for in the first place. You can't help being a very gallant gentleman and I don't think anyone could blame me for not letting you . . ."

"Waste my fragrance on the desert air," he grinned. But there was little mirth in his eyes.

"I think 'sweetness' is what the poem says, darling. It's a little more appropriate in your case. But you have the idea. Come on, kiss me and don't let's be tiresome any more. If you'll run away now, I'll dress. How would you like to go down town and admire a new gown I'm going to buy? And, if you're a real good boy, you can take your wife to lunch at a nice place."

"Fine."

"It won't interfere with any plans of yours?"

"What do you think?"

"All right, then. Oh, Jeffrey . . ." as he was starting for the door. ". . . I was wondering. Why wouldn't it be simpler if you wrote your fatther a nice letter about that house? You can be appreciative in your explanation. If it will help, I'll write my thanks, too."

"No," he said quietly, "that would not do. I'll run down and see him and see it . . . through. He wouldn't be satisfied otherwise and neither would I."

"I'm sure you can smooth everything over. Will you offer to give him back the place?"

"You don't know Father. If he is willing, I'll try to sell it and reimburse him. I doubt if he will want to do that. It's a little hard to say, but . . . but this is the end of a good many things in Parville."

AT THE BELLE

"Sporting Blood"

Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lewis Stone, William Gargan, and Lynne Carver combine their varied talents in "Sporting Blood" which is announced as the next attraction at the Belle Theatre. The picture is one of the most thrilling action pictures which has ever been seen here. It is a race track story in a new setting and with an entirely new idea. It has all the thrills of big races being run, with a spectacular fire thrown in for good measure. Yet its basis is that of prejudice against a young man and his battle to overcome it. Young plays a young racing stable owner who is hated by Lewis Stone because Young's father had once run away with Stone's wife. Young battles this prejudice even to falling in love with Lynne Carver, the older of Stone's daughters. When she jilts him, Young marries Miss O'Sullivan for spite and learns how much he needs her love. All the players are excellent.

"Mystery Sea Raider"

Film fans who like their screen thrills dished up without any fancy trimmings and who dote on two-fisted drama of international intrigue, have to look no further than "Mystery Sea Raider" which features Henry Wilcox, Carole Landis and Onslow Stevens announced as the companion feature attraction.

Based on three major naval incidents in World War II, those of the Graf Spee, the Altmark and the City of Flint, "Mystery Sea Raider" shows for the first time the story behind commerce raiding on the high seas in wartime.

Producer Eugene Zukor moved swiftly to revise the ending of the film to include the melodramatic recapture by the British of 300 Allied prisoners from the Altmark. Recalling the City of Flint "Mystery Sea Raider" tells a vivid story of what might have happened to that American vessel when it was boarded by a Nazi prize crew in the North Sea at the outset of the war. Had it not been for Norwegian intervention, it is very likely that the City of Flint would have been converted into a sea raider such as occurs to her movie double in the film when fifth column operatives take her over.

"Lucky Partners" Funny

Ronald Colman, the distinguished star of innumerable screen hits, undertakes a refreshing characterization in what is said to be one of the finest roles in his colorful career, in RKO Radio's sparkling romantic comedy, "Lucky Partners," co-starring Ginger Rogers now at the Belle.

Colman, ideally cast as Greenwich Village artist, induces Ginger to join him on a pre-marital but strictly platonic honeymoon trip before she settles down to dull married life with her fathead fiancee, portrayed by Jack Carson.

A very funny Donald Duck cartoon "Putt-Putt Trouble" and the popular Belle News Reel will also be exhibited.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

"So This Is London"

Mix-ups, misunderstandings and pure fun predominate in "So This Is London" the new 20th Century-Fox release, starring the famous comic-team of Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton, in addition to a grand cast of featured players including George Sanders, famous star of the Saint Series, Berton Churchill and introducing Dodie and Liz whose riotous antics will leave you dizzy.

"So This Is London" is now to be enjoyed on the screen at the McCarthy Theatre.

It is the same comedy farce that George M. Cohan made famous in the stage version, and it retains all the pungent humor and the good-natured fun of the famous play. There is a steady fire of smart dialogue, masterfully interspersed with uproarious situations that make it one long string of laughs.

The story deals with the sale of a newly discovered vitamin—B. 4. An attempt is made to tie up two great companies in the distribution of the article, and the heads of the two companies can't seem to get together. One is English, the humorous Alfred Drayton, and the other is thoroughly American, pompous Berton Churchill—and neither can understand the other.

Robertson Hare is very funny as the go-between. When he comes to New York, he can't seem to understand the city. It is just as amusing when Churchill goes to England.

The team of Hare and Drayton provide laughs aplenty. Their performance in "So This Is London" adds to their reputation and gives promise of a great future for them.

Sanders is grand as the bogus inventor, while standouts in the supporting cast include: Fay Compton, Carla Lehmann, Stewart Granger, Lily Cahill, Mavis Clair, Ethel Revnell and Gracie West.

"I Dream of Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair" an excellent musical comedy hit, an amusing new Krazy Kat Kartoon entitled "Edgar Runs Again," also latest Fox News Events presenting new films of the bombing of England, is now showing in addition to the above laugh crammed feature, "So This Is London" at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Comin' Round the Mountain"

If you like the down-to-earth comedy of Bob Burns and the homespun philosophy of radio's Uncle Ezra, he of the powerful little five-watter down in Rosedale, and if you like a little rowdy goings on, such as you might find at a hillbilly hoe-down, and if your ear is tuned to good old-fashioned mountain music, then by all means go over to the Capitol theatre and have yourself a grand time seeing "Comin' Round the Mountain."

Of course there are others in the picture, and a right smart cast it is too. There's Jerry (Yahoodi) Colonna. He's the dastardly villain who doesn't do right by Nell—Nell being in this case, Una Merkel. Then there's Mayor Gildersleeve who is ordinarily heard heckling Fibber McGee on the air, along with the Old Timer of the same program. And there's Mirandy and Slaphappy Grandpappy and Jack Benny's Don Wilson, all of the airwaves, and host of other top notch movie comedians.

"Comin' Round the Mountain" tells the story of the feudin' Blowers and the Beagles, and of an itinerant salesman who happens to overhear a jam session of the Blowers' "one family" orchestra consisting of bazookas, corn liquor jugs and fiddles. He contrives to find them a sponsor for a radio program to save the little five-watter from going off the air. Everything looks good until the winter truce is called off and the spring feudin' gets under way. Then follows a series of hilarious events leading up to the election of Jed (Bob Burns) Blower as Mayor, and his marriage to Miss Merkel, an unusual event, by the way, performed without benefit of shotgun.

"Comin' Round the Mountain" is the first Bob Burns picture in which the sage of the Ozarks gets the girl. Heretofore he has had to be satisfied playing second fiddle in the matter of romance, but this time he's a full-fledged mountain Casanova, winning handily over Prof. Colonna and proving beyond a doubt the old adage that there's a Jill for every Jack.

The added attraction on the same programme "Find the Witness" keeps you thrilled with mystery and suspense throughout. The Mechanix illustrated colored parade completes the bill.

JAPANESE FIND

production is a vital interest of the Japanese, particularly because of anxiety in Japan over the possibility of a complete oil embargo on United States oil shipments to Japan, but there was no confirmation of a report published by the newspaper Asahi in Tokyo that an agreement had been concluded here govering East Indian oil exports to Japan.

(Authoritative British said in London Saturday that the Dutch output of high octane gasoline "is armarked for Britain," and therefore there "is no likelihood of immediate agreement." Between Japan and The Netherlands East Indies of the oil problem.)

Flies To New York.

This statement was made while Lord Bearsted, chairman of Royal Dutch Shell, was flying by clipper to New York on what he called "urgent business". Shell has vast interests in the Netherlands East Indies' oil industry.

There is no "official restraint" preventing British oil companies selling to Japan, as in the United States where there is an embargo on high octane gasoline. But informants here enumerated several reasons why, "so far as we know, none of this is getting to Japan from British sources".

The first is that "we need it all for ourselves". British companies, they added, "have no sympathy for Japan" and, furthermore, the British government "is their biggest customer and it happens to have cash".

Although sale of low grade gasoline and oil is not banned either, they said they are unable to tell whether any is being sold to Japan. They declared it is the British government's custom not to "interfere with normal commercial practices", but emphasized the importance of "unofficial pressure".

No Appeasing Attitude by Britain

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—Authoritative sources declared today that Britain "certainly is not taking an appeasing attitude" toward Japan in the issue of Netherlands East Indies' oil resources and intimated strongly that Anglo-American consultations have been held on Japan's oil problem.

These sources reiterated that the British government has contracted for all The Netherlands East Indies' output of high octane gasoline, used for aviation fuel, and said they have no new information concerning Japanese Netherlands negotiations over this production.

Asked whether the United States and Britain were discussing an embargo on low grade oil, these sources said: "Under the present happy relations we have discussed everything from cabbages to kings—so we would not exclude this subject." The informants added that they had no exact information, however, as to such discussions.

Flunks in Math

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

There is many a child at school who does well, or shines, in every other subject, but is dull, or fails, in arithmetic, spelling, or reading. If it is arithmetic, his teacher may tell the parent that the child just "doesn't have a mind for arithmetic." The parent may be ready to accept this as a fact, even recalling an aunt or uncle "like that."

It is a comforting doctrine both to the parent and teacher. Their skirts are cleared. They need worry no more that they have failed to teach the child well. All the burdens of their heart have rolled away onto the shoulders of Grandma Nature. Even the child may feel better. confident that he will not be nagged so much henceforth about arithmetic.

It is possible, of course, that with all such worry removed, this child might stumble on ways of discovering that he was born with a more mathematical mind than they supposed. He might actually take a spurt in arithmetic. But the chances are against this happening. More likely than not, the child will be so sure he can't learn arithmetic that he won't try to and will grow worse and worse in the subject.

Child Capable of Learning

In the light of studies carefully made in this field, there is no conclusive scientific evidence that any child, barring auditory and visual defects, who is average or above in any one or most school subjects cannot succeed about as well in any other subject. The child who, for example, can read and spell well can also learn to do well in arithmetic.

Right away, of course, he might not be able to do so well. Indeed it might be a number of years before he acquires even average achievements in this subject. You see, he has had a number of months and years of low grades or failures in this subject; and over all this time there have grown up unfavorable emotions over the subject. He also may have missed certain basic items one or several years earlier. Then he may have been nagged at so long, and reminded so often of his failure, that he doubts whether he ever can be successful in it.

Help Child Succeed

Don't tell this child he should, as a matter of duty, master such a subject and that it is his own fault he hasn't. Merely tell him that he can and that you're going to find ways to prove to him that he can. The responsibility is on you and the teacher to find these ways and prove to the child you are right.

The principle to guide you is this: Set the stage so the child will succeed. You may have to induce him if in the fifth grade in reading, say, to read from materials no harder than primer or first grade. Be sure you help him save his face. As he enjoys success he will grow more interested and try harder so as to win more success and in turn charge and recharge his dynamo of interest and effort.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. How can you get the father to the table on time?

A. In our family we had it understood that neither of us parents would hold the children to any family rules we would not hold ourselves to. Children expect us to be on the square with them.

British Long Range Guns Begin Third Day of Bombardment

Vichy Gov't May be Persuaded to Declare War

Londoners Come Out of Shelters Earlier Than Usual

Shipping Towns Along Mersey River in Liverpool Area Heavily Attacked By Nazi Raiders

London, Oct. 22 —(CP)—German warplanes resumed the long assault on London shortly after noon today, when warning sirens signalled their return after a comparatively quiet night and a morning in which the capital was unmolested.

British long range guns began their third successive day of bombardment of the Nazi positions across the Strait of Dover in the morning.

Observers said the British selling began after shells from German guns crashed into the Dover area. The dueling continued until the German battery stopped firing.

A lone raider dumped bombs on a southeast coast town, wrecking houses and hitting a church. German planes also were seen over a west Midlands town.

Ground fog over London and a "ceiling zero" mist over German bomber bases in France made possible for the British capital one of its quietest night in a month and a half, and Londoners emerged from shelters hours earlier than usual.

Points in the industrial midlands and shipping towns along the Mersey River in the Liverpool area, however, were bombed heavily.

Nazi plane which did strike through clouds and fog at London apparently were trying out a new Man and bird soaring! In the early days of soaring birds that picked out the "thermals" as the updrafts are called. Birds have the advantage in a small updraft because they can turn in very small radius; but later models of gliders have been made much more manoeuverable than the earlier one. And now, birds learn from man. One pilot writes: "If ever I found a 'thermal' on my own, I would in half a minute or so be joined by one or more large brown birds with nasty-looking faces, and we would all circle up together, though around 2500 feet the birds would usually leave me". Evidently that was about as far as they could see carrion.

PARTITION PLAN FOR PART OF CHINA BASIS OF TALKS

Japan and Soviet Russia to Meet in Conference, Diplomatic Circles Declare

WANT 'BUFFER' STATE

Tokyo, Oct. 22—(AP)—A plan for partitioning the Northwest Territories of China will form the basis for forthcoming negotiations between Japan and Soviet Russia, diplomatic circles heard today.

It was understood authoritatively that Japan is more interested in setting up intervening "buffer" territories or spheres of influence—presumably including inner and outer Mongolia, North China and Manchoukuo——than in a formal non-aggression treaty such as has been expected since Japan formally allied herself with Germany and Italy.

Observers cited as evidence of this trend the recent Russian-Japanese agreement to demarcate boundaries which have caused years of bickering and "vest pocket wars."

Russia and Japan are reported equally anxious for an agreement regarding their "back doors"—Japan in order to expedite her southward expansion, Russia because of her alleged concern over the axis drive into the Balkans.

Illustrative of Japanese interest in Russia is the fact that main articles in November issues of six leading Tokyo magazines deal with Japanese-Soviet relations and the likelihood of an agreement, for which the majority expressed optimism.

No New Contract Made

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Oct. 22—(AP) — Reliable sources asserted today no new contract to sell Netherlands East Indies oil to Japan has been signed, as repeatedly reported in Tokyo.

The only material progress made up to now by Japanese negotiators, it was said, has been the acceptance by the Japanese as a basis for discussion of an offer by oil companies to deliver certain quantities of oil now on hand for next month.

These sources said this would not involve any shifting of existing markets and contracts.

Japanese reports said Japan reached a contract agreement last Saturday, but is negotiating now for larger quotas.

The present production level, sources here said, excludes the export of any large quantities of high octane (aviation) gasoline. British authorities have reported contracting for all. The Netherlands East Indies export of this gasoline.

VON RIBBENTROP PROBABLY ON WAY TO CLOSE DEAL

Swiss Reports Say Axis Powers Asking for Action in Return for Easy Peace Terms

MAY GO TO MADRID

Movements of Foreign Minister Shrouded in Mystery at Present Time

Berlin, Oct. 22 (AP).—A possibility that the Petain-Laval government at Vichy may be persuaded to declare war on the side of the axis powers was foreseen here today and indications that Foreign Minister Ribbentrop either is on his way, or is about to embark upon a journey to the south west, presumably to Vichy.

Secrecy surrounded von Ribbentrop's movements.

(Dispatches from Les Verrieres, Switzerland, on the French border, quoted travellers as saying the axis powers are attempting to persuade the Vichy regime to declare war on Britain by offering it comparatively easy peace terms. Vice-Premier Pierre Laval is reported to be in Paris discussing the situation with Nazi officials.))

MEXICO TURNING DOWN JAPANESE

Not Accepting Her Bids for Oil and Scrap Iron to Retain Western Solidarity

Mexico City, Oct. 22 —(AP)—Mexico is turning down Japanese bids for her oil and scrap iron as a contribution to western hemisphere solidarity, high government officials declared today.

President Cardenas has decided to cancel a large oil concession granted last week to Japanese interests in Mexico, and a $400,000 offer by Japanese agents for Mexican scrap iron has been rejected, these officials said, because of Japanese-American tension in the Pacific.

They described the decisions as a concrete demonstration that Mexico is prepared to collaborate with the United States and other American hemisphere against any danger from abroad.

These sources gave no indication when cancellation of the oil concession to the Tokyo-controlled Veracruzana Company for exploiting 247,000 acres in Vera Cruz state would become official.

The deal would be voided as unconstitutional, a government spokesman said, because a constitutional amendment prohibiting such concessions, sponsored by President Cardenas after expropriation of foreign-owned properties in 1938, was ratified recently by a majority of the state legislatures, although it has not yet been promulgated.

Greek Sailors Toss on Atlantic For 27 Days in an Open Boat

Buenos Aires, Oct. 22.—(AP)— A new chapter in the thrilling saga of the sea was unfolded today by ten Greek sailors who tossed on the South Atlantic for twenty-seven days in an open boat after their vessel, the 5,866-ton Antonios Chandris, had been sunk by a German raider.

The ten, weak from lack of food and water, were landed here yesterday by the British ship Ena de Larrinaga, which picked them up while they were trying to reach the South American coast.

Twenty-three other survivors of the Antonios Chandris —the remainder of the crew—were landed at Rio De Janeiro by another vessel October 13.

Skoyflaos Antonios, mate of the Greek ship, said he and his nine companions had sufficient food for only seven days and water for only three when they took to their lifeboat.

High seas and a burning tropical sun made their plight difficult from the start. After the first few days, the mate limited the daily rations to two marine crackers which were shared by the ten men.

Rain fell on the fourth day, and they caught some in a container made from a sail.

On the 10th day, the desperate seamen spied smoke on the horizon, but their hopes of rescue were dashed when the distant ship passed without seeing their frantic signals.

The Antonios Chandris was en route to England with a cargo of coal when halted by the German raider. The Germans sent the ship to the bottom by placing explosives aboard her after ordering the crew to take to the boats, the mate said.

He declared he asked the Germans to take him and his men aboard their vessel and take them part way to the nearest land, but they replied:—

"We don't know where we're going next, and we haven't room for ten men aboard".

HOUDE TO SEEK RE-ELECTION, HIS WIFE SAYS

She Confirms Reports Interned Mayor of Montreal Will be Candidate for Mayoralty

ELECTIONS DEC. 9

Montreal, Oct. 22.—(CP)- -Mme. Camillien Houde, wife of Montreal's interned mayor, today confirmed reports her husband would seek re-election in the December 9 municipal elections.

Other sources interested in Houde's candidature said nomination papers would be forwarded to the mayor at the internment camp where he was sent following his arrest August 6 under the War Measures Act. From there the papers would be forwarded to the city clerk after being signed by Houde.

These sources said that if Houde's followers were not permitted to enter his nomination in that manner, "some other means will be found". The campaign would be conducted by the Houde organization in the city.

Houde was interned after he denounced plans for the National Registration in a statement published early in August.

Increasing Use Of Air Power in Land Operations Mooted

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—An increasing use of air power in land operations, apparently with reference to expected large-scale fighting in the Near East, was foreshadowed in a statement today by an authorized spokesman.

He asserted that squadrons of bombers "and possibly fighters" would be placed temporarily under army command when needed "for any particular operation."

The spokesman said that, while the idea of creating "an army air arm" similar to the fleet air arm of the navy had been turned down, the army expected to make increased use of air support in future operations.

The army air proposal had been rejected, he explained, because neither the army nor the air general staff wanted it, because a fundamental change of this sort in the middle of the war would be more likely to upset than improve conditions, and because difficult questions of equipment would arise.

STAINLESS STEEL MAY BE USED TO MAKE PLANES

Three Times as Strong as Aluminum Alloy Now Used in Manufacture

WILL NOT RUST

New York, Oct. 22 —(AP)— A changeover in American airplane manufacture from the present aluminum alloy construction to stainless steel is predicted by steel makers.

They said that, under pressure of the national rearmament program, the steel industry is on the threshhold of quantity production of a thin, high-tensile stainless steel which will "revolutionize" airplane construction.

Mme. Magda Lupescu May be Taken to Bucharest for Trial

Madrid, Oct. 22 —(AP)— The newspaper Arriba, organ of the Falange, Spain's Fascist party, hinted today that Mme. Magda Lupescu and Ernst Urdareanu, former Rumanian minister of state, might be compelled to return to Bucharest to face trial.

Dispatches from Lisbon indicated that former King Carol himself might be asked to go back for investigation.

An editorial in Arriba accused Carol's two companions in exile at Seville with complicity in the assassination of former chief of the Rumanian Iron Guard and said Urdareanu was responsible for a "long series of political and financial immoralities."

(Reports from Bucharest have quoted Rumanian officials as saying that the government has decided to ask Spain for the extradition of Mme. Lupescu and Urdareanu).

ITALIANS JUSTIFY ATTACKS

Rome, Oct. 22—(AP)—Authoritative Fascists today described an Italian air bombardment of oil refineries on Bahrein Island in the Persian Gulf as a fully justified attack on an "enemy objective," despite the fact that the operating company, the Bahrein Petroleum Company, is partly American-owned. It was stated authoritatively that since Bahrein Island is a British protectorate, companies op- gally British and therefore must erating developments there are le- be considered "enemy" enterprises.

QUAKE IS FELT IN BUCHAREST

Thousands Jam Streets Fearful to Go Home Despite Radio Assurances

Bucharest, Rumania, Oct. 22 (AP)—A 90-second earthquake damaged business buildings and homes today in Bucharest and oil field works in northern Rumania. There were no reports of loss of life.

Hours after the shock was first felt at 3.30 a.m. (2.30 a.m. EDT) thousands of persons in Bucharest jammed the streets, still fearful to return to their homes despite radio assurances.

The temblor, which had its centre in the Carpathian Mountains about 50 miles north of Brasov, was reported to have cracked buildings in residence and business districts. The Bucharest Meteorological Institute reported it was a "seventh class" earthquake.

First reports indicated the severest damage was caused at the town of Buzau, in the oil fields north of Bucharest.

A rumor spread that a mountain near Brasov collapsed. There was no confirmation of this.

Windows in homes and shops were shattered. Tile roofing was shaken loose from some houses, and many balconies were damaged.

In some sections, telephone and electricity services were interrupted.

Buildings wavered for some minutes in Bucharest; pictures were knocked down, and many persons were rolled out of their beds.

Berlin's Defences Fail to Keep British Bombers Away From City

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Berlin's balloon barrage, searchlight batteries and anti-aircraft fire have failed to prevent British dive-bombing, a Royal Air Force sergeant-pilot said today.

He recounted in detail how he swept low over his target in the German capital last night, dropped his stick of bombs and climbed out of the shell-spattered skies to safety.

"We arrived over Berlin in the moonlight and you could see lots of buildings and roadways if you got the angle right," he said.

"They started peppering us heavily and searchlights got on to us. But we had a couple of good landmarks to guide us and after a time our navigator picked them up.

"I put my plane's nose down. It is useless going down if you are not sure of your target, but our navigator was right.

"I got the target in my gunsights and held it there until we were quite near the ground. We were diving at a good speed and the target was getting bigger and bigger all the time.

"I shouted 'Let them go!' and the bomb-aimer pressed the button.

"Then the defenses really let us have it. The sky seemed alive with flashes. I went into a vertical bank turn to get away and out we went.

"I was swinging all over the place to get away. Some of the German guns were high angle ones and they were firing almost vertically.

"The rear gunner saw our bombs bursting in the target area. Then fires broke out. While we were getting out, I was doing stall turns and climbing and diving alternately.

"Then suddenly I saw a balloon go up in flames. I didn't see it until it caught fire. Guns on the ground must have hit it.

"Some blazing fabric went sliding down the cable. Some of it broke off and dived in our direction and seemed to be following us. It was several seconds before we finally got clear. Then I asked the navigator to give me the course for home."

1,000 Incendiary Bombs, Explosives Rain on Nazi Port

Vast Blaze Succeeds Bombardment—Nazi Warships Under Construction in Yards Under Attack

London, Oct. 22 (CP). — British planes dropped tons of high explosives and at least 1,000 incendiary bombs last night on Hamburg shipbuilding yards where German warships were under construction, the Air Ministry said today.

The bombers had the handicaps of heavy ground haze, "great searchlight activity and intense anti-aircraft fire", the ministry said, so, instead of attacking en masse, they split up and approached singly from different directions and varying heights to evade the ground defences.

Numerous fires were started in the shipyard and the surrounding docks, the ministry continued, and "a chain of fires became engulfed in one great flaming mass."

The intensive night raids followed daylight attacks on German shipping along the French coast. In one of these attacks bombs were dropped on a convoy off Dunkerque. So heavy were the explosions, the ministry said, that some of the vessels were almost lifted out of the water.

The raid on Hamburg started about 8 p.m., the ministry said, and lasted for well over an hour. The warships were being built in the

MIDDLE TEMPLE HALL DAMAGED

Wall of One of Famous Ancient Inns of Court Ripped in Air Raid

London, Oct. 22—(CP)—Middle Temple Hall, in one of London's centuries-old inns of Court, was damaged in a recent raid in which a heavy bomb ripped through a wall and smashed woodcarving on the interior, it was disclosed today.

Office suites in the hall also were damaged.

Other buildings in the Temple, in the heart of legal London, have been damaged in previous raids.

Middle Temple Hall is in one of the four great London inns of Court, Lincoln's Inn, Inner Temple, Middle Temple and Gray's Inn, which are voluntary legal societies originating in the 13th century.

Judges, barristers and students of law are members and may work and study there. The Middle Temple and the Inner Temple formed the original seat in England of the Knights Templar. Richly carved oak screens inside date from 1575.

Polish Political Leader Outrageously Murdered By Nazi Secret Police

London, Oct. 22.—(CP Cable) — The Polish telegraphic agency reported today that it has now become known that Maceuk Rataj, Polish political leader and patriot was "outrageously murdered" in May by the Gestapo (German secret police) at Warsaw.

The agency said the official German version claimed that Rataj died of a heart attack while testifying at Gestapo headquarters. "In fact, he was tortured to death by the Third Degree methods of his oppressors", the Agency commented.

For many years Rataj was speaker of the Polish parliament and he shared the leadership of the powerful radical peasant party with Vincenty Vitos.

Speeches Forecast British Offensive

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Expressions of hope that Britain will put her Axis enemies on the defensive were offered by Prime Minister Churchill and three of his Ministers in these statements:

Mr. Churchill, in a broadcast to the French people:

"We are waiting for the long-promised (German) invasion. So are the fishes...In 1941 we shall have command of the air. Remember what that means."

Lord Lloyd, Colonial Secretary, in a speech at Glasgow:

"The day we can take the offensive approaches steadily. Let us make no mistake. Until the air battle takes place over German land rather than in British skies.... the end of the war will not readily be in sight."

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty:

"We will carry this fight into the enemy fields ...We must not find ourselves up against a position of stalemate."

Aircraft Production Minister Lord Beaverbrook:

"I am not going to be satisfied until the sky is swarming with British aircraft."

SPEECH NOT PRINTED IN FRANCE

Vichy, France, Oct. 22—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill's speech to the French people, broadcast from London yesterday, has not been published in newspapers in territory controlled by the Petain-Laval Government. Spokesmen of the regime professed to be not particularly concerned about the speech since no direct reference was made to the Vichy government.

MODERATOR TO SPEAK TO YOUNG PEOPLE

A grand rally of the young people of Belleville Presbytery will be held in Tabernacle United Church Monday, November 11th at 8.30 p.m. to be addressed by Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, M.A., B.D., LL.D., the new moderator of the United Church in Canada. This will be a rare opportunity to hear this distinguished ecclesiastical leader of United Church. The offering will be for Red Cross work.

"Y" TO CONDUCT MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Final arrangements for the Y.M.C.A. fall membership drive were completed on Monday evening at a meeting of the Membership Committee. Norman E. Edwards occupied the chair and it was decided to hold the drive October 28 to November 4th. The various membership groups will be represented by teams which will contest for honors during the week of the drive.

The fall and winter program at the Y.M.C.A. is now under full swing with the various classes making good use of the gymnasium and other athletic privileges. The building improvement work which was undertaken during the summer months has been completed with the exception of the renovation of the heating plant. These alterations are now under way and when completed will greatly increase the capacity for heating the building, as well as the showers and the swimming tank.

UNEMPLOYED FIGURE NOW TWO-THIRDS LESS

The sharp upsurge in business and industrial activities during the past year, has resulted in unemployment-registration reaching a figure said by Employment Bureau officials to be the lowest since the opening of the Belleville office. Two hundred and fifty people are registered at present as compared to 761 of a year ago.

The greater majority of the 250, it was stated, are residents of the outlying communities and not of the city. Labor of all classes is distinctly scarce, and casual workers are practically at a premium.

Skilled domestics can't be had for love nor money; skilled labor is conspicuous by its practically total absence, while common labor is at an extremely low level.

Military enlistments, and the rise in employment caused by war activites are given as the main reason for the lack of employable persons in the city and district.

MARKET ATTENDANCE FALLING AWAY DUE TO COLDER WEATHER

With the approach of colder weather the attendance at the mid-week market is rapidly falling away. On Tuesday morning only a few scattered vendors displayed produce with prices for the most part remaining at Saturday's levels.

SOUTHERNER TRIES TO BUY WILLKIE PIN IN LOCAL STORE

The United States presidential election falls on November 5th, and the gentleman from Tennessee who has been spending some time in Northern Quebec on a holiday did not want to return to his native soil without evidence of his electoral favorite. The surprised saleslady showed him the store's supply of costume jewelry, but the southerner, smilingly asserted: "I all want one with Mistuh Willkie's picture on it." No sale.

MAIL CARRIER KNOCKED FROM BIKE

Charles Lloyd, veteran Belleville mail carrier sustained a painful leg injury as the result of being knocked off his bicycle on Bridge St. when struck by a passing motor car yesterday. Mr. Lloyd was proceeding westerly towards his home when an automobile driven in the same direction by Rev. William Sterling of Shannonville, was about to pass the cyclist and turn north on Front St. In some manner the rear of the motor car was in collision with Mr. Lloyd's bike, knocking him to the pavement. Upon hearing shouts of pedestrians Rev. Mr. Sterling immediately stopped his motor car and was surprised to hear of the collision. Mr. Lloyd was not seriously injured, although badly shaken up.

The Duties and Aims of Garage Operators' Assoc. Described To Local Members by Editor

Garage operators from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties listened to a brief but concise picture of the operation and aims of the Garage Operators' Association on Monday evening as members of the local branch held their monthly dinner meeting at which Mr. E. J. Wadham, Editor of "Garage Operators," of Toronto, was the guest speaker.

Mr. Wadham gave local members a detailed picture of what transpires at the head office of the Garage Operators' Association in Toronto, stressing the importance of co-operation of the members with their officers and the value of organization as a means of attaining what the Association has set out to accomplish.

"Many garagemen have a very complete idea as to what is wrong with their business and also have a good suggestion as to what might help to overcome this difficulty, but they keep these ideas to themselves. The Garage Operators' Association provides an opportunity for garagemen to air their grievances for the betterment of the trade," stated Mr. Wadham, "and the place to air these grievances is at the regular meeting of your local branch."

In stressing co-operation Mr. Wadham said that the question was not "What can the Association do for the individual," but "what can I do for myself through the Association," and finally "what have I done for my trade through the Association."

Program Outlined

Mr. Wadham outlined to the local members what the Association is striving to do for garagemen and service station operators throughout Ontario stating that, among other things their program included an effort to secure a revision of garage licences which would differentiate as to the qualification of mechanics employed; also they were keeping up a pressure for a general and periodical inspection of motor vehicles and a demand that registration cards be produced by persons transferring cars. The Association was also assisting in the arrangement of refresher courses for motor mechanics, stated Mr. Wadham.

In closing the speaker urged local members to advertise the fact that they belonged to the Garage Operators' Association, to know what the Association is doing and demand that their officers keep them advised. "Show the public that the Association stands for courtesy, efficiency and integrity by garagemen to the customer, and above all, keep the standard of your profession at the highest possible level."

Business transacted at the meeting included discussion on a graduated scale of membership fees being paid and also regarding a report that certain local industries were selling gasoline and anti-freeze to their employees at practically wholesome prices. Reports from the various committeemen rounded out the business end of the meeting. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Bill Davies asked to be relieved of his position of Secretary to the local branch.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Jack Trudeau while entertainment was afforded by a sing-song with all present taking part. Mr. Leo Riggs acted as accompanist on the piano.

The appreciation of the members toward Mr. Wadham for his enlightening address was expressed by Mr. Bert Boyce.

Junior Farmers' Clubs of Ontario Present $2,050 to Red Cross

Junior Farmers' Clubs of Hastings County learned with pride today of the presentation Monday to Dr. Fred W. Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, of a cheque for $2,050 by the Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture. The money was raised by the junior farmers' clubs of Ontario for the purpose of purchasing an ambulance for service in England.

The cheque was first presented to Mr. Dewan by Earl Empringham, president of the York County Junior Farmers, in the presence of some dozen junior farmer representatives and those of junior women's institutes R. S. Duncan, director of agricultural representatives, who introduced the delegates recalled junior farmers' work during the last war when they raised over $10,000.

Mr. Dewan congratulated the young farmers in going beyond the realm of their own communities into the national field and security of the Empire. Dr. Routley said the ambulance would carry a junior farmer shield on each side and that it raised the total number of ambulances donated by Canadians to 221. All the money was raised in Ontario with the exception of $12.00 sent from Weyburn, Sask., by the Homecraft Club of Girls.

Y'S MEN PREPARE FOR HALLOWE'EN

The regular meeting of the Y's Men's Club was held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening with Lorne McDougall, Past President, acting as chairman for the evening. Mr. Alec Gordon acted as pianist for the program of vocal numbers enjoyed by the members before the general meeting.

Final arrangements for conducting the annual Hallowe'en party on October 31st were discussed, the details of prizes and program of which will be published later. As a service to the Y.M.C.A. it was decided that the club supervise the bowling alleys for the various leagues in operation at the "Y".

The Y's Men's Club looks forward to a very busy and successful season this fall and winter and owing to the fact that many of the members belong to the local N.P.A.M. unit, it was decided to shift all meetings so as to start at 6.15 so as to permit all those in training to leave at 7.30 for their engagements at the Armouries.

LAWNS, STREETS LITTERED WITH LEAVES

Thick leafage of the trees this year has resulted in a heavier than usual carpet of dead leaves that now grace lawns and boulevards of the city. Foresighted residents however, are taking advantage of the present weather to remove the better part of the leaves now and thus save the additional labor in the Spring.

SNEAK THIEVES CLEAN REFRIGERATOR

Sneak thieves in Belleville have little or no respect for personages, it was learned recently when marauders entered the family refrigerator at the apartment occupied by Police Sergeant Arthur Harman on Bridge Street, and stole the family dinner. Included in the loot was a freshly roasted chicken, with dressing and all of the trimmings. The thieves apparently crept up a rear stairway leading into a back kitchen, where Sergeant and Mrs. Harman keep the family refrigerator, which is usually quite well stocked with provisions, as the marauders found out over the weekend.

EXCAVATE FOR SEWER

City workmen are excavating in Front Street installing a new sewage line to the Kresge Store. With only a foot of earth above the solid rock, excavation operations are proving more laborious than was at first anticipated.

SOME BOAT OWNERS PLACE CRAFT IN WINTER STORAGE

With the game fishing season over, and yachting and sailing comforts being more or less in the lap of the weather gods, a number of boats are being hauled into winter quarters along the waterfront. A few of the hardier "salts" however, anticipate further enjoyment of their favorite summer sport, and are leaving their craft out.

London Newspaper Is Not Terrified By German 'Warning'

London, Oct. 22 (CP).—The Daily Mirror said today it would be better to be "conquered" by the United States than live under the Nazis, in an editorial declaring that "the enemy propagandist press is now warning us that American aid for Britain will imply conquest or control of Britain by America.

"We cannot deny that in the past America, financially speaking, has done a good deal of controlling on this side of the Atlantic," the newspaper said.

"A threat of further amalgamation does not terrify us."

'Pastor Hall' is Gripping Expose Of German National Socialism

Preview Audience at Capitol Theatre Sees Film Depicting Rise of Nazism as it Invades Typical German Village With Its Sinister Methods and Influences—Star Cast of British Actors of Stage and Screen Seen in Powerful Production Revealing Nazism With Its Evil Train

By GEO. H. CARVER

Gripping in its emotional appeal; soul-stirring in its dramatic picturization of a ruthless form of government; an epic of motion picture entertainment, the film "Pastor Hall" portrays in a manner never before flashed on the silver screen, the determination of the National Socialist Government of Germany to bend a people to its will.

The persecution of the Jews; the dominating force of fear that is inculcated into the inhabitants of a typical German country village, by the storm troopers; the nefarious activities of the government's spies and the heroic stand taken by the village minister in defence of his Christian ideals is a milestone in the history of motion pictures that will live long in the memory of those who see it.

Scenes of Misery Portrayed

The thrilling scenes of the misery of the unfortunate people torn away from their loved ones and cast into concentration camps; the ruthless savagery of Hitler's hirelings, themselves obsessed by the all-dominating fear, and the cruel methods used to impress upon the people that the individual exists only for the state, are but threads in a pattern woven in a continuity that leaves the audience breathless.

Pastor Hall's heroic stand in defence of his people and their ideals and his refusal to bow to the dictates of a power-mad maniac; his defiance of the Nazi order and his attempts to bring his little flock from the power of the dominating Nazi ideals are the highlights of a film that is thrill-packed to its sensational climax.

German Concentration Camp

The picture gives in detail the horrors of a German concentration camp, and the utterly ruthless methods used by equally ruthless officials. The inside story of Nazi "Labor Camps" where teen-aged girls are taken to work in the fields and what happens there is dramatically suggested.

It is the story of a peaceful German village brought suddenly under the heel of the Nazi order. Sequence follows sequence in a crescendo of interest until one sits on the edge of his seat in a confusion of emotion. The entire film stirs one to the innermost depths, and leaves one with a greater appreciation and feeling of thankfulness that the British Navy, the Air Force and the gallant soldiers of the Empire stand between Canada and the horrors of National Socialism.

Its Lesson

It is a picture which should be seen by all who love their homes, their freedom and their liberty. Its very drama, the tragedy of the lives of those who dare oppose governmental edicts, and the cruelty practised by those in authority as brought out in the swiftly-moving events, mark it as an epic of the screen.

The cast is well selected and Alfred Weston, British actor who portrays Pastor Hall, gives a performance that will rank with the best of the year. Nova Pilbeam gives an outstanding characterization as the pastor's daughter and the rest of the large cast headed by the prominent character actor, Seymour Hicks, fill supporting roles in splendid manner.

The story of "Pastor Hall" is based on authentic facts from the life of the German pastor, the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, whose defiance of the Nazi order and relentless opposition to all National Socialism stands for, sent him to a Nazi concentration camp. Niemoeller's expose of Hitlerian methods startled the civilized world. He is still a prisoner in one of the hell-holes called concentration camps.

A number of ministers, business, professional and industrialists of the city saw the film last week at a special preview and placed their stamp of approval on it. The picture will be shown at the Capitol Theatre next week, starting on Monday, Oct. 28.

Beck Arrested Say Nazis

Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 22—(AP)—A German news agency claimed today that Josef Beck, former Polish foreign minister, was arrested by Rumanian Iron Guard police at Bucharest while trying to escape with a British passport from Rumania, where he has been since the last days of Poland's resistance. Other reports from Bucharest said the government denied Beck had been arrested.

Fishing Licences Issued Compare With Other Years

Despite the fact that the local tourist season was reported to have fallen off considerably this past summer, the number of fishing licences sold by Mr. George Finch, local issuer of licences, compared very favourably with that of other years.

Mr. Finch stated this morning that at one time during the summer he thought there might be a 20 per cent falling off in the sale of licences for this past season but sales during the latter part of the fishing season brought the total up to that of last year. The past season was noticeable in that there was an absence of large parties of tourists coming in for licences. "In other years", stated Mr. Finch, "it was a common occurrence for a party of six or seven American tourists to come in together for licences, but this year they came singly or at the most two or three in a party". Had it been a normal season the sale of licences would have undoubtedly surpassed other years.

While it was too early to estimate whether the total sale of gun licences would be up this year, Mr. Finch said that the sale for small guns had shown an increase. This was due to the fact that the compulsory registration of all firearms had made owners become more conscious of the fact that they must have a gun licence for hunting small game.

The hunting season for deer does not open until November 5, when an increase in the sale of other gun licences is expected.

Police Blotter

Police and Canadian National Police are investigating a robbery that took place at Marlbank over the week-end. Inspector Frank Gardner, O.P.P. District Headquarters No. 8 Belleville, today learned the Canadian National Railway toolhouse at Marlbank had been entered and goods stolen. Besides 35 gallons of gasoline, tools were also reported missing by the sectionman.

An Essex coupe the property of Mrs. Craig Russell, Rossmore, was stolen from that village some time last night, Chief Kidd was informed early today.

Despite warnings from Attorney General Gordon Conant relative to examples being made of alleged hit-and-run drivers if and when they are apprehended, this type of accident continues. Yesterday P. J. Millard, local delivery man, complained to police a motor car had sideswiped his parked truck on East Bridge Street, causing extensive damage. The driver of the motor car at fault in the matter failed to stop at the scene of the crash.

Miss Dora Aikens, Belleville, reported her automobile had run over and killed a dog at the summit of the West Moira Street hill. The dog ran beneath the wheels of Miss Aikens' motor car and was instantly killed, the driver reported to police. The city scavenger was notified to remove the carcass.

Albert College officials complained this morning that a horse was wandering at large on the school property. Detective Fred Isard soon ascertained the ownership of the animal and it was tethered.

No arrests being necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, the cell block was left available for eleven transients who sought shelter here last night.

Field Operations Carried Out

"A" Company of Hastings Prince Edward Regiment 2nd Battalion (N.P.A.M) situated at Bancroft under command of Major H. Babcock, carried out a day of field operations Sunday. The boys met at 8.30 a.m. at the Orderly Room and after an advance party had left for the field, the main body departed about 9 a.m. marching to North Lake about five miles south of Bancroft on Highway No. 62 where the platoons under their respective commanding officers immediately set to work digging trenches which had previously been marked out. This operation continued until noon when the boys were dismissed for the mid-day meal. The Major certainly deserved much credit for the splendid meal he arranged which consisted of beef stew, boiled carrots and potatoes, bread and butter, tea and apples. After everyone was amply replenished the trench digging was resumed and completed in mid-afternoon. The platoons were then taken into the trenches at intervals under war-time regulations and given lectures and instructions. Quite a gathering of interested spectators from the village assembled in the afternoon to view the work.

Anniversary of Trafalgar Observed by Court Moira

Inspector J. R. Pickering Points Out Significance of Nelson's Victory 135 Years Ago

EXAMPLE FOR TODAY

Trafalgar Day was fittingly observed by Court Moira Independent Order of Foresters at the rally last evening in their chambers, West Front Street, city.

"The Life of Nelson and the British Navy" was the subject of the guest visitor from a Hamilton I.O.O.F. Court in the person of Bro. J. R. Pickering, B.Pd., public school inspector here. He dwelt upon the Napoleonic War of a hundred and thirty-five years ago and how Horatio Nelson led so effectively in deciding the fateful issues of that time through sea warfare. It was an illuminating and heartening message for the present day, drawn out of lessons from the past, which the able and talented speaker delivered with historical facts presented in an impressive and timely manner.

Sponsoring a motion of appreciation, Bro. J. O. Herity, Past High Chief Ranger, voiced his personal thanks also for such a vivid description of old events and referred to Admiral Nelson's influence in maintaining the courage of Britons in his own and subsequent days.

Bro. H. B. Stock responded to the expression of gratitude which was heartily supported in that the instructive message given was so much needed these days.

Several former active members spoke regarding the present situation of fraternal matters and future prospects for sustaining good fellowship and the real brotherhood spirit that ought to pervade modern society.

Under the direction of Companion Miller, orator of the Court, a splendid repast of fish and chips with other refreshments was served by the ladies and complimented upon gracefully in remarks by Bro. Geo. Sprackett, C.D., and High Secretary Charles L. Walters.

Chief Ranger George Ellarby presided and was assisted by Vice-Chief Ranger Walter Breach. High Orator Frank Miller as usual contributed toward the success of the arrangements and appreciation was paid to District Deputy and High Court Auditor Fred Henry for his energies over the rally.

REV. W. J. WALKER SPECIAL SPEAKER

Possibilities of Mental Telepathy Discussed Before Kinsmen Club

Psychological research, its intricate and fundamentals, was the basis of an interesting discourse delivered to the Belleville Kinsmen Club members at their regular fortnightly meeting held at the New Queen's hotel last night when Rev. W. J. Walker, of St. Andrew's Church, was the guest speaker of the evening. Rev. Walker most clearly elucidated upon the subject of the research of the possibilities of mental telepathy. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Alderman Harry Rollins while at the conclusion of his educational discourse Rev. W. J. Walker was tendered the thanks of the club by Kin George Meades and President Jeff Marvell.

Reports from a week-end hunting trip, enjoyed by five members of the club in North Hastings were received, but no evidence of the chase produced. Kinsmen C. B. Colling, "Boiler" Lloyd, Jim Fraser, Tom Lewis and Jim Lafferty being personally responsible for several tall anecdotes regarding the expedition. Several reports as to the activities of the club enterprises were also received and adopted.

The entertainment of the evening was provided by Kinsmen Phil Huddlestone, in two splendidly received piano solos. Gardner Duff acted as song leader and Mac Bonter sergeant-at-arms. The Kinsmen will meet with other local service clubs at the annual joint meetings of all service clubs in Belleville to be held next week, President Marvell announced.

Rome Communique

Rome, Oct. 22—(AP)—The Italian High Command communique today: "During the night of Oct. 20, our torpedo boats in the Red Sea left port in search of a large enemy convoy strongly escorted by cruisers and destroyers, which previously had been reported by scouting planes.

"One section of our torpedo boats succeeded about midnight in discovering the convoy and decisively attacked various ships with torpedoes, despite violent fire from the enemy cruisers and destroyers.

"Shortly after this first clash, another section of our torpedo boats attacked the convoy, also succeeding in torpedoing several steamers.

"Following that action, our torpedo boats and preponderant enemy forces engaged in violent night battles which continued until dawn.

"At that hour, one 8,000-ton enemy cruiser of the Sydney type, entering within range of action of naval coast defence batteries on the Southern Red Sea Islands, was quickly caught in effective fire of a coastal battery.

"The cruiser was repeatedly hit and seriously damaged and forced to retreat slowly. She later was seen stopped off the coast in serious difficulties while other English warships hastened to her aid.

"Altogether in the actions, six steamers were sunk and others seriously damaged. Despite the sharp fighting only one of our torpedo boats was hit by the fire on the enemy cruisers. Despite serious damage, she succeeded in reaching the protection of naval coastal batteries. Losses among the crew were light.

"At dawn, the enemy convoy again was attacked also by our aviation which engaged in a fight with enemy pursuit planes; shooting down a Gloster plane.

No Comment by Admiralty

(No comment on these reported events in the Red Sea has yet been made by the British Admiralty. British cruisers of the Sydney class are of 6,830 tons, not 8,000 as stated in the Italian communique. The Sydney is in the Australian navy, and in July sank the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni in the Mediterranean.)

"In North Africa, our air force bombed Fuka, Maaten, Bagush, barracks at Matruh and El Daba, air bases at Hamman, west of Alexandria. Positive results were obtained everywhere despite lively enemy anti-aircraft fire.

(At Alexandria there were no casualties and no damage. At Cairo damage was negligible and one civilian was killed.)

"The enemy air force carried out attacks against our troops, wounding some, and attacked two field hospitals, easily recognizable, in the Buqbuq zone hitting eight patients.

"In East Africa, one of our patrols surprised and put to flight enemy motorized columns near Libol in Kenya.

"Our air force bombed port works at Aden, several motor trucks near Lokitang in Kenya and fortified works and the airport at Garissa, shooting down an enemy pursuit plane in combat and destroying two enemy planes on the ground. One of our planes failed to return.

"The enemy air force attacked Aiscia, Gura, Decamere and Massawa without results, Kassala, where one person was wounded, and Asmara, where three were wounded, and light damage was caused."

AT THE McCARTHY

"So This is London"

From riotous start to side-splitting finish, it's fun, fun, fun,....as George M. Cohan's famous stage success comes to the screen with a great cast of laugh-makers, Robertson Hare, Alfred Drayton, Geo. Sanders (of "The Saint" series), Berton Churchill and Dodie and Liz two newcomers who will leave you dizzy, in "So This is London" now playing at the McCarthy theatre. An excellent screen vaudeville subject entitled "I Dream of Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair," also an excellent cartoon "Edgar Runs Again" and latest Fox News events are also now showing in addition to "So This is London."

"South of Pago Pago"

A picture bigger than anything you've seen since "Mutiny on the Bounty" bringing you exciting Jon Hall in his first appearance since "The Hurricane" the next attraction at the McCarthy theatre will be Edward Small's romantic-drama "South of Pago Pago" staring Jon Hall, Victor McLaglen, Frances Farmer, Gene Lockhart and Douglas Dumbrille.

AT THE BELLE

"Sporting Blood"

A story of romance and tense drama against a background of Maryland and Virginia horse racing along with thrills and spills of the race track, is pictured in "Sporting Blood," now on the Belle screen. Robert Young is seen as the hero and beautiful Maureen O'Sullivan is the heroine. Lewis Stone, the popular judge of the "Hardy Family" series, leaves that role for the first time this year to join the cast as Maureen's father. Attractive Lynne Carver appears as Maureen's sister. William Gargan plays Young's pal in his horse racing ventures. The plot presents Robert Young as a horse owner and trainer. He is hated by Lewis Stone and his two daughters because of an old family feud. However, the girls change their minds when they see him. Both fall in love with him. There is plenty of action when Young's stables are burned and the daughter whom he believes himself to be in love with runs out on him and marries another suitor. For spite Young marries the second daughter who also owns a horse. All ends well, however, when Young trains this horse which wins the climactic race and Young learns it is really this daughter whom he has loved all the time. The film was directed by S. Sylvan Simon, one of Hollywood's youngest directors. Racing and track sequences were filmed at the famous Santa Anita track. The training track and stables which appear as Stone's in the picture were photographed at the Marwyck ranch owned by Barbara Stanwyck.

"Mystery Sea Raider"

If you have any intention of taking a European cruise in the near future, you'd better stop at the Belle Theatre first and have a look at "Mystery Sea Raider," the new Paramount picture featuring Henry Wilcoxon. Carole Landis and Onslow Stevens which is the companion feature attraction.

Maybe it's propaganda for "See America First," but we must admit that for pure unadulterated dynamite in the ways of thrills, this film, based on three of the major naval incidents in the World War II, you won't find much to compare with it this side of the international date line.

The popular Belle News of the Hour will be exhibited on the same program.

KING AND QUEEN VISIT AIR RAID VICTIMS

On a tour of London hospitals, King George and Queen Elizabeth are shown chatting with a civilian air raid victim who is now able to sit up and take a little nourishment as the bed tray indicates.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Comin' Round the Mountain"

Robin Burns has never been touted as one of the screen's outstanding Casanovas. As a matter of fact, the glamour girls either gave him a gentle "brush off," or were content to play big sister to the sage of the Ozarks, and let it go at that.

But it's different now—Bob put his foot down recently, but hard. So instead of having "some callow juvenile," as he puts it, get the girl, the final fadeout of Paramount's "Comin' Round the Mountain," Boo's newest starring picture now showing at the Capitol, will find the leading lady reposing in his manly if not too romantic arms.

"Why shouldn't I get the girl," Bob demanded. "Gary Cooper does, and Clark Gable and Errol Flynn. What have they got that I haven't got?" And without telling him, Director George Archainbeaud allowed it would be all right this once, and asked the drawling comic who he'd suggest to play the part of his hillbilly sweetheart.

"Just so she's purty and sweet," Burns replied, "an maybe, could she be a blonde?"

"She could," said Archainbaud, and since Una Merkel fit the part perfectly, she got the job.

Beside this new romantic team, a host of screen and radio stars are to be seen in "Comin' Round the Mountain," among whom are Jerry (Yahoodi) Colonna, of the Bob Hope show, Uncle Ezra Watters, of Rosedale's powerful little five-watter, Mayor Gildersleeve and the Old Timer from Fibber McGee's program; Slap-happy Grandpappy and Jack Benny's Don Wilson.

On the same programme the added attraction "Find the Witness," is a drama full of suspense and thrills from start to finish. A colored parade of Mechanix Illustrated" closes the entertaining bill.

Moral and Religious Aspects of Teaching Urged by Speaker

Napanee, Oct. 22—T. W. Steer, Trenton, was elected President of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Association, when the annual meeting was held in Napanee Saturday. The other officers are: John Diamant, immediate past president; W. A. Campbell, Brockville, vice-president; W. M. Shurtlefft, Kingston, secretary-treasurer; K. S Hill, Belleville, counsellor; P. C. MacLaurin, Belleville, chairman of the relations committee; F. W. Danby, Kingston, chairman of the superannuation committee. There was an attendance of approximately 60, comprising Kingston District No. 10, including teachers from Trenton to Brockville.

The initial session was held at the Napanee Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, with John Diamant, of the collegiate staff, presiding. General business was discussed after which an adjournment was made to the Superior restaurant, where dinner was served. John Diamant presided and greetings were tendered from Mayor D. R. Hall, on behalf of the Town of Napanee, and G. S. Reid, chairman of the Board of Education, on behalf of that body.

The main address for the afternoon session was delivered by A. Ainsley, President of the Federation, and of the York Memorial Collegiate Institute, Toronto, who discussed the war situation and urged the teachers to do their part inside and outside the schools.

The speaker stressed the fact that teaching up until now was based on the curriculum and that attention is not paid as much to the moral and religious aspects and urged upon the teachers to pay more attention to them.

Rev. A. J. Wilson, editor of the United Church Observer, was present and briefly addressed the teachers.

MR. CHURCHILL TO THE FRENCH PEOPLE

Prime Minister Churchill's appeal to the French nation for their goodwill paid tribute to the French people and also warned of Hitler "this evil man" who is resolved to wipe out the French nation.

The French and the world were told that in 1941 Britain would seize the air supremacy from Germany. "We are on Hitler's track and so are our friends across the Atlantic Ocean."

Frenchmen heard Mr. Churchill appeal for their friendship against the Hun. "Remember, we shall never stop, never weary, never give in and that our whole people and Empire have bound themselves to the task of cleansing Europe from the Nazi pestilence and saving the world from new dark ages." English confidence is high.

The French people heard him declare that Britain did not seek French colonies and ships, for "we seek to beat the life and soul out of Hitler and Hitlerism. That alone, that for all times and that to the end. We do not covet anything of any nation except their respect."

The French under the oppressor and tyrant Hitler must have listened with deep emotion as the British leader declared Britain had not forgotten the old ties with France. His appeal to them, "Frenchmen, rearm your spirits before it is too late," no doubt left a deep impression on the spirit of La Belle France and will lead to action in the days to come.

Frenchmen, hearing the Prime Minister of Great Britain who carries on the war against Germany with the help of groups of former allies, must have stirred at the point where the British leader said, "I speak to you at your firesides wherever you may be or whatever your fortunes are. I repeat the prayer around the Louis d'or (a French coin) 'Dieu Protege La France' (God Protect France).

It was good news he sent the French. "Our air force has more than held its own. We are waiting for the long-promised invasion."

It must have been good to the French who have spent sad days since mid-June when the resistance of the republic collapsed, to hear Mr. Churchill describe the two dictators, Hitler and Mussolini, as "these two villain messieurs" who had wished to carve up France, "to one a leg, to another a wing, or again a portion of the breast."

Frenchmen who have been for four months under subjection to the Germans heard from Mr. Churchill that Hitler, if he had his way, would reduce all Europe to one uniform Bocheland to be exploited, pillaged and bullied by his Nazi-gangsters. They have seen the evidences of Nazi severity.

Mr. Churchill held up the goal of victory, bringing peace to the world and return of liberty to the states whom Germany has overrun and pillaged.

SKIES TO SWARM WITH BRITISH PLANES, BEAVERBROOK'S AIM

When Lord Beaverbrook took over the portfolio of Minister of Aircraft Production in the Churchill Government, he envisioned the day not so far away when the skies would swarm with British aircraft. Yesterday he stated that he would not be satisfied until this goal was achieved.

Anyone who has followed the course of the war and the story of the Royal Air Force can realize what a potent agent for victory will be an air force so preponderating that long before the peak of British strength is achieved, the Germans will have lost all energy for air offensive.

Lord Beaverbrook today "feels a lot more comfortable than last June." Britain has more planes available for operational service than ever before. A good flow of airplanes from the United States is reaching Britain.

In the light of this and in prospect of the mighty expansion of the R.A.F. yet to come, the frustration of the enemy in their attempt to ferry troops across the Channel in mid-September can be understood and also the references of late to the British offensive which is to come.

BRITISH PEOPLE DEFY HITLER'S ARMADA

Life in Britain despite bombing of the Nazi airmen goes on as usual. The Londoner who is subjected to the violence of the enemy's attacks on non-military objectives, does not murmur, rather he jokes and his spirit is unruffled. Their Majesties the King and Queen can go about in the capital and visit scenes which have been the target of the Germans and find the spirit of the people invincible.

This is what is foiling the attempt at terrorism which the Nazis hoped would shatter the morale of the British people.

There is something in the British people's make-up which steels them against the enemy's efforts to terrorize.

There is the righteousness of their cause. Civilians know that the enemy is absolutely without warrant or justice or humanity in deliberately attacking cottages of the people, private dwellings and churches and such other buildings which are not military targets. They realize that the enemy's plan is to conquer if possible by inculcating fear.

Yet the savagery of the Huns not only does not disturb the even tenor of the people's ways; rather it stimulates the nerves, because the people know they are by maintaining their morale fighting for the cause of right and attacks arouse the authorities and organizations to more complete preparation for the housing of the people in shelters.

The British people are the best exaxmples of what loyalty means and what will serve the public cause they support with all their might and spirit, though they may run risks. They are all enlisted in the cause for the preservation of liberty. Their pride is the quiet pride which is expressed in the performance of duty without acclaim. The British people possess a moral fibre which has been the admiration of the world.

Nazis Hesitate To Risk Troops For Italy's Aid

Written For The Canadian Press By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London (CP)—The Battle of Britain goes on. It becomes increasingly an air battle, conducted by night, against material and morale. The Navy continues to control sea communication. But we cannot expect to hear much of its many activities.

Any prospect of the main armies of Britain and Germany coming to grips in the near future has, in my view, almost disappeared. The air war may continue for a long period with only minor alterations in method

We are afforded an opportunity of reviewing the situation in other theatres of war. Libya and Abyssinia are, of course, the only other active theatres, but potential theatres are numerous.

In Libya, Graziani is still attempting to develop his communications and his advance base. Subjected to bombardment by naval guns on one side, to harassing attacks by mobile land units on the other, and to air attack, his preparations are necessarily proceeding slowly. He is suffering losses in material and the communications of his advanced troops make considerable demands upon his resources.

Big Opposing Armies

While it would be a profound error to underestimate Italian strength, both in numbers and quality of material the Allied army is now formidable also. The opposing armies, however, are, and may remain for sometime, outside striking distance of each other for anything in the nature of offensive or counter-attack.

Before the offensive stage is reached, Graziani may receive reinforcements in aircraft and mechanized troops from Germany. But sea communications with Libya are by no means safe from disturbance and unless they can be made safe it is doubtful if Germany would risk sending many valuable troops across the Mediterranean.

Of other regions that demand attention Spain is perhaps the most important. Pressure is obviously being put on Gen. Franco to make a move on Gibraltar, presumably with Axis assistance. But no fact is more certain than that Spain is war-weary. She is extremely impoverished as a result of her own Civil War and interruption of trade.

She stands to lose much more than she can even be promised by the Axis by going to war. Perhaps her attitude, like that of others, is waiting upon the outcome of the Air Battle of Britain.

Japan's Move

The Pact of Japan with the Axis Powers designed to place a brake on Anglo-American collaboration, has had, if anything, the opposite result. What its effect will be on the attitude of Russia is still obscure, but so far it does not seem materially to have changed the general military situation.

In that situation, the outstanding point, to my mind, is that Germany, who up to now has won her victories mainly with her army, is unable to discover a theatre in which she can use her army to the detriment of Britain.

It may become purely an army of European occupation. She must rely almost solely on her air force for offensive power. And in the air she has met her match.

Stewart Says—

Central Press Canadian Columnist

Chas. P Stewart

Not in so many words, but by plain implication, Uncle Sam has been threatened, by the Axis folk, with the dreadful things that'll happen to him if he stays as pro-British as he is now.

It's news, though, to have the Axis remark that he'll get his share of the gravy if John Bull is licked as per the Axis' desired program.

This, howeved, is what Benito Mussolini's newspaper the Popolo d'Italia, suggested the other day. Benito, it's to be borne in mind, is a newspaperman personally. Virginio Gayda everlastingly is referred to as his spokesman. No doubt he really is in close touch with the Duce. But the Popolo actually is Benito's own paper. What that daily says is direct from the fountainhead. It's as if Benito himself said it.

Well, the Popolo's prediction is that, assuming the squashing of J. Bull's own isle by the Axis, the U.S.A. automatically will get Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the British West Indies.

Benito doesn't make this exactly as an offer. It's more in the nature of a forecast of something inevitable.

As For Hitler

What Fuehrer Hitler thinks about it is a different proposition. Still, Benito and Adolf are so much in cahoots that it doesn't seem as if Benito would outline a scheme that Adolf wouldn't acquiesce in.

That's all very well, so far as Italy and Germany are concerned. But what does Japan think about it?

Today the Japs are hooked up with the Axis. And it's an old story that the mikado persistently has had an eye on Australia—and on New Zealand, too, as a sideshow. He probably wouldn't figure on getting his clamps upon Canada or the British West Indies.

Presumably Italy hasn't yet thought of gobbling the Anzac end of the British Empire, and maybe Germany hasn't either. Germany, nevertheless surely does have the Dutch East (not necessarily the Dutch West) Indies in mind. And if Mr. Hitler manages to wallop the British and cop off Java and adjoining islands (the Dutch East Indian group) it's no good bet that he won't take a fancy to Australia and New Zealand also.

Italy doesn't so much matter. Benito's interest mainly is in Africa.

Australia to Japan?

Likewise I can imagine that Adolf might be willing to assign Australasia to the Japs (temporarily) for the sake of Nippon's help in the present situation.

Japan, however, to a certainty, never would agree to an Australian-New Zealand merger with the United States.

Neither have I a very clear idea as to the fashion by which Canada, Australia and New Zealand might combine with the United States.

Oh, yes, we like 'em and they like us.

Yet how could we amalgamate? How would the Australians and New Zealanders like having us dictate to them? How would we like to have Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders in congress, as representatives and senators? How would we like to have a Canadian, an Australian or a New Zealander running for president?

I'll say it would result in complications.

Underwater Farming Profitable

Back in the days of the Florida land boom, people used to buy farms sight unseen and find out subsequently, and considerably to their annoyance, that the "fertile fields" they had acquired in the south were deep under water.

Perhaps they wouldn't have cursed so hard at the offending real estate sharks if they had first had a chat with Dr. A. W. H. Needler, who holds—and has evidence in support of his contention—that underwater farming can be a very profitable enterprize.

Oysters The Answer

The secret of success, of course, is to grow the right thing. And the right thing is oysters—large, plump, delicious oysters of the type prized by epicures the world over.

That's Dr. Needler's business. His official title is "zoologist in charge of Atlantic oyster investigations, Biological Board of Canada," but just to simplify things let's describe him as the superintendent of an experimental farm where the crop is Ostrea Virginica. (Boy are they ever good in a stew, or on the half-shell with a dash of lemon and horse-radish, those Ostrea Virginca.)

How It is Done

Oyster farmers first have to lease lots from the government — the same kind of lots those Florida land sharks used to sell. From there on all they have to do is follow the directions in a booklet which came from Dr. Needler's pen and which is called "Oyster Farming on the Atlantic Coast of Canada: A Bulletin of Information and Instructions for the Use of Oyster Farming."

This instructs them to scour the silt from their submarine garden plots and give these a clean, hard surface of shells, sand or whatnot.

And the next thing is to gather the seed, or "spat" as embryo oysters are called in their free-siwmming stage. Matters haven't progressed to a point where "spat" can be purchased by the packet. They have to be caught.

They are caught in a number of ways. Probably the best device is a cardboard container shaped like an egg crate and coated with cement, sunk a few feet under water, and over a bed where there are mature oysters, this after the water has reached the minimum spawning temperature—68 degrees.

Quite a Crop

Fertilized oyster eggs —a large female will release 500,000,000 eggs, which is quite a few—float on the top and soon develop a swimming apparatus composed of microscopic hairs. (Very microscopic hairs since "spat" themselves are not visible to the naked eye). They move around by wiggling the hairs and when they start to form a shell they decide it is time to settle down and spend a dull existence. So they settle down on the cardboard containers, and stay there growing until Autumn begins to tinge the leaves.

By that time they may be as big as thumb-nails. They can be scrapped off the cement-covered cardboard with a knife. Dr. Needler has an easier way—an electric washing machine affair which churns them around until they are separated.

The next phase of a tame oyster's tame life is in a tray sunk below freezing level, and mostly doing nothing but fast. In the months that have an "r", when they themselves are so good to eat, they don't eat. It's too cold for them to open their mouths, or something.

Harvest Every Year

To make a long story short, by next Fall the under-water farmer can plant his crop, to harvest it two, three or four years later. Seed oysters never move, once they are planted. They just grow like potatoes or turnips—only slower But the two, three or four-year wait shouldn't get anybody down. The Maritime Provinces, where oysters grow, are swell provinces in which to spend a vacation, and anyway there's a harvest every year, after the first crop has matured.

And boy are they ever good in a stew, or on the half-shell with a dash of lemon and horse-radish, these Ostrea Virginica! — Ottawa Journal.

Is X-ray Treatment of Sinus Infection Successful?

One day you may read of the great success certain specialists have had in the treatment of chronic sinus ailments by use of X-rays and of how the clearing up of the sinus infection has resulted in greatly improved hearing of the patient. The specialist in this case has treated a number of cases and had cured or helped the majority of them.

Perhaps the next day you read of another specialist using X-ray treatment in the same number of cases without any success whatever.

Now there would appear to be something wrong when one specialist gets good results from a method of treatment and another gets no satisfactory results whatever.

Dr. E. Trible Gatewood, Richmond, in Archives of Otolaryngology (ear and throat) reports the study of 22 cases of chronic sinus infection (sinusitis) before and after treatment by X-ray. While this is a small group of patients nevertheless it should be remembered that they are chronic cases and have all likely been treated by other methods without success. Four patients of the group showed complete relief of symptoms and eight were improved as far as their symptoms were concerned although the appearance of the sinus itself was not normal. Ten patients were not helped at all.

Why were some of these cases cured, some improved, and others not helped at all?

It depends upon the condition of the lining or mucous membrane of the sinus. When this has become very thick or hardened, the X-ray (in the dosage given anyway) was unable to penetrate or restore it to normal. If this lining can be restored to normal, the sinus can be properly ventilated. A well ventilated sinus gives no trouble as the air destroys harmful organisms and if lining is not swollen and thickened, the sinus can drain properly into the nose and throat.

Another point about the success or non-success of X-ray treatment of sinus infection is that X-ray specialists are not agreed as to the "dose" of X-rays that should be given or how often the dose should be given.

Sufferers with chronic sinus disease who have tried without success all the usual methods of treatment—sprays of adrenalin up the nose, washing out with salt and water, injections of ovary extracts — can finally try X-ray treatment.

East End Of London

In an editorial entitled "Homes for Heroes" the London Evening Standard describes the harrowing experiences of the mothers in the humble sections of the great city and tells how their spirits are undaunted.

This is the story of the East End of London, says the Evening Standard. It is a terrible, tremendous story; a story of anger, hate, love, defiance; a story of whole streets where you can see women's eyes red with tears, but women's hearts overflowing with kindness towards their neighbors. Yet above all the material wreckage and human tragedy; a cry sounds louder than weeping, louder even than the oaths of vengeance. It is a summons to immediate action.

A woman sits on a rickety chair in the middle of a shattered row of doll's houses, her family about her. She waves her hand at the pile of ruin which was once her own home and her neighbors'. "We don't care about all this stuff," she says, "our only feeling is for the lives of our folk." "How do you like this sort of life?" asks a passer-by. "Well," she replies, "It's nice and airy." She ties up in a paper bundle the last remnant of her possessions in this world. She hoists her child into her arms. She is off in search of shelter for the night. She is the mother who in "The Grapes of Wrath" stood up at the end after suffering afflictions beyond those of Job and boasted, "You can't lick the people." London needs such mothers. Hundreds of them set off at nightfall to look for better shelter.

Yes, there is bravery and fortitude in the East End of London stored in measureless quantities. Yet bhavery and fortitude alone cannot beat the bombs and we would be a mean nation indeed if we failed to provide other shields for those who have had to bear the brunt of this fearful business. We must do it. The Lord Mayor has already opened a fund and he should receive a rich response. The Minister of Health has appealed to the people themselves to befriend their homeless neighbors. He need have no fear that it will be done. But these plans, good though they may be, are not enough. Great public wrongs, great human tragedies are not righted or appeased by charity. The community cannot escape its debt.

We must provide homes for heroes now. Many women and children can still be evacuated to less dangerous areas. Local authorities can be given special powers and funds to see that the homeless are quickly assisted. They have already done great work. They must be given all possible aid. At the same time we can start now digging holes for heroes, real deep shelters with proper amenities where the workers of the East End can find the sleep which so often now eludes them. Other cities can learn from London's experience. They too can start digging now. This is the real story of the East End. Above all the examples of heroism the tale of Homeric qualities displayed by a brave people, above all these is the clamorous demand that this nation should rise and grapple with the perils of the future.

Hitler has struck most heavily at the poor people of this country just as in Germany he struck first against the institutions of the poor. He will have men serve no other god but him. In one country after another we have seen him succeed in his foul designs. He will fail now. The blood which he has spilt in the East End of London means that this people will never abase themselves at his footstool. They have the right to all support. They will fight for a world in which innocent homes are protected against the ravages of barbarism.

The Case for Canada

They come in shyly, their pride tempered with hesitation. Maybe, they think, a newspaper office is too busy to bother with these things. But anyway, in they come, and with great ceremony unwrap their heavy parcel.

Inside is the object of all their pride — a monstrous potato ("dozens more like it at home") or a pumpkin as big as Cinderella's coach ("see if anyone in Calgary can beat that!"). Thus the challenge is laid down, and every day thereafter brings some new triumph of production.

These things are a symbol of the life we have made here — the rich gardens, the bursting elevators, the fat stock in the fields. It seems, each harvest time, that there is no end to the strength of our soil, and our ingenuity in putting that strength to work. Thus, through the nature of this land and through our own spirit, we are rich beyond imagination—food-producers, life-producers such as the world has never seen before.

And not only food. This land is prodigally rich in coal and wood; in power and metal — in all the things that go to make a strong and active nation. Added to this, we have the will to work and the knowledge of machines. And in our blood is the curious restlessness of Canada which makes all life, all work, all production, a high adventure.

• • •

Yet we have known, in our own time, poverty, uncertainty and despair. We have paid our men not to work, not to produce. We have sent our men away, to work elsewhere. We have denied admission to the people who would come and help us produce. Needing homes, we have failed to build them. Needing roads, we have failed to make them. Needing to grow, we have shrunk. Needing to walk boldly, we have faltered and been afraid. Like the foolish steward who hid his talent, being afraid to use it, we have wasted our opportunities. The light that was lit here half-a-century ago has been obscured by lethargy and failure.

Yet we have gone to war. With scarcely the flicker of an eyelash, we have challenged powerful and ruthless antagonists, and we are confident that we shall, in time, destroy them.

Destroying these adversaries, we shall have gained the purpose for which we fight—the right to order our own lives and conduct our own business. Yet that victory, with all its heavy cost, will be largely meaningless unless we make the fullest use of it.

• • •

There are fabulous opportunities waiting for this country. All we need is the vision and courage to grasp them. Many of these opportunities are developing today; others will come when the war ends. These opportunities will come to the Canadian people through a new and vital concept of Canadian life and production — not to work less, but to work more; not to produce less, but to produce more; not to send our people away, but to bring more people here by the thousands and the millions; to build guns and planes, to make great armies, to launch hundreds of ships; to run more trains, to make more roads, to startle the world with the clamor of our building and making and changing.

A new and vital concept—no, not exactly. For we had that concept once. We were, once upon a time, the Canadians, spreading across the country like a hell-bent, whooping army. An army of track-layers, root-blasters, land-breakers, tree-fellers, house-builders, filling up valleys, pushing the mountains aside. We built Calgary overnight; we set up Winnipeg during a long week-end. That's the way we were, not so long ago; then, somehow, we lost the knack. We have to find that knack again, if we propose to endure in a world where might alone is right, and audacity has the edge over mellowed wisdom.

• • •

History has given the Canadian people great wealth, great power to produce. Such power cannot be neglected forever; sooner or later, if we do not put that power to use, others will come (as they are coming now) to try and take it from us. But if we use it, if we produce and grow strong, they will not dare to approach.

This is the challenge of Canada. If we accept it, then our place in the world is assured. But if we hold back—if our answer to the challenge is the old futility, the old lethargy, the old dissension — then we shall fail, and fade into obscurity. And historians, writing of this tragedy, will comment that the Canadian people made a wonderful start, but didn't seem to have the staying power.—Calgary Herald.

British Government To Finance Australia Till End of the War

Sydney, Oct. 22 (CP-Reuters)—The Sydney radio said last night P. C. Spender, Autralian treasurer and minister in charge of supply and development, has announced that arrangements have been made for the British Government to finance Australia's overseas war expenditure to the end of the year.

Mr. Spencer recalled that £6,000,000 (about $24,700,000) had been raised in London in June, 1939. In financing further war expenditure difficulties were encountered, he said, and a temporary arrangement was made with the British Government to make a loan available to meet the balance.

Mr. Spencer said Australia must find ways and means of financing the expenditure from available Australian sources as early as possible.

District-Governor of Rotary Officially Visits Local Club

'Canada Needs Service Today' States A. P. Ross of Toronto

PRAISES CLUB

Declaring that too many large city clubs placed too much importance on the monetary side of their activities, and too little on service, District-Governor Alexander P. Ross, Toronto, Rotary head of District 168, told the Belleville club at their weekly luncheon yesterday, that the branches in smaller communities such as villages of 1,200 population were leading the way in point of service. "They are setting a fine example," Governor Ross stated, "for what Canada needs today is service."

"Rotary with the smaller clubs is purely a question of service" he continued and not money. The trouble with a number of the larger city clubs is that they think if they have no money they cannot function, and consequently are putting too much emphasis on the financial of Rotary."

He paid tribute to the Belleville club. "You are, I believe, the second largest club in Ontario, and certainly the best singing club I have ever listened to. Belleville Rotary is one of the better clubs in the district.

British Clubs Functioning

In direct contrast to the Nazi-ridden countries where Hitler's edicts have closed three hundred Rotary clubs and dissolved a membership of thousands, the 486 British clubs are functioning as in times of peace, Governor Ross said. He quoted a letter from a high ranking English Rotarian who assured all a warm welcome should they ever visit England. The letter stated, the speaker said, that the writer had received a letter from America sympathising with British clubs in these trying times of war. The answer was, Governor Ross told the clubmen "we do not need sympathy, we feel that we should be congratulated in being able to serve Rotary as well as our country in these trying times."

It should be a matter of pride to every Rotarian, the speaker declared, that the very things that service clubs stand for are the things the dictators abhor. The ideals of Rotary must be worth while for dictators destroy everything of this nature.

He urged that the best defensive is a stiff offensive, and Rotary should see that its ideals flourish. Clubs even now are doing a better job than they did in peace time. He warned the clubman that the greatest alibi in the country today is "we are too busy."

He quoted a letter from Rotarian Tom Warren of England, vice president of Rotary International, who stated that "we are doing alright. And don't think we are doing all right because some one is kicking us. Remember, we have an air force and a navy that is doing a h— of a lot of kicking themselves."

Asked to Adopt Slogan

Rotarians should, Governor Ross pointed out, have a clear understanding of democracy; suppress evil forms of government; put down the seeds of revolution and defend their personal liberties and fight subversive doctrines. "This war," he said, "was a world battle between Golden Rule civilization and barbarism." He urged that Rotarians in Canada adopt the slogan of British Rotary. "It all depends on me, and I depend on God."

The District Governor was appropriately introduced by Past District Governor Owen Herity with appreciation expressed by Rotarian Ed Bernstein.

President Percy McGuire told the club that the recent "Happy Gang" entertainment was a fine success and between $350 and $400 would enrich the Crippled Children's Fund from the proceeds. Howard Clarke expressed appreciation of the club's work in the recent Red Cross campaign, which went "over the top" over $1,000.00. Announcement of an inter-club meeting next Monday was made by the president.

Alex. P. Ross

District Governor of Rotary District No. 168 who paid his official visit to the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday. Governor Ross gave an inspiring address on the duties of Rotarians. He paid tribute to Britain's clubmen, whose slogan is "Everything depends on me, and I depend on God."

Churchill Praised By N. Y. Times

New York, Oct. 22 (CP)—Approval of Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast to France was expressed by New York's morning newspapers today.

The Times termed it an address by a man "whose mind has been shaped and influenced by his love of France and its culture," and said that more clearly than his countrymen, Mr. Churchill sees the relations between France and Britain as "one of the most difficult, delicate and important questions of the war."

Said the Herald Tribune: "A change of mood and approach was apparent that transcended in importance the specific statements it contained. The old iron determination was there. But the note of confidence was stronger, the tension was less than in his earlier call to arms when Britain seemed on the ultimate verge of disaster. It was the address of a leader whose people's strength has been tested and is growing under the testing...."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Fairy Godmother Has Knocked at Last

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old and have been going "steady" with a boy of 20 for three years. Last year he bought me a lovely set of rings, and we are very much in love with one another. He is the only one who has ever loved or appreciated me.

My mother died when I was 7, and my parents were on the brink of a divorce, but mother died before it went through. My grandmother took care of me until two years later when my father married again. Both my father and his wife are making good wages but spend it all on themselves, while I wear castoff clothes, given to me by outsiders. My father and I are like strangers, and my stepmother dislikes me. I'm very unhappy at home.

My boy friend's mother suggest we marry and stay with her until her son finishes his course in college. She loves me as much as she loves her own children, and I feel the same about her. She and my boy friend live alone. Please try and help me.

Unhappy.

Well, my dear, you make me believe in fairy godmothers, and that the Cinderella story actually happened in real life. Please don't delay in marrying this thoroughly nice young man and staying with his mother until he's finished his course in college. It's heartening to hear about a girl who has had such a miserable home life coming into her own at last. My best wishes to you both.

An Exception That Proves The Rule?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am writing in behalf of myself and all other girls who don't have boy friends. And, as if that weren't bad enough, their mothers continually remind them of it. My problem is, what to do about mother.

You'll probably say—get a boy friend. But that isn't so easy. By all the rules of the game I should rate a boy friend, since I'm well-dressed a good listener, have a variety of interests such as bridge, dancing, swimming, reading, am fairly good-looking and not bashful. I also have many girl friends of all ages, but no boy friends.

All my girl friends are married or engaged, and I've observed that older girls of 30 or more do marry interesting men, so I haven't given up hope. I'm 25 years old.

What bothers me is mother—could you address an admonishing letter to mothers of girls without boy friends? I'm sure we would appreciate it.

Spinster Susy.

You sound so attractive, my dear Spinster Susy, that I decline absolutely to believe you are the exception that proves the rule. If mother continues to stand like the angel with the flaming sword, keeping away all suitors, and reminding you of her own handiwork, I think you'd be justified in pulling up stakes.

Why don't you try and get a transfer to another city, if you have a good job? Or why don't you girls get up some sort of orphan girl club? Give a series of spinster suppers in the recreation hall attached to some church or community center, or any good club to which some of you mother-bound girls belong. I believe you could break the jinx with a well-served dish of shrimp creole, salmon loaf, and—now that the R months are here—something in oysters. I'll be very glad to send you some of these recipes.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

If You Are Spoiling Your Child, Change Your Viewpoint

All of us know some adults who are spoiled grownup children. They show that they were brought up by indulgent and overfond parents, and that they have never made the slightest effort to overcome this pathetic training. They usually aren't particularly happy people; they demand a lot of understanding and patience, and they usually aren't popular. They are unfortunate victims of incompetent training.

Parents can't bring up their children to be one thing and expect them to be something quite different when they are grown. "As the twig is bent" is a logical process.

In bringing up a child, love for the child isn't enough. That love must be tempered by wisdom. Besides love there must be a lot of commonsense, a lot of backbone and a world of patience. Weak submission on the part of a parent has no relationship to discipline. If a mother (for hers is usually the major part in a child's training) has this point of view about bringing up her child, she's being tragically unjust to that child. Such indulgence can't see beyond the minute. And her job is to prepare her child for the serious business of living, of living his own life richly and rewardingly, and of living comfortably and pleasantly with other people. The birthright of a child is a parent's clear perception of how to develop a child's character so that that child will become a good person and a good citizen.

There are two ways for a spoiled child to grow up. He may continue his spoiled way all his life, full of nettles, indulging in the same tantrums in which he was allowed to indulge when he was a child, showing an irritating indifference to anybody who tries, however kindly, to make a dent in his all-absorbing ego, having a complete disregard for other people's feeling or comfort. He won't have a rational viewpoint about himself, but other people will have a viewpoint about him—and it won't be an endearing one.

The other way for a spoiled child to grow up is by the stern realization that he has been spoiled. In his heart he will blame his parents for this spoiling, he will resent the indulgence, he will see that this way of life doesn't make sense. Then, wisely, he will have to begin a session of self-training—and it will necessarily be a terribly difficult readjustment.

He'll have to undo what has been so mistakenly ingrained in him; that his ego, his wishes, are the only important thing in life. He'll have to defeat his tantrums and all other evidences of his early spoiling. He'll have to keep everlastingly on the job of trying to do what will make him an agreeable person to have around. He will see that being spoiled has no value except a nuisance-value.

As far as a beautiful and successful design for living is concerned, this business of spoiling children is a ridiculous and pathetic procedure. Spoiled children pay dearly for being spoiled. And their parents pay dearly for spoiling them.

Rev. Morton Freeman Guest Speaker at Young Women's Guild

Rev. Morton Freeman, secretary of the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order, was the guest speaker at a special meeting of the Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church on Thursday evening. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Douglas Bews.

In the absence of the President, Mrs. Stanley Kerr presided.

Miss Jane Smyth conducted the worship service on the theme "The Kingdom of Love". She read from Moffatt's translation I Corinthians, chapter thirteen, then read "The Young Man's Dream", from a book by Blanche Carrier.

Mrs. A. D. Archibald introduced the speaker whose theme was "Working With God in the World To-day".

Mr. Freeman in his opening remarks spoke of God's demands to us in Canada and paraphrased his idea of the teaching found in the Old and New Testaments in the thought that men should live together in a society of love, freedom and equality. God demands that we commit ourselves to His will. The changes in the economic system are among the great factors conditioning the possible activities of human beings. The break down in the world at the present time has brought about the necessity for economic planning. The two forms of planning facing us as fascism or Christian democracy. We believe that it is the will of God that men should have physical and spiritual life rather than death so we have to choose the kind of economic planning that gives these things.

The present war is against fascism and directly and indirectly against many things that fascism entails. No matter what happens we must maintain the right of the individual Christian to proclaim the will of God.

For Longer Locks

Eleanor Powell favors a well groomed lock. Her hair is parted in the centre and brushed off the ears. A soft roll starts back of the ears and covers the nape of the neck.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Much talky-talky about short hair coming back, but nobody seems to be doing anything about it. Certainly, the clipped-at-the-nape-line mode looks pretty dodoish. One advantage of the long bob is that you're not always running to the beauty shop to get the scolding locks at the rear permanented. And isn't the word "permanent" a good joke? You get two or three of them a year, as a rule.

The long bob is romantic and youthful. You can tie a ribbon around your head, let the ends fly and that's all there is to it. Or you can even do without the ribbon. There is one qualification; the ends must be beautifully ringleted, showing no lank locks.

The elongated style calls for the youthful, oval face. If the face is round, and the birthdays are in the late twenties, we favor rolls along the nape line, a more dignified arrangement.

The semi-pompadour continues to be a popular favorite, even the children are wearing it. Neat as a pin, it gives height and thinning lines to a too chubby face. And ears stay out in the open.

Coiffures in the last five or six years have been in a state of evolution, one style swinging into changes here and there that brought along a new mode. But there's been no revolutionary changes.

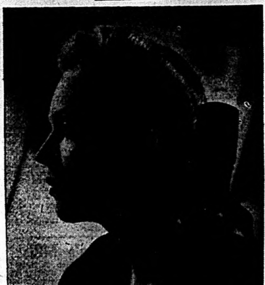
White henna, which hasn't got a bit of henna in it ,can be used for bleaching superfluous hair.

Take two heaping teaspoonfuls of powdered magnesium carbonate, pour in enough peroxide (Vol. 17) to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream and add two drops of ammonia. Two drops, I said. Use more and you may irritate the skin. Mix the ammonia in well.

Apply over the hairy growth with a silver table knife. Remove a little in fifteen minutes to see if the hairs have whitened. If they haven't, let it remain on longer. Wash the pack off with tepid water.

The Charm of Silvered Hair



By HELEN FOLLETT

Women with salt and pepper hair do a great deal of complaining about it. Oftimes such a topmop carries charming lights and shadows, and is extremely becoming. The poor dears explain that they don't want to be a betwixt-and-between; they would be dark of locks or they would be white.

When hair of this kind is dyed, the work should be done by an expert, as it is difficult to acquire an even shade. Home applications are likely to be disappointing, though if there are just a few white threads at the temples, they can be touched up. It's getting at the rear locks that is the difficulty.

To whiten the dark threads is next to impossible. Any application strong enough to bleach to whiteness is strong enough to impair the health of the shafts. White henna—which does not contain henna, by the way—creates a white gold but must be used with the greatest discrimination because of the danger of over-bleaching.

One who dyes or bleaches must face the beauty music; be prepared to have frequent touch-ups so that the new growth close to the scalp won't be a give-away. Once started, you're in for it. And when you're tired of bothering with coloring agents, the transition period back to the original shade is a sore trial.

Few women carry themselves beautifully or "walk in beauty like the night." Some of them stalk along or lope. Others shuffle or slouch. Too bad. Something should be done about it.

Let them put the best foot forward, keep the backbone tall, the tummy flat, chest in normal position, head carried regally. Walking will then prove a beneficial exercise. It will send the blood streams jigging along, put pink carnation blooms in the cheeks, high lights in the eyes; zestful appetite will result. It strengthens muscles, airwashes the lungs. Correct posture makes a woman look better and feel better, in which event she will behave better and be better natured.

The Student At College Writes Home

To the young man or woman entering or returning to college this fall, let me entreat you not to forget the home folk. They want to hear from you at least once a week. They want to know about your experiences at college.

Some college youths who waste their time and their parents' money at college will devote much of the letter home to deceiving their parents, at which they may prove eminently successful for several months.

But the large majority of college sons and daughters do try to be on the square with the home folk. Some of this group write letters home that prove a great joy to their parents and a good means of education for themselves. Writing letters home can become the most valuable part of a student's education. And what can afford a better way to broaden the parent's education than to write intelligently to the son or daughter at college? Indeed, some parents read diligently in order to write meaty, interesting letters to their children away from home.

Yet the college student or parent may soon gravitate to the level of writing to each other very brief and prosaic letters.

Don't Lecture in Letters

Among the frailties of parents in writing the son or daughter at college is to forget that the youth has grown up and, therefore, to lecture and exhort him as if he were a ten-year-old. At the same time, the college youth is inclined not only to feel too old to profit at all from parental advice but also old enough to advise his parents.

An essential principle of good letter writing between parent and child at college, or away from home at work, is an atmosphere of adult to adult relationship—no lecturing, nothing childish, but as man to man. Let us parents try to emulate St. Paul and "put away childish things," when we write our grown-up son or daughter.

After all, the letters which pass between the son or daughter in their late teens or early twenties and their parents have grown out of the parent-child relationships over years and years. The contents of these letters and their tone have been accumulating since the child was born. Let mothers of infants in arms begin now to prepare for the best possible kind of letters to and from this child when he will be in his twenties.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you think that parents should cultivate the art of being gracious hosts and hostesses to the young man or woman who has a date with their daughter or son?

A. I certainly do. How very rude and barbarous some parents who otherwise are refined and cultivated can be in this role!

Home Safety Drills

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The insurance companies report that every year several thousand children are killed in street and highway accidents in the United States. Many more are injured.

Most of these children might have been saved to grow up to be happy and useful in the world, might be rollicking right now among their playmates, if only they had learned in their early years the meaning of that one short word NO.

We must not condemn the sorrowing fathers and mothers whose children have been maimed or had their little lives snuffed out in the streets. Practically all these parents tried hard to keep their children safe. Some of them wore themselves almost to distraction trying to train their children to keep out of the street and to cross it cautiously. Some of the children, moreover, who were killed had been well-trained in safety, yet were victims of the carelessness and cruelty of other people.

Never Learned Obedience

Nevertheless, most of the children who are killed or crippled in the street had never learned the alphabet of inhibition. Either the parents were not able to teach these children to mind, by means of sensible discipline, or supposed they should not restrain these children by means of physical pain. Many parents, indeed, whose children have been run down in the street had supposed that in order to be modern they should be able to keep these children from the street solely by reasoning with them and persuading them. Well, they have been so advised by most child experts, alas. Who, therefore, probably slew these children?

As I see it, the safest, sanest, simplest way to train the child not to run into the street is to begin with the baby as soon as he begins to walk. Go with the toddler to the curb. Have him take along a cart, wagon or other plaything. Be right by his side. If no truck or car is coming, let him step into the street. Then the moment he does, punish him right then and there. Hope that he will turn to enjoy his playthings.

Punishment For Protection

Being always close to him, let him choose whether to step again into the street or not, if no car is coming. Don't intercept him, don't pull him back, don't shout at him. Let him step down. Then if he is not being careful—punish him. By and by stepping off the curb will itself become associated with being punished and the child will choose automatically to keep himself from the street, permanently, whether you are there or a thousand miles away. But be very sure that you or a fit substitute is on hand over enough days to establish inevitable punishment — association with stepping into the street. Followed literally, this works and saves lives. Aren't our little children worth keeping whole and alive?

Solving Parent Problems

Q. When is the best time to prevent the habit of abusive language in the child?

A. When the child is very young. The first time your tot calls you or any one else in your presence an ugly name, regardless of the name, tell him just once he must never do so again. Then, without further warning, punish him if he does it again. Nip this nuisance in the bud, it is very serious.

Q. What of the young child who swears or utters other naughty words as mere exclamations, but not at any one.

A. While not very serious, it is unconventional. Quietly inform the child that such words are not used in your family. Almost surely these words will disappear. If they persist after your long patient efforts at persuasion, assign an effective penalty and enforce it without fail.

Q. What do you think of the parent who will peek into the daughter's diary, read the son's or daughter's letters, or go through the pockets even of a tot?

A. I think they have an unfortunate attitude toward the child and an unwholesome relationship with him. Such transgressions by a parent are to be severely condemned.

Rules for a 'Mad Hatter'

Maureen O'Sullivan — Soft and appealing chapeaus for her.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Are you a mad hatter? Must you just so often go on a wild bonnet binge? Are you happiest when you fare forth with a new chapeau atop your noble brow? There are millions like you. Hats, no matter how cuckoo the styles may be, are the most interesting details of the sartorial composition.

There are a few rules concerning hat choosing that one might as well keep in mind. The off-the-face halo is no help to the lady who has seen her best birthdays and who is wrestling with wrinkles; the brimmed effect will cast a shadow, and be much more flattering. The femme with the full moon countenance makes a mistake when she sports a muffin or a pancake shape over one eye; she needs a crown to give length to her face.

The flat crowned, wide brimmed model belongs with the long bob, loses character if the hair is cut too short. The girl with the long face, and long thin nose should never wear a chapeaux that is pointed in front, nor should she wear one with a steeple crown which makes her face look more elongated.

Turbans of soft materials are becoming to nearly all types, young and old, plump and skinny.

Hats of extreme style can be carried with good effect only by women of fashion who are several steps ahead of the beauty parade.

Chores For Children

I don't think too much stress can be laid on the necessity of cultivating the habit of work in the growing child. No person becomes a worker naturally. The child who grows up without any training in this respect is unfortunate, and its parents and elders have neglected a prime duty.

Although we have supposed that the Dionne Quintuplets were going to grow up to be wealthy, we have not neglected their training in the work habit. No child, regardless of circumstances, should be brought up as a drone.

For example, making their own beds is one of the chores they have been taught to do willingly and cheerfully.

At six and a half, the Quins' age, sweeping, dusting and dish-drying are easy enough. Bed-making is more strenuous, requiring more strength and stature than normal children of their age possess, and we would not ordinarily have assigned this chore to them. However, the children themselves started doing the job. And neatly, too. We insist that all their work be thorough. No half-hearted efforts are counted. That, by the way, is obviously very important in child-training: Seeing that the child completes every job to the best of its ability.

I think it was Yvonne who made the first try at bed-making. One day the nurse went through the girl bedroom to find that young girl busily trying to make up her bed, and praised her. When the other four children heard this, they were encouraged to try a hand at it, too.

Cecile caught on to it the quickest. After a few attempts, she did a pretty creditable job. Emilie seemed to think bedmaking should be a race: that the first Quin finished was the best. Consequently, her bed when she was through with her first effort, looked even worse than it had when she started. The nurses saw to it that she did the work over again, and properly. Not daunted, she was as willing as the others to make beds again the next morning and to do the work to the strictest detail.

Each child has a heavy blanket in her own color and with her own name embroidered on it. These are folded on top of the bed in such a way that each name is quite visible. Learning to fold the blankets so the name would come out on the right place was quite a job, and the youngsters worked at it a long, long time before they mastered it.

In one of her early tries, Marie got it folded so the name showed, but she had the blanket inside out and so the name was backwards. This tickled the children. Of course, Emilie had to say something about this. She remarked:

"Marie must have made her bed standing on her head. She's upside down."

By the way, we always exercised great care with our bedclothes and mattresses. We try to see that they are kept clean and sterile. Mattresses, in particular, after they have been used for some time, can harbor a great many disease germs, especially if there has been sickness about the place. Now is a good time to have your children's mattress and bed clothes cleaned and sterilized for winter.

BABY BANKNOTES DUE AT CHRISTMAS

First Time Five Shillings Will be Available for Currency

London, Oct. 22—(CP) — Baby banknotes in the amounts of five shillings (about $1.10), a half crown (about 60 cents) and two shillings are being prepared by the Bank of England for issue during the Christmas season, it was reported today.

The smallest note now in use is 10 shillings.

The financial editor of the Daily Herald said the new notes would be issued "for the convenience of the public and to preserve proper balance between notes and coin" and "would not imply any inflation of currency."

FOOD POSITION MUCH IMPROVED

Minister of Agriculture States Rigid Economy is Still Necessary in England

London Oct. 22—(CP)—R. S. Hudson, Minister of Agriculture, told the House of Commons today that Britain's food position had been rapidly improving and that British agriculture is "in a well balanced condition to meet the demands which the next year's campaign will make."

Total production of foodstuffs and reserves of meat on the hoof have been materially increased, he declared.

The minister, nevertheless, said a rigid economy is necessary because "I cannot foretell the shipping position this winter."

Four Members of Davies' Bomb Squad Given Nine Months

London, Oct. 22—(CP)—Remarking "I am awfully sorry," a police magistrate sentenced four members of Capt. Robert Davies' bomb disposal service to nine months at hard labor today for looting.

The magistrate said it was up to Home Secretary Herbert Morrison to decide whether it is in the public interest to recommend that royal clemency be extended.

Capt. Davies, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont. who directed a "suicide squad" which removed a delayed action bomb from the vicinity of St. Paul's Cathedral, stood their bail last week.

River Emergency Patrol of England Has Dangerous Work on the Thames

By HUGH WAGNON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 22 (AP)—A new branch of the Royal Navy, the unsung heroes of the River Emergency Patrol, guards by day and night the Thames Highway to London.

For the most part civilians three months ago, the members of the River Patrol today are part of His Majesty's Navy and their job includes spotting air-borne invaders.

Going on an all-night trip with one of the patrols, we were a little shaken when we reached the boat. Overhead droned the night's first wave of Nazi raiders. Behind us already fires glowed red against the sky.

Across the Thames smoke billowed from behind a historic public building. Before us lay the river shimmering under the moon.

Twice en route to the pier, I had to flatten myself against the nearest wall when bombs crashed. A little girl ran wildly down the street and took her place beside me as a big one screamed down. A dozen firemen were huddled together under an arch. One hates to be alone in an air raid.

On the patrol boat the atmosphere was not so tense, despite the steady bombing and the anti-aircraft barrage. A smiling young lieutenant-commander produced hot coffee as we made ready to shove off and chatted easily about the work of his force.

"Any enemy attempting to come up the river would get a very warm reception," he said.

The boat was in motion when a German plane dropped four parachute flares over on our right. One, unopened, plummeted to earth but the others floated lazily in the bright moonlight. Gunfire was directed on them immediately, tracer bullets strung across the sky like Roman candles.

The gunner on our boat brought down two of the flares and the third also collapsed before it could well light the target for the raider above.

"There's a bit of action for you," the Commander said. "Not bad shooting when you remember that these fellows were civilians three months ago."

Highway Construction Suggested By McQuesten as Means to Employ Demobilized Men at End of War

Quebec, Oct. 22.— (CP)—Highway construction as a means of employing men demobilized at the end of the war was suggested today by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, before the convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association.

Addressing more than 400 delegates at the 25th annual convention Mr. McQuesten, Good Roads President, suggested that the Association set up a committee to discuss the question with Provincial Highway Departments and to perfect a program.

As the means of financing the project he proposed that joint contributions be made by the Dominion Government and each Provincial government to the total cost of the program, to cover a fixed period of years necessary to provide for completed highways.

The provincial contributions should include monies from municipalities toward construction and maintenance of such types of roads as suited their needs. The project said Mr. McQuesten, should be regarded as a national one and a common method of construction should be used.

Expend $120,000,000 Annually

He suggested an expenditure of $120,000,000 a year for three years at least was a reasonable and practicable method of providing a safeguard against the rigors of demobilization. The money should be spent on the basis of letting all work by contract and requiring the use of labor-saving machinery.

Envisaging the program as giving work to 150,000 men a year, Mr. McQuesten said, "I know of no other employment which offers as wide a scope in the variety of the services required of the employees".

Mr. McQuesten told the delegates "the element of uncertainty which may bring a speedy end to the war is great, and for that reason we should be prepared at the earliest possible date for any eventuality.

"I know in Ontario unfinished work and the initiation and completion of new work could easily occupy with profit a period of more than five years. Such a period would be necessary for demobilization. This would not be more time than would suffice to complete the paving of roads which are ready for paving and the improvement and extension of existing roads throughout the province to meet the present demand for highway accommodation".

An amount equal to $40,000,000 a year, said Mr. McQuesten, could be spent for five years in Ontario without overbuilding. "And I believe that perhaps double that amount could quite easily be spent in all the other provinces combined to bring their way development to a condition which would not be more than even with their respective needs."

Referring to tourist trade, Mr. McQuesten said that the natural curiosity to explore new territory would bring into any province considerable traffic "if only the highway conditions in that province are reasonably in accord with conditions in the United States." He described highway development below that standard as "wasted money."

According to custom the Governor-General made no statement but it is understood that his visit was most satisfactory and pleasant in every way.

STOREKEEPER GOES ON TRIAL ON MURDER COUNT

James Crawford Charged With Shooting Amber Carter Last February

MAN IDENTIFIED

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 22—(CP)—James Crawford, 41-year-old Prospect Hill general store merchant and gasoline station operator went on trial for murder today before a Fall Assizes jury in Supreme Court presided over by Hon. Mr. Justice J. C. Makins.

Crawford is charged with the shotgun shooting of Amber Carter, 39-year-old Blanshard Township farmer and cattle buyer last February.

A Grand Jury yesterday brought in a true bill against Crawford and today selection of the petit jury of 12 men was completed in half an hour.

Witnesses identified photographs of the Carter home where the shooting occurred and also a blue print of the farm property.

Testifies He Recognized Accused

Chief Crown witness at this morning's session was James McWilliam, uncle of Carter who said he recognized Crawford as the man who held a double-barrelled shotgun and fired two shots in quick succession at Carter as he stepped from his car which was parked at the rear of the house. Identification of Crawford was aided by illumination from an out-door light on a pole at the rear of the Carter home, witness said.

In cross examination by Defence Counsel Meyer Lerner of London, McWilliam said he had heard stories about relations between Carter and Crawford's wife, but he could not remember who had told him and "I didn't believe them."

Case Outlined to Jury

W. B. Common, K.C., of the Attorney General's Department, Toronto, assisting Crown Attorney W. E. Goodwin, K.C., in prosecuting the case outlined the Crown's case to the jury. He said the Crown alleges Crawford waited in a driveshed at the rear of the Carter home and then shot Carter when he arrived home about 10.30 the night of Feb. 29.

Dr. T. J. McInnis of St. Mary's called to the Carter home after the shooting, described the shotgun wounds in the chest and thigh.

He said the wounds, as well as shock and hemorrhage caused the death. He made a closer examination of the body later when he attended the autopsy conducted by Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Attorney-General's Department.

RALSTON VISITS CORNWALL CAMP

Defence Minister Inspects Men While at Their Daily Tasks

(By Frank Flaherty Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston inspected the military training centre here today and saw 750 young recruits go through their training routine. He also watched the progress through Cornwall of troops returning to Petawawa camp after week-end military manoeuvres in the Montreal district.

Although only on their second week of their 30-day training period the young recruits impressed the Minister with their smartness in drill. On his arrival the square in front of the newly erected training centre buildings was filled with men in battle dress.

The three companes into which the centre is organized were busy at their morning drill and physical training. One company was doing physical training, another bayonet drill and the third rifle drill.

True Bill Returned By Grand Jury

Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP)—The Grand Jury sitting at the Supreme Court Assizes here today returned a true bill against James Wallace, member of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, Ont., charged with manslaughter in connection with a highway accident near here during the summer.

Wallace was charged after the accident in which two nurses, Edith Boyle and Elizabeth Shepherd, suffered fatal injuries. They were passengers in a car driven by Wallace which collided with a truck.

Concrete Casings For German Bombs Now Being Used

London, Oct. 22—(CP)—Reuters News Agency quoted the Moscow radio today as saying the Nazi Air Force is using concrete casings for its bombs instead of metal and also using gasoline bombs to replace more expensive incendiaries.

"The vast expenditure in metal in air bombing has induced Germany to look for substitutes and concrete has been found to be a suitable material," the announcer was quoted as saying.

Unwired Bulbs Are Lighted By Electrical Apparatus

New York, Oct. 22.—Neither snow, nor sleet, nor wind will be able to break down the power lines of the future because those "lines" will be electrical waves passing through the air, if the possibilities of a new type power generator demonstrated by Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. are realized.

One hundred scientists and educators, attending the Conference on Illumination and Electronics at Westinghouse's Bloomfield, N.J., laboratories, witnessed the demonstration. As spectators held unwired flashlight bulbs in their hands, Westinghouse engineers caused the bulbs to light merely by directing a "beam" of power at them.

Possible future uses of the new apparatus, it was explained, include employment to increase greatly the number of television transmission channels, or the number of messages transmitted simultaneously over a telephone wire. It has potential value in producing heat for medical purposes by ultra shortwave. Another logical use, it was stated, is as an improved means for aircraft navigation.

Homes may be illuminated some day by power picked up from the air as radio programs are now received. The list of possible uses Westinghouse engineers said, seems limited only by imagination and by the instrument's relative efficiency as compared with existing methods of transmitting electric power.

The device originated about two years ago in the laboratories of Stanford University. A few months ago work on it moved into the research laboratories of Westinghouse at Bloomfield and East Pittsburgh by arrangement with the Sperry Gyroscope Co., designated by the university to promote practical and commercial use of the new instrument.

Defence Counsel Seeks to Establish Manner Declarations Were Obtained

Clarence Hebert on Trial Charged With Murder of Former Guelph Girl

REPORT AWAITED

Sweetsburg, Que., Oct. 22 (CP)—Defence counsel sought today to establish the manner in which reported declarations were obtained from Clarence Hebert, 27, of St. Albans, Vt., on trial here charged with the murder of his wife, the former Phyllis Upton, 25, of Guelph, Ont.

The trial continued today as for the last week with the jury absent from the courtroom while the judge heard argument on the advisability of admitting the alleged declarations as evidence. Meanwhile, the court awaited the report of Dr. Adrien Plouffe, Montreal alienist who came here yesterday to conduct a mental examination of Hebert.

Gerald Brodeur, Granby, Que., merchant, was the principal witness at today's hearing. He testified he rented a part of his establishment to the Provincial Police Department last December and reported having overheard a noisy conversation in the room occupied by police.

Mrs. Hebert's body was found, partly burned, near Granby last December.

Defence Counsel has engaged the services of Hon. L. A. Giroux, member of the Quebec Legislative Council, for the balance of the trial.

HIGHWAYS TO FIT INTO LANDSCAPE

Roads of Tomorrow Discussed by Ontario Deputy Minister

Quebec, Oct. 22—(CP)—A paper envisaging the "highways of tomorrow" was read today by R. M. Smith, Ontario Deputy Minister of Highways, at the 25th annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Convention.

"The highways of tomorrow will be fitted into the landscape and will be constructed to flowing lines under proper engineering supervision," said Mr. Smith, addressing delegates at the first session of the three-day meeting.

"Widths of right-of-way will not be meagre but sufficient to allow for flat shallow ditches, and a space for roadside improvement. Subgrade waters will be taken care of by storm sewers and tiling. Roadside embellishment will be encouraged rather than criticized as needless expenditure."

Noting that more than 80 per cent. of traffic accommodates itself on 20 per cent. of road mileage, Mr. Smith discussed the problem of how the 20 per cent. of mileage should be divided

Super-Highways

In Ontario, he said, two per cent would be super-highways crossing the province from east to west and from north to south. These would be of the divided type, suitable for four lanes of traffic and would by-pass community centres, although having access to them.

Another two per cent. would be express highways of two or three lanes which would act as tributaries to the super-highways. They would be built to a considerably higher standard than local and service roads, permitting rapid movement over great distances and missing densely-settled areas. They would, however have convenient exits and entrances to populated centres.

The remaining 16 per cent of highways, said Mr. Smith, would be local and service roads, joining towns and cities, providing market roads and developing suburban areas.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 22—(AP)—The guard around a German "refugee camp" in the heart of the city was tripled today by Yugoslav police. German sources declared they had "learned the British Secret Service is planning an attempt to destroy the camp."

MILITARY DECISION NEEDED TO WIN WAR—LORD CROFT

'That is Why We Are Building Up Great Army and it Must be Army of Superior Efficiency'

London, Oct. 22—(CP) — Lord Croft, Under Secretary for War, declared in a speech today that Britain looks forward to undertaking a land offensive in some theatre and added "The war can never be won without a military decision, east or west or on both fronts."

"That is why we are building up a great army," he added. "It must be an army of superior efficiency."

Speaking to a group of film industrialists, Lord Croft said the government plans to use motion pictures extensively to show British soldiers "the weak points in the animal against whom they have to fight."

An authorized spokesman made a statement earlier today foreshadowing an increased use of air power in land operations, apparently referring to expected large-scale fighting in the near east.

URGES OFFENSIVE-DEFENSIVE POLICY

Captain B. H. Liddell Hart in Letter Blames 'Muddled Thinking' Before and During War

London, Oct. 22.—(CP)—Capt. B. H. Liddell Hart, military historian, today charged "muddled thinking" both before and during the war and said Britain had "played repeatedly into Hitler's hands".

In a letter to the Manchester Guardian, he said that as a matter of "practical necessity" Britain should pursue an "offensive-defensive" strategy, and said that her policy of a waiting war had gone wrong because:—

1.—France left the Belgian frontier without a Maginot Line.

2.—"Our government took a sudden decision to guarantee Poland and Rumania without first securing the assistance of Russia—the maddest reversal of a policy of appeasement and retreat that could ever have been conceived".

Having thus got themselves into a hole, Capt. Liddell Hart said, the Allies, "could think of nothing better than to get in deeper".

"Through the first winter of the war they boasted of coming victory without any sign they had attempted to calculate the means or chances.

"By giving the public an exaggerated impression of our capacity to take the offensive they inevitably fostered impatience with their own initial policy of restraint and were thus propelled toward greater recklessness. This was shown in a foolish desire to open up . the war . . . ."

British Admiralty Denies Nazi Claim

Berlin, Oct. 22 (AP)—The German News Agency claimed anew today that one of the British cruisers which fought a German destroyer unit last Thursday was torpedoed and so badly damaged that it would probably be out of action "for a long time."

The Agency claimed it had learned the cruiser listed sharply and had to be towed into port.

(The British Admiralty said last week that "no damage in fact was sustained by any of our ships" in the encounter, which occurred 100 miles southwest of Land's End.)

Queens Students Battle on Eve Of An Election

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP)—Several students suffered bruises and damage was done to the arts building at Queen's University today when arts and science students clashed as they left morning classes.

Taking refuge in their own building, the arts students were bombarded with tomatoes, rotten eggs and flour sack bombs by the science men who took the offensive. Windows were broken and students inside were showered with broken glass. It was reported that at one stage of the battle a pop bottle and pieces of broken glass were used as ammunition.

The fracas was a prelude to the annual election of officers of the Alma Mater Society tomorrow. The society is the university's student governing body and two candidates each from the art, science and medical faculties and from the Levana Society are contesting the four executive positions.

During the height of the fight today, charging science students rushed the arts building and captured several prisoners who were carried out to the campus and divested of part of their clothing.

The battle finally was halted when Principal R. C. Wallace was called to the scene.

"A disgraceful performance," he commented. "It is the worst possible way to win an election."

SENTENCED TO DIE

Gordon Ross Mathew, 21-year-old Toronto baker, was sentenced to hang on Jan. 23 for the murder of his wife by Mr. Justice Hope at Brampton, Ont. The body of Mrs. Mathew was found at the edge of Erindale pond on July 11.

British Communique

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—The Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security issued the following statement Tuesday night:—

"Enemy attacks on this country today have been on a very small scale. This morning a few sporadic raids were made by single enemy aircraft on several towns on the southeast coast where some damage was done.

"In two towns houses were demolished and a few people were killed or injured.

"This afternoon a force of enemy aircraft crossed the coast near Dungeness. They were promptly intercepted by strong forces of our fighters and were unable to penetrate to the London area. Reports so far received show that in this attack very little damage was done, though a few bombs were dropped on a southeast town."

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Oct. 22 —(AP)— Text of Tuesday's German High Command communique

"In the course of Oct. 21, fighting units bomb-raided London and other important points in middle and south England. Numerous new blazes resulted in London. In airplane works in Leyland, north of Liverpool, and in two other armament works, important assembly plants and machine warehouses were destroyed.

"Hits were scored on troop concentrations and airports and resulted in destruction of barracks and planes on the ground. Further effective attacks were directed against several warehouses and port facilities.

"During an assault on a convoy off the east coast of England, a 3,000-ton merchantman suffered such a heavy hit amidships that its loss is assumed.

"During last night, retaliatory flights against London and attacks on other cities of Great Britain continued. Fires and explosions were observed in military important objectives in Birmingham, Coventry and Liverpool.

"Mining of British harbors continued uninterrupted. Naval artillery again fired upon Dover.

"As previously reported, several English speedboats fired on a patrol boat with machine-guns. The patrol boat replied, supported by naval coastal batteries. One enemy speedboat was sunk, and the others were turned away.

(No comment on this claim has been made by the British Admiralty.)

"During the night some enemy planes flew over Germany and dropped some bombs without causing military damage.

(The naval dockyard at Hamburg, an oil plant at Rishols, a railway yard at Dusseldorf and an airdrome at Stade were among objectives attacked by the R.A.F. during the night.)

"The opponent lost two planes yesterday, one of which was shot down by anti-aircraft fire. Two German planes are missing."

Fine Tribute Paid To British People By Ciano Says Times

New York, Oct. 22 (CP)—The New York Times today said that Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, had given the British people "one of the finest tributes that has been paid them since the war began."

The tribute, it said in an editorial, was published in Ciano's newspaper, Telegrafo of Leghorn, which asked: "Is it really true that 47,000,000 Britons are 47,000,000 Churchills, all determined to die under the ruins of the British Empire rather than give in?"

LORD LOTHIAN RECEIVED

London, Oct. 22—(CP) — The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, who arrived in Britain Sunday for a brief holiday and to report on conditions in the United States, was received by the King this afternoon. Prime Minister Winston Churchill lunched earlier with the King.

'Little Hercules' of Canadiens, Tony Demers, Has Ambition to Become One of Hockey's Greats Making His Second Jump to Pro Ranks After Breaking Leg in First Try

HAS BLAZING SHOT

Already Has Scored Two Goals and Dick Irvin is High on His Chances

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Oct. 22 (CP)—The best way to describe Tony Demers, the "Little Hercules" of Montreal Canadiens, is to say that he would rather play hockey than eat. If ambition meant everything, then the stocky French-Canadian would be certain of a place on the team.

Tony, who looks like the "after" picture of a muscle-building advertisement, is making his second jump from amateur to N.H.L. ranks. He missed up on the first when a broken leg marred his first season but he's back for another try after two years with the amateurs.

"It isn't the money, because a fellow can do pretty well in the amateur ranks these days," the 23-year-old Demers described his ambition at the Canadiens' St. Hyacinthe training camp. "It's just that ever since I was a kid I wanted to play—with the pros. When they gave me another chance, I snatched at it."

The bulging muscles that help him pack 180 pounds in his five-foot seven-inch frame have given Demers one of his best assets. It's a blazing shot that Coach Dick Irvin compares with that of Charlie Conacher, whom he coached on the famous "kid line" of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Rookie in Experience

Although trying for his second appearance in the N.H.L., Demers is a rookie in point of experience and years at the St. Hyacinthe camp. He played with the Canadiens in their opening exhibition match Sunday, however, and scored one of the goals in the 5-2 victory over New Haven of the American League.

The shot that did it was one of his typical blasts from right wing that played the main part in getting him his first chance with the Canadiens from Montreal amateur ranks three years ago. He broke his leg in the first practice that season, however, and appeared only briefly in games toward the end of the season.

Reinstated as an amateur the next season, he played with Lachine Rapides and Valleyfield Braves in Quebec's Provincial Senior hockey league. Both years he was high in the League's scoring lists and was signed by the Canadiens in their futile bid for a play-off berth at the end of last season.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By the Canadian Press)

Poker is a thing of the past at the St. Hyacinthe, Que., training camp of Montreal Canadiens now that Dick Irvin is in charge, but the new coach doesn't mind the players betting on certain things.

For instance, the players have made up three teams for a softball round-robin series with each man chipping in a dollar and the winning team to get the "take".

The series is still in the infant stage, with the first game the other day ending in a 2-2 draw.

Another American-born goalie may get a chance in the National Hockey League. Reports from Hibbing, Minn., where Chicago Black Hawks are in training, say that Sam Lo Presti, a newcomer is making a great bid to wrest the netminding job from Paul Goodman. Lo Presti comes from Eveleth, Minn., the same town that gave Frankie Brimsek to Boston Bruins and Mike Karakas to Chicago. In fact, Lo Presti, Karakas and Brimsel all lived within a block of each other. Karakas was replaced early last season in the Chicago nets by Goodman.

Happy Day, the coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, has been going around camp at St. Catharines, Ont., with a look on his face that belies his nickname. It isn't that Day has any real worries. He says that is just the reverse—that everything is going too well with the club and he is afraid that it is just the calm before the storm.

Said Day: "Things are going too good altogether and I don't like it. There isnt a single complaint in the camp, not a crab has reached my ears and it is the first training season in my memory that something has not come about to kick over. I'm keeping my fingers crossed."

Montreal Canadiens are seeking permission from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to sign two players of junior age trying out at the St. Hyacinthe training camp. The juniors are Ken Reardon of Edmonton and Johnny Quilty of Ottawa, both 19 and stamped by Coach Dick Irvin as definite "comers." The C.A.H.A. must give permission before juniors can be signed by National Hockey League Clubs.

Detroit Red Wings have broken camp officially. Manager Jack Adams put his stamp of approval on the club's personnel and farm club players as the "best looking crowd of players I have ever seen assembled." The Wings and members of two of the farm clubs, Omaha and Indianapolis, have been training at Detroit. Last night the Omaha team left camp while the Wings and Indianapolis are due to continue their exhibition series. The first game of the series, on Sunday night, ended in a 5-3 victory for Detroit.

CONN MATCHED WITH L. SAVOLD FOR NOVEMBER 29

First Fight for Mike Jacobs Who is trying to Find Opponent for Louis

JOE WANTS ACTION

Lou Nova Will be Given Chance to Show Wares Against Topnotcher

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 22—(AP)—Joe Louis' howls for action and the clamor of the rest of the heavyweight brigade for recognition finally has "surrounded" Mike Jacobs.

"Uncle Mike" is settling down to the winter business of ironing out the mix-up among the big boys, looking to the possibility of uncovering a target for the Bomber along about mid-January. In matching Billy Conn and Lee Savold for Madison Square Garden Nov. 29, Promoter Mike took the first step in this campaign.

From the way Jacobs outlined the set-up in announcing that 15-round shindig yesterday, it's going to be "every man for himself and no holds barred" where the heavyweights are concerned. In addition to the Pittsburgh pretty boy and the Des Moines mauler, Mike also is planning on giving Lou Nova and Red Burman a chance to show during the winter how they would stand with Louis, and is looking for a match for Buddy Baer to while away his time while brother Maxie is going through his gags and patter in his forthcoming Broadway show.

Program Outlined

As matters now stand, the program may shape up something like this:

1. Conn vs. Savold, Nov. 29 in what is Billy's fifth start in the heavyweight department. Savold is definitely the fastest puncher Billy has met up with, and he's riding along right now on a streak of five straight knockouts.

2. Nova will show in the Garden in December and, if you listen to Manager Ray Carlin beat the drums, he's lots bigger and stronger than when he stopped Max Baer about 17 months ago, as well as healthier than when Tony Galento did that thing to him a year back.

3. Red Burman might have been tossed in with Conn, but Billy's pilot, Johnny Ray, is peeved at the way Red's boss, Max Waxman, has been sending open letters and such like around, claiming the Pittsburger is giving Burman the brush-off. As a result, Ray turned thumbs down on Burman and Mike now may match Burman and Buddy Baer, possibly in Washington, with Red getting Conn later if he takes care of Buddy in the approved manner.

Pembroke Butcher Claims "Proposition" By Mess Sergeant

Pembroke, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP) — Magistrate T. M. J. Galligan Monday reserved decision for one week at the conclusion of evidence in the trial of John Walton, Pembroke butcher charged with receiving provisions stolen from Petawawa military camp.

Walton was on the stand most of the day testifying in his own defence. He told the court the mess Sergeant for all the camp messes came to him with a "proposition" early last June. Walton said the mess Sergeant told him there was a surplus of rations at the camp and he wanted to exchange this surplus for commodities that were not rationed in order to give the troops a better variety of food.

Accused said the mess Sergeant told him he had the permission of his senior officer to make the "trade."

Earlier in the trial witnesses testified an army truck was used in the exchange of goods.

Monday, Thomas Mulcahy, Walton's counsel, said in summing up the defence evidence that "there is something behind all this, and where it lies we will not know in this court."

"I suggest," he said "that some officer knew it was going on. It would be very difficult for any soldier to leave the military camp with an army truck without the permission of someone of higher rank than a Sergeant. I think there was permission given by an officer."

Mulcahy contended Walton gave more value than he received in the trade of provisions, and that there was no evidence to show he knew the goods had been stolen.

Last Tuesday, three of four soldiers charged with theft of the provisions were convicted. The charge against the fourth soldier was dismissed.

'BUNNY' DUNLOP DEFEATS PAVICH IN MAIN BOUT

Erstwhile Badman of Local Wrestling Wins Last Two Falls of Bout

ALLEN A WINNER

Former Amateur Champion Puts on Swell Show With Joe Sishorn

Al "Bunny" Dunlop, the former Cleveland rubberman and erstwhile badman of local wrestling circles, returned to the Hume Arena to gladden the hearts of the local grappling clientelle by soundly beating George Pavich, the villainous Greek grappler, who has ruled the local wrestling roost much too long. However, Dunlop absorbed Pavich's most ferocious attacks and then gave the Sudbury native a lesson in the art of pugnacious attacks, as Dunlop came back after losing the first fall to win the next two decisions in a best-in-three falls in the main scrap.

Semi-Final Bout Stands Out

Although the patrons shivered and all but froze in the near-Arctic temperature to be satisfied with their lot, when Dunlop soundly beat Pavich, the bout that stood out as the feature of the night was the semi-final fixture, that saw Jimmie Allen, the former Canadian amateur champion, take two straight falls over Joe Sishorn, the Prairie Provinces' title-holder. Both Allen and Sishorn proved fast, agile grapplers and throughout their 38 minutes in the squared circle there wasn't a dull moment as the contestants provided speed, agility and ability in the modern art of wrestling to provide a thrilling and sterling show. Allen won the first fall with a rolling tumbling hold and bounced Sishorn off the ropes to pin him with a press for a second in succession and remain undefeated in a local ring. Both men plied their ring trade in a fast orthodox manner and left the stage amid the applause of some 500 fans who stamped their approval of the contest.

Pavich Made Mistake

George Pavich, who has ruled the local wrestling realm by sheer pugnaciousness for some weeks past, made the mistake of literally pounding Al Dunlop into submission with a series of kidney punches to win the first fall of the main bout. Dunlop rested between falls and returned to the ring to administer the pugnacious Pavich some of his own medicine. Pavich openly challenged Dunlop to fisticuffs and therein resulted in his downfall. Dunlop is a pastmaster at the art of rough-house grappling and gave Pavich a sound trouncing, much to the glee and satisfaction of the patrons. Dunlop won the second fall after roughing and two hard and punishing body slams and took the third fall in a similar manner but not before he had gored and abused the so-called rough Greek in an unmerciful manner.

The opening bout saw the Masked Marvel maul around the ring with one Jerry Sovold and the "hooded gent" won two straight falls with the application of pile-driver holds and a press in a bout that failed to impress even the most ardent wrestling fan. However, what this bout failed in supplying the Allen-Sishorn scrap made up for to steal the entire show and wrestling continues at the Hume Arena next Monday.

Ross Introduces New Speed-Up To His Offensive

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 22 —(AP)—General Manager Art Ross is introducing a new speed-up to his offensive in scrimmage drills of the Boston Bruin hockey team this week.

Ross is using his defence men as wings through much of the contact work in an effort to produce more scoring punch from the rear guard. He has been working "Dit" Clapper and Jack Shewchuk with Milt Schmidt on one line and Jack Crawford and Des Smith with Bill Cowley.

Shewchuk's defensive play has shown considerable improvement and Ross believes he will be able to do much more rushing this coming season. Ross is likewise anxious to get Des Smith's power into some of the scoring plays and believes this type of scrimmage will help him.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken McColling

To go hunting without breaking some law or other nowadays it is almost next to impossible, so says a veteran nimrod residing in North Hastings. "Young feller, do you know a man has to have about a dozen licences, credentials or other official certificates before he dast go into the woods ahuntin' nowadays?" asked our friend from way up north as he added to be found in the woods without these credentials might result in the party being tossed into some backwoods lockup and spending most of their holiday trying to convince the Magistrate he had merely forgotten his documents. Actually a hunter this year should carry a special brief case just to take care of his numerous licences and other certificate credentials.

First, and no doubt the most important, the hunters must carry their national registration cards; or else.

Second, if he owns an automobile he must have in his possession his owner's licence and operator's card, if he drives into the hunting fields, as do most hunters these days. It's a violation of the H.T.A. not to carry these credentials.

Thirdly, he must register his guns, following which he must procure a licence to carry such weapons, and if he obtains the loan of an extra gun, then a special permit for the borrowing is on the statutes.

Fourth, naturally the hunter hopes to bag an antlered giant of the forest so therefore he must have a deer licence. If he hauls along a couple of Beagles to track down the deer, a licence to use hunting dogs must be procured. If perchance he has the opportunity of shooting pheasant, during open season a licence must be specially procured for this privilege also.

Next, of course there is the matter of entertainment to be considered and if the hunter wishes to take along a little stimulant, for medicinal purposes, snake bites or general purposes, here again a licence is needed, as is authority to transport the "giggle juice" from his dwelling to the hunting lodge. In this present day and age a radio is practically a necessity, with all the war news, etc. being in the public's mind. If a portable radio is taken to the hunter's camp, a licence must be purchased for this extra entertainment also and there's an even dozen little pieces of paper, which we've taken care of and which the average hunter might be called upon to possess and goodness knows how many we've overlooked.

A hunter could go after deer or moose with a minimum of four licences, provided he hitch-hiked to the woodlands, chased the deer afoot, drank Adam's ale only and played a jews-harp for entertainment.

Now let's tabulate the cost of such certificates and licences thereof. The car and driver's licence should run about $12.00, gun licence a buck, deer licence $4, dog licence $2, pheasant licence $2, radio licence $2.50 and liquor permit $2.00, but there is the consolation that the personal national registration, national gun registration and authority to carry a gun are absolutely free.

When the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" (Trenton) won the Intermediate "B" championship of the O.A.S.A. it marked the first time in the history of provincial softball that a military nine enjoyed the distinction of winning such honors. When the Flyers brought the title to Trenton it was the first provincial softball championship to be won by a local district nine since the old Percivals won the Intermediate "A" title for Belleville back in 1935. (George Campbell please note.) Secretary Vern McIlwraight of the O.A.S.A. announced the full list of softball champions for 1940, which read as follows: Senior "A", Hamilton Proctor and Gamble; senior "B", Toronto Arlingtons; intermediate "A," Guelph Lelands; intermediate "B", Trenton R.C.A.F.; intermediate "C", Crowland Bombers; junior "A", Windsor Dayus Roofers; junior "B", Etobicoke Clements.

Do you remember when Harry Greb, former middle and lightweight world boxing champion, died at Atlantic City 14 years ago today, following a minor nose operation. Known as the Pittsburgh windmill, he whipped almost every man he met in more than 300 battles over a 13-year career during much of which he was blind in one eye.

Al Dunlop must have been quite surprised when he entered the Hume arena ring to find the local grappling patrons actually on his side of the fence and verbally encouraging him towards victory. Maybe the shock resulted in his losing the first fall to George Pavich, previous ruler of the pugnacious and villainous grappling roost. But, Bunny gladdened the hearts of all when he not only beat Pavich but practically made him say "uncle". Pavich, floundered around the ring swinging his fists at random, but without avail—Dunlop was too much of a pastmaster and out went Pavich, who had previously frightened the more frail fans out of the odd night's sleep. When it came to fast agile grappling, however, Jimmie Allen, the people's choice and ladies' favourite, all but met his equal in Joe Sishorn, in the semi-final scrap that actually stole the show from any angle or seat. We've nothing to say about the Masked Marvel—Jerry Sovold bout. It was that bad.

Sport Spice — Rules are made to be broken—first the C.A.H.A. agreed no pucksters of junior age are to be signed by the N.H.L. and yesterday the "shamateur" moguls gave Red Dutton permission to sign Vic Lofvendahl, a Winnipeg lad of less than 20.... Bill Calladine, of Peterboro, caught on with the Philadelphia Ramblers, a New York Ranger farm team....Calladine was one of 13 players selected from the large Ranger hockey school.... 'Tis rumoured that Lew Hayman is anything but satisfied with the efforts of some of his Arnonauts thus far this season....Red Wing Jack Adams opened his verbal barrage early this year to say—"The Wings are the best I've seen in years," unquote....We've heard that song from Pudgy Jawn so long that the hockey training season wouldn't be complete without it....Jimmy Ripple, who was one of the world series heroes only got a half share of the Reds series melon, amounting to $2,901, which ain't hay.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

FIRM'S EMPLOYEES MUST VOTE

Hamilton, N.Y., Oct. 22—(AP)—"Vote before you come to work—or don't come to work," reads the sign James Leland, Hamilton business man, has placed for all his employees to see.

"In this critical period it's our duty to prove to the rest of the world that we can make democracy work," Leland explained. "Voting on election day is one of the most important methods of proving it."

GOVERNOR-GENERAL PAYS VISIT TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Arriving at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., to be week-end guests of President Roosevelt, the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice are pictured here with U.S. Assistant Chief of Protocol George T. Summerlin. The Earl was confined indoors over the week-end with a cold and was unable to attend church services with the President and Princess Alice. The Governor-General and Princess later went to New York where they will stay for a few days

WILLIAM WENDORF, ONE OF TWINS, AGED 93, DIES AT HANOVER

Born in Mecklenburg, Germany, April 8, 1947, he came to Canada and to Hanover in 1873. He was engaged in the furniture making business for a few years, and later was in the livery business, his brother Charles conducting a rival livery stable in the other end of the town. Both retired from active business a little more than twenty years ago. In addition to his widow and his twin brother Charles he is survived by three sons, William, Dundas, and Henry and Samuel, in Hanover, and two daughters, Mrs. J. Walls, Kitchener, and Mrs. H. Hughes, Vancouver, B.C.

ACTRESS MARRIES

Hollywood, Oct. 22 (AP).—Actress June Knight and Harry Packer, drug firm official, said today they were married by a Justice of the Peace Saturday night in Yuma, Ariz. Miss Knight obtained a final decree of divorce from Lieut. Samuel A. A. Randolph, U.S.N., last Friday. Her first husband was Marvin Hart, who was killed by an unidentified gunman in 1931. Packer formerly was married to Esther Pressman, one-time Ziegfeld dancer.

BABE UNCOVERS LOOT

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 22 (AP).—The 17-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stockfeld solved this case without a hitch. The baby crawled under the porch and crawled out later clutching a package of cigarettes. Investigation revealed a cache of cigarettes, candy bars, and a case of soda pop which thieves had placed there.

SMOOTH SEA

Dover, England, Oct. 22 —(CP)—The sea in the Strait of Dover was smooth today, and visibility extended to the middle of the English Channel as the mist which has covered the strait for a week began to lift under a bright sun. There was a light north-easterly wind.

Razzle-dazzle

People who read the sport pages know what RAZZLE-DAZZLE means. It stands for football brilliance. The team that has it is flashy with unexpected passes and trick plays. A razzle-dazzle team gives the spectators plenty to yell about.

Razzle-dazzle is one of the spiciest ingredients of good football. It packs them in, and the customers go home satisfied.

Now, you might think such a satisfactory football ingredient would be a pretty nice thing to pass around to business in general. To merchants, for example. But you'll suddenly realize that razzle-dazzle is the LAST thing you want to find in a merchant you're dealing with!

Brilliant trickery is fine and dandy on the football field. But it's a different story in the marketplace. You want to dodge a razzle-dazzle merchant . . . or manufacturer . . . as you would the plague. And luckily, it's not hard to do.

Patronize those merchants and manufacturers who ADVERTISE. They're calling all their plays out in the open . . . for everybody to see. Merchants who advertise are bound to keep faith with the public . . . if they intend to remain in business.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was supose to meet ma downtown today and come home with her only they both came home at different times, both being late and pop coming in last, ma saying, Now Willyum, really, I mean really, there's no use giving me any trumped up inexcusable excuse. There I stood for a solid half hour cooling my impatient heels, and where were you? Nowhere, or at least elsewhere, she said.

Listen my deer, if you were in front of the Maritime Building you were disguized as a fat man chewing an extinct cigar, because he was the only human bean waiting there besides myself, and to quite settisfy myself on the point I asked him the time and his voice was nothing like yours, so please dont go telling me that you were that fat man, pop said, and ma said, No I wasnt', and neither were you, because you weren't there. But what, where? The Maratime Building? Why Willyum Potts I told you as clearly as the nose on your face to meet me in front of the Stitz Hotel at precisely 6 o'clock, she said.

You had the time all rite, but you didn't have the place and you most certainly didn't have the man, pop said.

Meaning him, and ma said, Now Willyum anybody can blurt out an unproveable statement.

Well here's the proof of this one, pop said. And he pulled an envelope out of his pockit, saying, Here it is right on the back where I jotted it down in telltale black and white just as you announced it over the telephone, Maritime Building, six sharp, how's that for direct evidence?

You might of realized I meant the Stitz Hotel, no matter what I said, ma said, and pop said, Maybe I might, but why might I, that's the point where my mind seems to stop working, and ma said, Because you've been married to me enough years to realize what's in my mind if you're ever going to.

Yee gods, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 22 (AP). — The stock market exhibited a little more confidence today without working itself into a real rallying fever.

Steels picked up a modest following, along with selected industrial specialties, after a hesitant opening, and gains of fractions to a point or so were fairly well spread out near the fourth hour. Dealings were a shade faster than in yesterday's moping proceedings.

Support was accorded shares of U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Wheeling Steel, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Du Pont, American Can, Public Service of N.J., Pennsylvania, Texas Corp., Anaconda, Pathe and Loew's.

Canadian stocks were steady. Distillers Seagram, Lake Shore Mines, Hiram Walker and Canadian Pacific advanced fractions. Canada 4s, in the bond market, held unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS.

Toronto, Oct. 22 (CP).—The Toronto market was lower through the early session today, with exception of the industrials and trading appeared chiefly in the medium-price and cheaper golds. Turnover was sizeable at 222,000 shares up till 1 p.m.

Gold stocks that had advanced substantially in recent sessions were under profit-taking pressure and they displayed a weaker tone. Preston backed down to 2.65 and was holding around 2.72 at early afternoon, off 10 cents from Monday's close. Aunor lost 7 cents, Kerr Addison 5 and Bidgood-Kirkland 2½.

Steep Rock, up 10 cents to 1.59, was the only strong spot in the base metal list.

Bell Telephone, Ford "A" and Distillers-Seagrams were gainers in the industrial list and in the western oils prices were down slightly for Home Oil, Anglo-Canadian and Brown Oil.

HOUDE TO SEEK

Backers Said to Have Expert Opinion

The mayor's backers were said to have obtained expert opinion there were no legal hindrances at present to his running.

With Montreal's finances now being controlled by the Quebec Municipal Commission under an Act passed at the last session of the Provincial Legislature, the position of mayor has been stripped of its power.

The mayor acts as chairman of a six-man executive committee. The new city council to be elected in December will have ninety-nine members, sixty-four more than at present. The mayor's salary is $10,000 a year.

Houde supporters announced a meeting would be held October 29 for the purpose of "offering the candidature" to the mayor. They added, however, the mayor already has expressed his intention of running.

STAINLESS STEEL

"This wartime development," says one authority, "may prove to be as complete a change as was the shift from wood-and-cloth to all-metal planes."

The new steel is thinner than the paper upon which this is printed. A strip of it hangs limply from the fingers, resembling a piece of light tinfoil. But it has a tensile strength of 185,000 pounds to the square inch.

It is three times as strong, say the steel men, as the aluminum alloy now used in airplane making, but it also is three times as heavy.

Its outstanding virtues are three:

It will not rust; it is unaffected by the degree of heat at which aluminum melts; it is twice as difficult to bend as duralumin.

Butter at Toronto One-Half Ct. Higher

Toronto, Oct. 22—Fair demand for limited offerings pushed butter 1-2 cent a pound higher in afternoon action on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Prices to the retail trade on top-grade eggs advanced.

Sellers raised prices on the butter market as sufficient local buying appeared to keep very light current receipts clearing readily. Storage stocks apparently in strong hands, were not being offered and holders of the Western make were not pressing their supplies on the market. Sales of Ontario No. 1 grade creamery solids were reported at 27 3-4 cents a pound in morning trading, but the price started to advance in afternoon dealings and it closed at 28 1-4c.

The pace slackened on the egg market when buyers turned cautious in view of recent sharp advances. Arrival of fresh receipts remained small and prices held firm. The three top grades in the retail section rose 1c a dozen.

No Evidence Nazi Subs Supplied From Eire

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Lord Snell, Deputy Leader of the House of Lords, told the Upper House today that Britain has no evidence that German submarines are being supplied from Eire, a suggestion made in the Northern Ireland Parliament last week.

In the House of Commons Viscount Cranborne, Dominions Secretary, disclosed that British and Irish leaders are discussing facilitation of the reception in Eire of mothers and children from Britain who are able to arrange for permanent accommodation there.

Blohm and Voss shipbuilding yards, it declared.

The attack on the convoy was made by a single raider which sighted the ships four miles off the French coast. The pilot counted from twelve to fifteen armed cargo ships, escorted by motor torpedo boats and travelling in two lines.

"The ships opened fire on the aircraft but the pilot succeeded in making a good steady run and dropped his bombs well in among the convoy," the ministry's bulletin said.

"Two vessels in each rank were almost lifted out of the water by bursting bombs and when the pilot turned to observe the result of his bombing, one vessel had heeled right over on its beam end."

Other planes of the same attacking force bombed barges and cargo vessels at Boulogne and hit a large tramp steamer in the outer harbor The docks at Gravelines were also attacked.

Although the weather at night was unfavorable, attacks were also made on the Hamburg naval dockyard, creating many explosions and fires.

Nazi Synthetic Oil Plant Bombed.

A synthetic oil plant at Risholz, a railway yard at Dusseldorf, an airdrome at Offekerque, near Calais. industrial objectives were also bombed, the ministry said. One British plane was lost.

After the bombing of the channel convoy, a British pilot made a "particularly daring" raid on an airdrome at Offerkerque, near Calais. In the face of strong ground fire the pilot nosed over and dived to within 200 feet before releasing his bombs which burst alongside a hangar.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer))

Britons were cheered today by their leaders' words that the time is approaching when they can take the offensive in the war against Hitler, but simultaneously there arose reports that Germany was seeking a French declaration of war on Britain.

From Les Verrieres, Switzerland, came travellers' stories that Germany was offering France a "cheap" peace for a declaration of war against Britain and Berlin reported that such a plan was being hatched by Germany's foreign minister, von Ribbentrop.

"The cheap" peace offer was said to provide that France lose "only" Alsace-Lorraine, Nice, Tunisia, Jibuti and the colonies she gained from Germany in the first great war. Travellers said that at Vichy Premier Petain was opposed to acceptance of such terms but that his deputy, Pierre Laval, was discussing them with Ribbentrop.

Great fires spread along the French channel coast last night in the wake of Royal Air Force bombing raids and today British coastal guns spoke again along the cliffs of Dover. Aerial activity was curbed to some extent by bad weather, but the R.A.F., pressing its assault on the enemy, bombed such chosen objectives as could be found.

Eagerness to carry the aerial fight to enemy territory was in keeping with Prime Minister Churchill's declaration in his message yesterday to the French people that "in 1941 we shall have command of the air"

Neutral observers generally discounted German chances of setting France against her old ally. Apart from sentiment, they cited two reasons, France's desperate economic plight—almost as bad as Germany's—and the danger of any attempt to rearm French soldiers who might turn on their present jailers.

In the attitude of the average Frenchman some observers see one of the factors that will help Britain carry the war to the enemy's fields. They say Frenchmen at one time were not too clear what they were fighting. Now that it has vanquished them temporarily they know.

Like Frenchmen, citizens of Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway know, too, what they either fought or fell before without a fight, as did Denmark. That knowledge—that life cannot be free under their present masters—is expected to make northeastern Europe's man in the street a valuable British ally.

Already Hollanders standing in their fields wave and cheer as R.A.F. planes go to bomb German-held Netherlands cities. Norwegians risk their lives to send information by radio that will bring British bombers in new raids to their country.

Some have argued that if it is impossible for Germans to invade Britain it is equally impossible for Britons to establish a bridgehead in Europe. These persons have not stopped to consider that German troops would run into a hornet's nest of steadfast defenders while British troops invading Europe would almost certainly meet an enemy bewildered by saboteurs and harassed by rebels ready to shoot him in the back.

VON RIBBENTROP

There have been rumors here for weeks of a pending arrangement with Vichy. For a fortnight, the German press has refrained from saying anything derogatory about the Petain-Laval government.

Matter of Speculation.

Whether von Ribbentrop, if bound for Vichy, will continue on to Madrid, also is a question of speculation in the German capital.

Inquiries as to whether a visit to Moscow is also on the foreign minister's schedule were met with shrugs of the shoulder and the reply: "That comes later."

In a chain of circumstantial evidence, however, the following points may be mentioned:

1. Rumors concerning negotiations with Vichy have been recurring here with frequency in the past weeks.
2. Inspired suggestions that the Balkans are a matter of secondary importance to other events in the offing.
3. Unusual secrecy with which Ribbentrop's present movements are shrouded.
4. The fact that his press chief, Dr. Paul Schmidt, has also been out of town for several days.

Dangling Peace Terms

Les Verrieres, Switzerland, (at the French Frontier), Oct. 22. (AP)—Reports reaching Switzerland today said the Axis Powers are attempting to persuade France to declare war on Britain with promises of easy peace terms which would ostensibly leave most of the French Empire intact.

Under the terms the Axis is dangling before the Vichy government, informed travellers said, France would be permitted to keep all her present territories except Alsace-Lorraine, Nice, Tunisia, Jibuti and the German colonies she acquired in the First Great War

Germany presumably would get Alsace-Lorraine under such an agreement, while Italy would get Nice, Tunisia and Jibuti—French Somaliland port linked by rail with Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia.)

Vice-Premier Pierre Laval was reported discussing the proposal with German authorities in Paris.

Premier Philippe Petain was said definitely to be opposed to any such proposal. There were unconfirmed reports, however, of an impending meeting between Hitler and the Vichy chieftain—perhaps to discuss some such proposal.

Berlin reports indicated that a meeting between Petain and Hitler's Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, is more likely in view of hints Ribbentrop is en route or preparing to leave Berlin for Vichy.

Connection Seen

(Berlin spokesmen professed to see a connection between Ribbentrop's plans to lure Vichy into the Axis and Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast to the French people from London yesterday.

(The Prime Minister asked the French, "if you cannot help us, at least you will not hinder us". He warned them that the Axis wishes "to carve up the French Empire as if it were a fowl.")

Laval has conferred with German officials in Paris on several occasions since he took his place in the Petain government. Last August he was reported seeking German approval of a shake-up in the French Cabinet in an effort to consolidate his position with the Nazis.

Future May Hinge on Decision

Regardless of France's future relations with Britain it appeared the Petain government is on the verge of being forced to decide whether to remain in the unoccupied zone or return to Paris—a decision on which, travellers from France said, may hinge the future of the Petain regime.

Chief obstacle to return of the government to Paris, it was said, is fear the move might result in the loss of diplomatic contact with the United States and South American nations whose recognition Petain considers essential to France's welfare—particularly as regards hoped-for food supplies.

The Germans are represented as anxious to have the French government return to Paris and relieve them of some of their administrative problems, but are reported unwilling to guarantee diplomatic courier facilities for foreign embassies there.

Believe Churchill Knew

Nazi spokesmen asserted a belief that Prime Minister Churchill had knowledge of Ribbentrop's manoeuvres and was prompted by that knowledge to make his appeal to the French people yesterday at least not to hinder Britain if they cannot help her.

One practical consideration that might make the rumors of a deal between Berlin and Vichy seem plausible is that the French are finding Vichy highly unsuitable as a seat of government. It is suggested that Vichy might seize the opportunity of concluding a definite peace with Germany rather than continue armistice conditions which make return of the government to Paris unfeasible.

Since Vichy holds African territory closest to South America—Dakar and its surroundings — axis plans for weaning South American nations away ideologically from the United States might be rendered easier.

In an article appearing last night, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung boasted significantly that the eastern hemisphere, which it said extended from Gibraltar to Toyko and from North Cape to the Cape of Good Hope, is a hemisphere of unlimited possibilities and stronger than the western hemisphere.

SENATE TO PROBE PRICE CHISELING

Committee to Scrutinize Price Field Carefully to Prevent Leaks

Washington, Oct. 22—(AP)—A broad investigation of alleged "price chiseling" on materials for the United States defence construction program, was announced today.

Chairman Burton Wheeler (Dem. Montana), disclosed that a Senate Interstate Commerce Sub-committee, with the co-operation of the National Defence Commission and the Department of Justice, would scrutinize the price field carefully and also inquire into the reasons for any "bottlenecks" that might develop to hamper the defence program.

"This investigation will be broad enough to go into any phase of the defence program, but particular attention will be paid to reports that extortionate prices have been charged to the government in some instances," the Montana Senator told reporters.

"We don't want the same thing to take place that happened during the last war, when there were charges and counter charges that some people were taking advantage of the war to build up great fortunes.

"This is not going to be any 'witch hunt,' though, and nobody who is co-operating with the government on a fair basis will have any reason to be afraid of it."

LONDONERS

type of formation bombing. They flew high over the city in spread formation, dropping explosive and incendiary bombs in long, straight lines.

Dawn brought reports that casualties in London's 45th consecutive night of air raids had been fewer than usual.

The raids started soon after dusk as usual, but dwindled long before midnight and continued with only occasional bombings in pre-dawn hours.

Mist shrouded the Strait of Dover, where loud explosions shortly after dusk were taken to indicate British bombers again were striking at German long range guns which shelled Dover several hours earlier.

Pound German-Held Ports

Later the mist partially lifted and big coastal guns along the Dover coast began pounding the German-held French ports across the Strait.

The Air Ministry announced objectives in Germany also were attacked "although operations of our bombers last night were considerably hampered by adverse weather conditions".

A high officer of the R.A.F. said bad weather over France recently had caused many German planes to crash in landings at their air fields there.

Londoners were cheered, meanwhile, by reports that new-type United States airplanes with special equipment for detection of night raiders are being tested over London.

The only American fighter planes publicly reported coming into use in any large numbers are Brewsters.

Liverpool and other sections of northwestern England were attacked repeatedly, starting at dusk last night. Showers of incendiary bombs rained down along with explosives. A burst of explosives in a congested section of one town along the Mersey river caused most of the casualties.

Damage to Dwellings

A communique said some persons were killed there, but damage was largely to dwellings.

One town in the Midlands was attacked heavily with damage to business and industrial buildings and an undisclosed toll of dead and injured.

A movie theatre, a hotel and three schools were set afire in another Midlands town which had been attacked only twice before.

A communique said "a large number of dwellings were damaged" in a town in Northeastern England, where several persons were injured, but no fatalities were reported. Neither this nor the Midlands town were identified.

Bombs fell intermittently in other parts of the Midlands, in southeastern England in Wales. Casualties in these areas were slight.

Probe Charges Of Ill Treatment Of Objectors

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Sir Edward Grigg, War Office Parliamentary secretary, informed the House of Commons today that Anthony Eden, War Secretary, has ordered a court of inquiry to investigate charges of ill treatment of conscientious objectors.

He said 32 conscientious objectors had been sentenced to three or four months imprisonment for offences against military discipline and that three were in solitary confinement.

DIPHTHERIA AT HALIFAX

Halifax, Oct. 22 (CP)—Outbreaks of diphtheria of a more virulent strain than has been known here in recent years have cropped up in the city, Dr. A. R. Morton, City Commissioner of Health and Welfare, said yesterday. Dr. Morton announced 15 cases were being treated at the infections disease hospital. He urged that all children, particularly those between six months and 12 years, be immunized in the next few weeks.

Text of Talk to France
By Mr. Churchill

London, Oct. 22. (AP)—Following is the text of Winston Churchill's address to the French nation:

Frenchmen: For more than thirty years in peace and war I've marched with you, and I'm marching still along the same road. Tonight I speak to you at your firesides, wherever you may be or whatever your fortunes are. I repeat the prayer around the Louis d'Or — "God protect France".

Here at home in England under the fire of the Boche we do not forget the ties and links that unite us to France, and we are perserving steadfastly and in good heart in the cause of European freedom and fair dealing to the common people of all countries, for which, with you, we drew the sword.

When good people get into trouble because they are attacked and heavily smitten by the vile and wicked, they must be very careful not to get at loggerheads with one another. The common enemy is always trying to bring this about, and, of course, in bad luck a lot of things happen which play into the enemy's hands. We must just make the best of things as they come along.

Here in London, which Herr Hitler said he would reduce to ashes and which his airplanes are now bombarding, our people are bearing up unflinchingly. Our air force has more than held its own. We are waiting for the long-promised invasion. So are the fishes! But, of course, this for us is only the beginning.

Now, in 1940, in spite of occasional losses we have as ever the command of the seas.

In 1941, we shall have the command of the air. Remember what that means.

Wish to Carve up France

Herr Hitler with his tanks and mechanical weapons and also by fifth column intrigue with traitors, has managed to subjugate for the time being most of the finest races in Europe, and his little Italian accomplice is strutting along hopefully and hungrily, but rather nervously and very timidly at his side. They both wish to carve up France and her empire, as if it were a fowl: To one a leg, another a wing, or perhaps part of the breast.

Not only the French Empire will be devoured by these two ugly customers, but Alsace-Lorraine will go once again under the German yoke, and Nice, Savoy and Corsica—Napoleon's Corsica—will be torn from the fair realm of France. But Herr Hitler is not thinking only of stealing other people's territories, or flinging gobbets of them to his little confederates.

I tell you truly what you must believe when I say this evil man, this monstrous abortion of hatred and deceit has resolved on nothing less than the complete wiping out of the French nation and the disintegration of its whole life and future. By all kinds of sly and savage means he is plotting and working to crush forever the fountain of characteristic French culture and French inspirations to the world. All Europe, if he has his way, will be reduced to one uniform Boche land, to be exploited, pillaged and bullied by his Nazi gangsters.

You will excuse my speaking frankly, because this is not a time to mince words. It is not defeat that France will now be made to suffer at German hands, but the doom of complete obliteration. Army, navy, air force, religion, laws, language, culture, institutions, literature, history, tradition, all are to be effaced by the brute strength of a triumphant army, and the scientific low cunning of a ruthless force.

Not Lost Forever

Frenchmen! Rearm your spirits before it is too late. Remember what Napoleon said before one of his battles, "These same Prussians who are so boastful today were three to one at Jena and six to one at Montmirail."

Never will I believe that the soul of France is dead. Never will I believe that her great place among the greatest nations of the world has been lost forever.

All these schemes and crimes of Herr Hitler are bringing upon him, and upon all who belong to his system, a retribution which many of us will live to see. The story is not yet finished, but it will not be so long. We are on his track, and so are our friends across the Atlantic Ocean and your friends across the Atlantic Ocean.

If he cannot destroy us, we will surely destroy him and all his gang and all their works. Therefore have hope and faith, for all will come right.

Now, what is it we British ask of you in this present hard and bitter time? What we ask at this moment in our struggle to win victory, which we will share with you, is that if you cannot help us, at least you will not hinder us. Presently you will be able to weight the arm that strikes for you, and you ought to do so; but even now, we trust that Frenchmen, wherever they may be, will feel their hearts warm, and a proud blood kindle in their veins, when we have some success in the air or on the sea, or presently—for that will come—upon the land.

"We Shall Never Give In"

Remember, we shall never stop, never weary and never give in, and that our whole people and Empire have vowed themselves to the task of cleansing Europe from the Nazi pestilence and saving the world from new dark ages.

Do not imagine, as the German-controlled wireless tell you, that we English seek to take your ships and colonies. We seek to beat the life and soul out of Hitler and Hitlerism—that alone, that all the time, that to the end. We do not covet anything from any nation, except their respect. Those Frenchmen who are in the French Empire, and those who are in so-called unoccupied France, may see their way from time to time to useful action. I will not go into details; hostile ears are listening.

As for those to whom English hearts go out in full, because they see them under the sharp discipline, oppression and spying of the Hun—as to those Frenchmen in the occupied regions, to them I say, when they think of the future, let them remember the words which Gambetta, that great Frenchman, uttered after 1870 about the future of France and what was to come "Think of it always; speak of it never".

Good night, then; sleep to gather strength for the morning, for the morning will come. Brightly will it shine on the brave and true, the kindly, on all who suffer for the cause, and gloriously upon the tombs of heroes. Thus will shine the dawn. Vive La France! Long live, also, the forward march of the common people in all the lands, towards their just and true inheritance, and toward the broader, fuller age.

Recall July 14 Pledge

Throughout his speeches since France signed an armistice with the enemy, Prime Minister Churchill has expressed constant sympathy with the French people and confidence that they will ultimately be liberated from Nazi domination.

In one of them, on July 14, France's national holiday, just after the Royal Navy fulfilled its "melancholy duty" of preventing the main French fleet from joining the Nazis, Mr. Churchill said, in part:

"Today is the 14th of July, the national festival of France. A year ago, in Paris, I watched the stately parade down the Champ Elysees of the French Army and the French Empire. Who could foresee what the course of a year would bring? Who can foresee what the course of other years will bring?

"Faith is given to us as a help and comfort when we stand in awe before the unfurling scroll of human destiny. And I proclaim my faith that some of us will live to see a 14th of July when a liberated France will once again rejoice in her greatness and in her glory, and once again stand forward as the champion of the freedom and rights of man. When that day dawns, as dawn it will, the soul of France will turn with comprehension and with kindness to those Frenchmen and Frenchwomen, wherever they may be, who in the darkest hour did not despair of the republic.

"In the meantime we shall not waste our breath or cumber our thoughts with reproaches. When you have a friend and comrade at whose side you have faced tremendous struggles and your friend is smitten down by a stunning blow, it may be necessary to make sure that weapon that has fallen from his hands shall not be added to the resources of your common enemy. But you need not bear malice because of your friend's cries of delirium and gestures of agony. You must not add to his pain. You must work for his recovery. The association of interest between Britain and France remains. The cause remains. Duty inescapable remains.

"So long as our pathway to victory is not impeded we are ready to discharge such offices of goodwill toward the French Government as may be possible and to foster the trade and help the administration of those parts of the great French Empire which are now cut off from captive France, but which maintain their freedom. Subject to the iron demands of the war which we are waging against Hitler and all his works, we shall try so to conduct ourselves that every true French heart will beat and glow at the way we carry on the struggle and that not only France, but all the oppressed countries in Europe may feel that each British victory is a step toward the liberation of the Continent from the foulest thraldom into which it has ever been cast."

CHAPTER XXI.

"Quinn!" Judge Castle's voice called brusquely from his room a very few moments after he had arrived at the office with little more than a brief nod to his smiling aide.

Victor entered and stood waiting. "Yes, sir?"

"Shut the door. Sit down." Quinn obeyed both orders.

The Judge appeared to be in an ill humor, staring belligerently from under his shaggy brows and tapping his spectacles against the palm of one hand. "Jeffrey was down. He returned to the city last night. He will not be back here."

"Not coming back? But I thought . . ."

"You thought he'd be returning to take his rightful place as my law partner and heir . . . in other words to live the life of his father's son. It did not seem too much to expect. It appears that it was quite too much, however." There was deep bitterness in the older man's voice.

"I'm sorry," Victor offered simply.

"You have been a very good friend to Jeffrey," Castle continued slowly. "For that reason, in addition to the regard I have come to feel for you, I believe that I may speak plainly about this . . . that you will respect my confidence."

"Certainly, sir."

"It occurs to me that you may have known of this decision. It would have been a kindness had you told me. No, no." The judge raised a deprecating hand. "I'm quite aware, sir, that you would not consider it an honorable thing to do. I presume I was blinded by my own desire. Jeffrey intimated that he was not . . . well, I expected his breeding would come to his rescue. And it did not. I can manage my own disappointment, but his mother is completely crushed over the turn of affairs. That, I find it impossible to forgive."

He sat staring so long at the top of the big desk that Quinn felt obliged to contribute some word of consolation. "I think I can realize your disappointment, Judge Castle. Perhaps he will change his mind when he thinks it over and realizes that you need him."

"He may think it over," the Judge snapped; "but his conclusions are of minor interest to me, I assure you. He has gone his way and I propose to go mine, sir. He has sold his birthright, so far as I am concerned."

"I hope not."

"Nonsense, Quinn! You know that situation as well as I, better perhaps. I fully respect my son's right to choose his wife. I was prepared to treat her as the daughter I never had. But I do not respect Jeffrey's willingness to barter a respected career for a life of ease on his wife's money. That is what it amounts to."

"I hardly believe that of Jeff," his friend interposed quietly. "He's not that sort. He will be glad to devote his talents to business later on. He has too much natural pride to allow anyone to . . ."

"Keep him? I would have said so once, but he seems to be lending himself willingly to that. I am informed that the present Mrs. Castle conducted such an experiment once before. She had given Jeffrey his choice and he has accepted her wishes. Under the circumstances, my house is closed to him."

Victor shook his head regretfully, but made no comment.

"As you can well appreciate, Quinn, this situation is most unfortunate for me, aside from the personal and family standpoint. I can no longer count upon Jeffrey. And Miss Dodds will never be able to return to her duties."

Victor made no response. He could guess what was coming.

"I will be perfectly frank with you, Quinn," the Judge continued. "I am aware that Jeffrey has urged you to stay on permanently with me. I am seconding that request on my own behalf."

"That is exceedingly kind of you, Judge Castle, but I . . ."

"I know, I know. You are under the impression that your legal career will be modified by what Parville has to offer. I can appreciate that, but I believe that I can assure you that you are wrong. How old are you?"

"Twenty-eight."

"And well matured. You have been of very great service to me during your stay. I have learned to my satisfaction that I can depend upon you. There is and will be plenty of practice here for a young man, and my experience, such as it is, will be at your service. I need you. What do you say, sir?"

"That I appreciate it very highly. But I feel that I must consult with . . ."

"Brand? That is quite unnecessary. I have already talked with him. Financially, I will make it worth your while. You need not hesitate on that score. I am not so young as I once was, although I hope to be active for a reasonable term of years. I was thinking it over last night and this morning and have almost conclude to . . . yes, by George, I will! I am offering you a partnership, Quinn. A full partnership here. That is what I promised Jeffrey. It does not interest him."

"That's a bit overwhelming," Victor managed. "I don't think that I need tell you I never anticipated . . ."

"No, no!" the Judge interrupted hastily. "If you can see your way clear to accept my offer you will be going a long way toward making up to me what I have lost. I realize that is a selfish attitude."

"It is a very kind one," Victor asserted thoughtfully. "However, I still feel that I must talk this matter over . . . with someone whom it might affect."

"Very prudent." There was a dry note in the Judge's voice. "Dean is driving me to the city this morning. I'll probably be back tomorrow evening or, at latest, Thursday morning. You can reach me at the club if necessary."

"Yes, sir." Victor sensed the conference was concluded and went back to his desk in the outer office.

After Judge Castle left, his assistant sat for a long time making aimless marks on a pad, his brows contracted, and his strong lower jaw set grimly. At length he tossed aside his pencil and reached for the telephone. There was no relaxation in his face when his requested number answered. "Hello Audrey. This is Vic."

"I guessed it. How are you?"

"All right. May I see you if I drive out after lunch . . . two, perhaps?"

"Yes. I'll be here."

"Thanks." And he hung up.

Audrey was sitting alone on the side porch when Victor alighted from his car. She closed her book and greeted him with a bright smile as he tapped on the door and then let himself in. "Alone, are you? I won't take any undue advantage, but I do want a conference just with you."

"It's a rare opportunity," she laughed. "Mom and Dad are off on a jaunt in the country."

"Fine. If it were warmer I'd make you take me down to that creek spot. As it is, I'll do the babbling from this end of the swing where I can be close." He helped himself to a seat and produced his leather cigarette case. "I'll remember my manners this time," he smiled, holding it out. "Hang it all, Audrey!" he burst out, after a moment's contemplative smoking. "I wonder if you realize that almost every time I've talked with you it's had something to do with Jeff? It isn't fair to me, but that's the way it always turns out. I may as well own up that he's in it again."

"You surely expected him back."

"Of course I did. When I came down here, I swear it was only to help him out. You know I'm five years older than Jeff."

"I didn't."

"Well, I am. Old enough to have more discretion about some things, perhaps. I was about to add that I more or less asked your permission to come to Parville. The thing I'm trying to solve now is whether I should stay on. You have something to do with that, too."

"But I haven't the remotest idea what you mean, Vic." She was plainly puzzled.

"No, you wouldn't. I had quite a session with the Judge at the office this morning. He tried to exact a promise from me that I would stay here with him indefinitely."

"Oh. Then he wants you and Jeff to . . ."

"No. Not Jeff."

"I see. Jeff doesn't want to come back any more."

"It's . . . it's a little worse than that, Audrey. He can't come back His father has . . . well, he's sacked Jeff."

CHAPTER XXII.

Audrey caught her breath at Victor's blunt announcement. She knew what that expression meant, but it was difficult to comprehend. Judge Castle didn't want Jeff to come home any more. There was something unreal about it—almost melodramatic.

"I didn't know that." A stupid thing to say under the circumstances.

"I shouldn't be thinking of myself," Victor admitted gloomily. "It's a sad thing for all of them. At the same time, it puts me in rather an embarrassing position."

"But you couldn't have had anything to do with it, Vic. I know that you advised Jeff to stay with his father, even if others don't."

"I suppose no one will accuse me of being underhanded. But of course if I had foreseen anything quite like this, I should have done differently."

"But why is it so dreadful? If Jeff doesn't like the law business, and we know he doesn't, why should his father refuse to have anything to do with him? Simply because he's decided how and where he'd rather live."

"Well, it's a little more complicated than that. The old gentleman made it pretty plain that Jeff allowed him to labor under the delusion that everything was the way he wanted, until yesterday. That's when it happened. I suppose the matter of that new house didn't make it any pleasanter."

"I had forgotten that! What do you suppose they will do about it?"

"Don't know." Victor shrugged his shoulders. "It belongs to the young Castles. My guess is that it will still stand empty."

"That is a pity."

"And an expensive one. I had to bring up the topic so that you would understand my position if I stay on."

"Do you want to?"

"Audrey," he answered quietly, "that question is a little unfair to me. But I answered it truthfully, it will be much less fair to you. I haven't been so much the scamp, have I?"

"Not that I know of," was the guarded reply.

"I've tried not to be and it hasn't been easy. My remaining here in Parville puts a different complexion on things. It would mean I'd probably be more or less of a fixture. This has to be said, Audrey. I told you once that I loved you. I still do. More than you will ever know. Do you see?"

"If I do, aren't you being terribly unfair to me?" Audrey asked it in a low voice. "Your life is something for you to plan. You would have me decide the question for you. Almost."

"You're right. And it is unfair. If you never can care, I've no business being around under foot. But if you think there will ever be a chance, then I want the right every man has to fight for the thing he holds dear. I'll be willing to wait as long as I have to. But I can't pledge myself to silence, or keep from dreaming. I suppose that I've gone at this thing all wrong, as usual." Vic stared down dejectedly at the rug as he spoke. "Audrey," he added gently, without looking up, "I have made a hash of it. I see that now. I guess I let my heart get the better of my head. The simplest way out of it now, I think, is for you to tell me if I . . . if I may fight." He looked up swiftly with the last word.

Audrey managed a faint smile. "Always the lawyer, aren't you, Vic? You make that sound simple . . . and it isn't. I can't tell you the thing you want to know. How can I, when I don't know the answer? I'm fond of you. You must know that. But that's a long way from . . ."

"I know," he interrupted. "I'm going to answer you. I may stay here, be near you. And I may dream."

"I wouldn't have said so much," Audrey decided thoughtfully. "But I will ask you not to go away on my account. You have earned that much. If it means anything."

"It means everything, Audrey. It clears the road. And I'm going to keep on not being a scamp."

"Thank you, Vic. I haven't so many friends . . . good friends. I'd hate to lose you."

"You can't!" he explained in such mild surprise that both of them laughed.

A very little later, Victor rose to his feet with the announcement that it wouldn't look well for him to be taking the whole afternoon off just because his boss was out of town. Audrey smiled her agreement. Their friendship suddenly had renewed its old-time basis and both of them were relieved from the constraint that had seemed to shadow their recent meetings.

"Besides," Victor announced cheerfully, "there's a rival in the offing." He nodded in the direction of the drive where a small touring car of ancient vintage was rolling up.

Vic smiled at the elderly town constable climbing from the car. Audrey went to the door and opened it as the newcomer was about to rap. "How do you do, Mr. Ringer! Won't you come in?"

"Just a minute," the officer remarked uneasily, his face clearing perceptibly when he saw the young lawyer. "How're you, Mr. Quinn?" Without waiting for a reply, he clutched off his cap and addressed himself hesitatingly to Audrey. "I . . . I'm sorry. But I got some bad news for you, Miss Swan. It . . . it's about your father."

Audrey's face went white. Victor instinctively moved close to her side. "What is it?" she asked. "Has he been hurt? Is my mother all right?"

"Yes, she's all right. It was like this, near as I had time to gather. They were drivin' into town, crossin' the new creek bridge. There was some children playing on the ice. A little girl, they tell me, fell in an' your father jumped from his car an' ran down. He got the little kid out, but the ice wouldn't hold him. Some other folks helped him out an' hurried him to the hospital. He didn't get drowned or anythin', but the shock of the cold water seemed to knock him out, like. They said it might be serious, so I told your mother I'd run out an' fetch you."

"Get your coat. I'll take you to your mother," Vic ordered quietly "Or shall I send Julia for it?"

"No. I'll get it." Audrey left the porch with Victor frowning anxiously as he noted the almost mechanical manner of her walking. He turned to Ringer with an unasked question in his eyes. The little officer put a warning finger to his lips, nodded meaningly.

"What's the matter? What's happened?" It was Julia hurrying in, wiping her hands on her apron. She looked from one man to the other

"It's Mr. Swan," Victor said quietly. "Please control yourself. Miss Audrey will be here in a moment. She doesn't know."

"Oh, the poor lamb! You're meanin' Mr. Anthony is gone?"

"Hush! She's coming."

Julia pulled herself together, even hurried to open the door for Audrey, bent over and buttoned the lower fastenings of the girl's coat. "If you want me for anythin', darlin', I'll be right close to the phone."

"Let's go, please, Vic." She was dry-eyed still, speaking calmly.

Victor caught up his own coat from a chair. He opened the door and let Audrey precede him outside.

The ride was made in silence until the hospital's main building was in sight. Then Audrey spoke suddenly. "I know that Dad is . . . gone, Vic. I'm not going to break. Really, I'm not. It was the way he would have liked to go, I think."

"The way of a brave man," Victor agreed quietly. "I believe your father expected something of the sort," he told her. "He came to the office a few weeks ago about a will. The Judge had me draw it up. I was a witness. Your father left his affairs in very good order, Audrey. He named your mother executrix and there will be no difficulty about anything."

"I'm glad."

When they reached the entrance to the hospital, Victor helped Audrey from the parked car. She turned to him with a quietly wistful: "I think I need you, Vic. Can you stay?"

"Of course. I want to."

In the main corridor, Doctor Bardsley was conversing with the superintendent. He came forward at once to meet Audrey, took her hand in both of his. "This is a hard blow, my dear. I wish I could soften it for you and for your mother."

"Where is she, Doctor?"

"Upstairs. She promised that she would lie down and rest until you came. I will take you to her. You will find her very calm."

In less than half an hour Audrey and her mother appeared at the door of the reception room where Victor was waiting. He sprang to his feet and hurried forward to express his sympathy to the older woman. "Thank you, Mr. Quinn," was her quiet response.

They would both like to go back to the house, Audrey explained, if Vic would take them in his car. Doctor Bardsley was looking after the immediate arrangements.

At the Swan house, Victor was about to take his leave after Audrey had suggested a few small commissions that he might undertake for them.

"Vic . . ." she looked at him steadily. "I was wondering if Jeff wouldn't like to know. He and Dad were good friends."

INTRIGUE and surprise may dominate the affairs of this day, according to the lunar as well as mutual aspects of the higher octave planets. It is quite probable the personal life, social, emotional, domestic and romantic, may react to this obscure, vague, sudden and wonder-working stimulus rather than commonplace interests.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year calling for a high order of strategy, subtlety and cleverness in order to handle with discretion and prudence singular developments or entanglements in the private life. This, in romantic intrigues, sensational or mysterious, affecting the domestic or affectional ties. However such subtlety peculiar ingenuity and craft might be demonstrated in the realm of creation in art, literature, music or other form of romantic adventure.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally versatile, adaptable and skillful, probably in the arts, literature, drama, music or in scientific research or invention. Its private life may be spectacular.

Spokesman Says France Will Not Enter War

Londoners Given Quietest Night in Weeks From Raids

Two Overnight Raid Alarms Sounded but Considerably Shorter Than on Any Night Recently

London, Oct. 23—(CP)—A London fog thickened by the outpourings of a million chimney pots all but blanked out German air raiders last night and today.

London had its second successive morning without an air raid, but shortly after noon an alarm was sounded. The "raiders passed" signal soon followed, without any German planes having reached the area of the capital.

German planes were seen at intervals from dawn to noon over scattered towns of western England, however.

Although last night's attacks on London were much lighter than usual, it was disclosed today that ten persons were killed when a bomb damaged a department store air raid shelter. Others in the shelter were rescued, some of them injured. The undamaged part of the store opened for business as usual today.

London had two overnight raid alarms, but they were considerably shorter than on any night recently. Much of the night passed without any bombing, and such attacks as there were at no time were heavy. Casualties were few.

BRITISH DESTROY ITALIAN WARSHIP IN THE RED SEA

Italians Strike at Convoy but Are Driven Off Losing One Destroyer

NO BRITISH LOSSES

London, Oct 23 (CP)—One of Britain's newest destroyers, the 1,690-ton Kimberley, completed since war began, engaged Italian destroyers in the Red Sea between Africa and Asia, early Monday, the Admiralty announced tonight, trapping the 1,058-ton Italian destroyer, Francesco Nullo, driving it ashore and blowing it up.

(Rome earlier had claimed a "great naval victory" in the Red Sea with only one torpedo boat damaged, as against six British merchant ships sunk and an 8,000-ton British cruiser of the Sydney class "seriously damaged." Last week a similar victory was claimed by the Rome High Command in the Mediterranean with only two torpedo boats sunk. It later developed that three Italian destroyers had been sunk by units of the Mediterranean Fleet.)

ROOSEVELT TO GIVE POLITICAL ADDRESS TONIGHT AT 10.15

Washington, Oct. 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt, in the words of Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, will "take off his gloves" in a major political address at Philadelphia tonight, first of five or six he will make before the Nov. 5 United States election in taking over personal command of his campaign's home stretch drive.

An eight-car special train was made ready to take the President to the scene of his second avowedly political address of the campaign—the Philadelphia Convention Hall where Wendell L. Willkie was nominated as the Republican Presidential candidate.

The President will speak at 10:15 p.m. EDT. Two radio networks will carry the speech, the time for which will be paid by the Democratic National Committee. The occasion is National Youth Day and the title of the address, "America looks to the future".

Willkie, en route east from a mid-west tour, is scheduled to go on the air shortly after Mr. Roosevelt concludes. The Republican nominee will address the Herald-Tribune forum in New York City.

Mediterranean climate! The Mediterranean Sea, scene of many a naval conflict, together with its coasts, is famed for its climate. In general, it is similar to that of the coast of California. This sea is far enough from the equator to escape continued high temperatures, and yet near enough to be free from extreme cold. In summer it is dry and warm, its autumns warm and rainy, and its winters and springs cool and rainy. The rainfall varies from ten inches on the Egyptian coast to 180 inches in the mountains of Montenegro overlooking the Adriatic Sea. In summer the sunshine is abundant, but even in the autumn and winters there are many spells of clear weather with bright skies.

London's Big Balloons No Joke But a Real Menace to Bombers

By TOM YARBROUGH
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23 (AP)—London's big balloons were a joke a year ago—"expensive toys, theatrical props of a nation playing war, bound to come down in the first shower of machine-gun fire."

After weeks of day-and-night raiding and many showers of lead, the balloons are still there. Last year's jokers now respect them as sentinels in silver, a menace to bombers.

The Air Ministry gives them credit for doing their job. The job is to rule out dive-bombing and keep the enemy at a distance, high enough for anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes to get at them.

They're nothing but big bags of carefully sewed and gummed Egyptian cotton fabric filled with hydrogen, but Londoners are delighted to date on their animal ways.

They look like circus elephants, or well-fed guppies in a fish bowl. They are stubborn as mules, and in a wind they are as playful as kittens.

The Nazis might have called them silly-looking gas bags in the long months before the battle, but one of the earliest "all out" raids on this country was aimed at balloons alone.

Few Shot Down

They've had their bad moments. A few have been shot down. Some have snapped their cables and gone traipsing over power lines as far off as Finland. Others have snagged enemy planes. They've had unexpected good moments, too. One balloon was a nice cushion for an airman descending by parachute near Hyde Park. He and the balloon were hauled down safely.

They have been doubled since the war started; more are coming, and will keep on coming until every vulnerable area is covered.

In the 1914-18 war, London had balloons linked up with horizontal cables suspending lines forming an "apron" to catch aerial invaders.

The organization behind the random-looking mushroom patches that guard Britain's more vital spots is as intricate as anything in the army.

The balloon command has centres, then squadrons, flights, and finally sites. Centres have their own hangars, kitchens, doctors, police, accountants and office staffs. Hot food goes out to each site at mealtime in cycle boxes.

The crews—12 to each balloon—don't waste their time. Since invasion became a threat they have learned to use rifles and machine guns.

25 Persons Believed Killed When Large Bomb Hits Department Store in London

London, Oct. 23. (CP)—About 25 persons were feared today to have been killed last night when a German bomb buried them under the fire-swept wreckage of one of London's largest department stores.

Reports in mid-afternoon said eleven bodies already had been dragged out of the basement shelter.

An official of the store said, however, it would be "some time before a roll call can be completed and the exact number of fatalities determined".

Undamaged parts of the store were open for business today while the search went on.

A bomb of unusually large calibre scored a direct hit on the building where members of the staff who had already been bombed out of their homes and residents of neighboring apartments had taken shelter for the night.

Gas Main Broken.

In addition, a gas main was broken and an oil incendiary bomb dropped, starting a fire which swept through some sections of the store, including a part of the basement beside the wrecked shelter.

A number of persons dug out of the wreckage alive were seriously injured.

Some of the store's departments were wrecked, but it opened at 9 a.m. with a large sign outside: "Business as usual".

Stocks from the less damaged departments were moved into other sections, and a store executive said they had been doing a brisk trade during the forenoon as "some people who came to sightsee remained to buy."

Nazis Admit Two Of Their Planes Missing

Berlin, Oct. 23—(CP) — A High Command communique today said that German raiders started fires on both sides of the Thames River in last night's air attack on London. The communique also claimed the Nazi planes scored hits on war industries at Coventry and Birmingham.

(The Air Ministry at London said there were only intermittent raids except in the midlands, where one town was bombed for two hours, causing a number of injuries some of which were fatal.)

The Germans said two of their planes were missing.

(A British announcement said three German planes were shot down over Britain yesterday.)

Japanese Paper Declares Netherlands East Indies Must be Won "Over to Our Side"

AGREEMENT DENIED

Tokyo, Oct. 23.—(AP)— The influential newspaper Asahi declared today Japan must bring the Netherlands East Indies "over to our side"—by "armed force", if necessary—to provide oil for the Japanese war machine.

It indicated negotiations to obtain the Indies' oil so far had failed and said:—

"Either we must show them it is clearly against their interests to rely on Britain and the United States, or we must resort to armed force and make them comply.

"No matter how we might try to reason with the Dutch, it would be a sheer waste of time and energy unless the Anglo-American policy changes".

Aircraftman Newell Remanded Till Oct. 31

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP).—Aircraftman Hugh A. Newell, held since Oct. 5 as a material witness in connection with the silk-stocking murder of his wife, was remanded again today, to Oct. 31.

In women's court Elna Lehto, now on $1,000 bail, was remanded until tomorrow. Her counsel contended the Crown had no right to hold the girl when no charge had been laid in the case. Although police had been investigating the affairs for seventeen days.

Magistrate R. Forsyth asked the Crown counsel what the authority was for holding her.

"Can the police hold everyone here as a material witness?" he demanded. "This sort of thing could lead to endless injustice if carried on by police."

When Newell appeared in Magistrate's court, his counsel complained he had been unable to see Newell in the cells before court opened and that Newell's R.C.A.F. uniform had been taken from him.

TAKEN TO GRANADA

Former King Carol Could Hardly Conceal His Astonishment When Informed by Police

Also placed under arrest was Ernst Urdareanu, former cabinet minister, who accompanied the pair when Carol abdicated and went into exile.

All three appeared shocked when the police informed them of the sudden change in their fortunes. Carol had been reported making preparations for going to the United States, and frequently since his arrival here had been in telephonic communication with Lisbon, Portugal.

The police told the former King and the others they will be sent to Granada while their case is under consideration.

Injections of Histamine Provide New Cure for Meniere's Disease

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, Associated Press Science Editor)

Chicago, Oct. 23—(AP)—A new treatment and cures for Meniere's disease, a form of dizziness which affected many historical persons was reported to the American College of Surgeons.

The dizziness is peculiar and not uncommon. Objects appear to whirl in huge jerks. One or both ears have a roaring, pounding noise. An ear may hurt.

Dr. Walter E. Dandy, of Johns Hopkins University said it was the ear pain which Martin Luther, the famous theologian, in one such attack, attributed to the devil, at whom he hurled an ink well.

The new treatment is injection of histamine, a depressor drug extracted from ergot. Its effect was discovered by accident about a year ago at the Mayo clinic, when a woman was given histamine for a headache.

This patient also had Meniere's disease After the histamine it was noticed that the dizzy spells had stopped. Since then 49 persons have been treated with histamine at the clinic.

Although not all have fully recovered, the immediate effects were amazing. Persons so dizzy they were unable to stand, got up in a few minutes, apparently cured.

Nazis Forced To Consider Rebuilding Port

Reliable Sources Say Port of Hamburg Has Suffered Immense Damage From RAF Bombing

London, Oct. 23 —(CP)— Authoritative quarters said today they have reliable information that 20 per cent of Germany's productive capacity has been affected by British bombing and that the Germans have been forced to contemplate the "rebuilding" of Hamburg, the Reich's greatest seaport.

An informed foreign industrialist was quoted as saying about 20 per cent of the Reich's total productive capacity has been affected by the repeated attacks.

In the Meuhof area of Hamburg, for instance, large oil refineries have been forced to close, and three silos containing 10,000 tons of wheat, docks and important dockside buildings were said to have been destroyed.

A recent advertisement in Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter, headed "replanning and rebuilding of Hanseatic Hamburg," offered a "good period of employment" to numerous persons from "architects to the lowest grade of clerks."

Bucharest Hears Of New Axis Plan

Military and naval action by Japan as a result of Britain's reopening of the Burma Road for war supplies to China.

Entrance, of Vichy France into the war as a belligerent before the Nov. 5 election in the United States.

The dispatch asserted the Axis Powers are determined to strike in all possible directions and with all possible means before the election "in order to give a real warning to America."

21 FISHERMEN MISSING AT SEA PROBABLY SAFE

Furious Gale Rakes Cape Breton Coast but Believed Boats Will Ride Out Storm

4 VESSELS UNREPORTED

Glace Bay, N.S., Oct. 23—(CP)—Subsiding seas gave hope today for the safety of 21 fishermen missing at sea after a furious gale had raked the Cape Breton coast and swept their vessels into the grip of a turbulent Atlantic.

Fellow seamen gave three vessels carrying 18 Newfoundlanders a good chance of riding out the gale that lashed up suddenly yesterday, but they had grave fears for the lives of three Glace Bay men aboard a tiny 18-footer that was swallowed up in the snow-laden blow six miles from land.

Battered and denuded of gear by the wind and raging seas, other vessels of the fleet fishing out of this port crawled into Glace Bay or nearby harbors last evening, their crews exhausted from the struggle to reach land. But early today the other four vessels re-

GROTESQUE MASKS OF DICTATORS FAVORED FOR HALLOWE'EN

If those European gangsters, Hitler and Mussolini plus their respective satellites, get half the drubbing in the near future that the youth of Belleville will administer to their caricatures on Hallowe'en night, the war should not last much longer.

At present Front Street and other shops are showing a wide variety of fantastic masks, and other seasonal paraphernalia that for sheer grotesqueness outdoes any previous preparations. There are, of course, the conventional witches, hobgoblins and what not, but conspicuous in a display that lacks nothing for color, are the humorous and in some cases terrifying masks of the Axis assassins.

However, present indications point to a colorful celebration here on the evening of October 31st when the youth of the city will make their annual tour of city homes in quest of the conventional candies and other goodies associated with the event.

BUCKWHEAT CROP SAID BELOW NORMAL

The buckwheat crop for the 1940 season is in many cases below the normal yield, according to farmers who have completed threshing the last of the grain crops. Early frost was given as being responsible in lowering the yield as many fields were struck during the blow and before the grain started to fill.

The poor buckwheat season was in turn responsible for a falling off in the honey crop according to apiarists now taking off honey. One honey producer stated that in some hives only about 50 per cent. of the normal yield of buckwheat honey was realized.

Soldier in England Replies to Ad for Lost Holstein Heifer

Don Leeming, farmer residing on the second concession of Thurlow, is convinced of the power of newspaper advertising, but is wondering how he is going to avail himself of the reply to an advertisement he inserted in the Ontario Intelligencer on August 30th requesting the whereabouts of a Holstein heifer that had strayed from his premises.

For the other day he received a letter from a soldier in England telling him—but here is the letter; it speaks for itself.

"Dear Sir:—In reply to your advertisement in the Belleville paper dated August 30, 1940, I beg to report that I saw a dark Holstein heifer, in fact almost black, wandering at ease in a green pasture in East Sussex County, England.

"What in heck can I do about that?

"Yours truly,
"Corp. C. Adams,
"H. and P. E. Reg't."

Leeming states that he doesn't know Corporal Adams, but says the letter is irrefutable evidence that the Ontario Intelligencer "does get around."

Kerr's Boathouse Being Dismantled

Kerr's boathouse and dancing pavilion, a well-known landmark and one time amusement palace on the Belleville waterfront will soon be nothing but a memory. Under the wrecking bars and demolition hammers of a razing crew, the building which not so many years ago proved a popular place for boating parties and other amusements, is fast disappearing and presently there will be nothing left but the piles upon which the foundation rested.

To many Belleville residents the first remembrance of what is now known as Kerr's boathouse and dancing pavilion will come as they recall the building when it was situated on Victoria Park in approximately the same site as the present park building. Some thirty years ago it was moved across the Belleville harbor to its present location where until some years ago proved a popular haven for local amusement seekers.

With the death of the owner, Mr. W. H. Kerr, a few years ago, the building was closed and rapidly fell into a state of disrepair as vandals robbed it of doors and windows until merely a shell remained. Now, sold to Mr. J. B. Ives, it is being taken down to provide lumber for other construction work.

Pain of Angina Eased By Alcohol Injections

Chicago, Oct. 23 —(AP)— An injection of pure ethyl alcohol into the neck to cure the pain of angina pectoris, one of the serious forms of heart disease, was described to the Americas College of Surgeons here today by Dr. Samuel Perlow of Chicago. He said it was developed by Dr. James White of Boston.

Angino is a painful heart trouble. Dr. Perlow said the alcohol injections had given complete relief in 40 per cent of the cases tried, and partial relief in another 35 per cent.

The alcohol is injected into one of two main nerves which automatically control contraction of arteries that serve the heart muscles. It does not go directly into the nerve, but into ganglia, which art relay centres in nerves.

The treatment is virtually painless. A novacaine needle is first used. As the gangila are not in exactly the same spot in all persons, the surgeon waits about 15 minutes. Then if the temperature of the skin rises on the side of the neck and face where the injection was made, it is a sign that the needle is touching one of the ganglia.

Thereupon a solution of 75 per cent to 95 per cent alcohol is injected through the same needle. This frequently ends the heart pain for a week to six months. When pain returns, a second shot of alcohol is given and this is usually enough to end the pain for the fortunate 40 per cent.

The theoretical explanation is that the nerve is sufficiently destroyed so that it cannot cause the heart muscle arteries to contract any more. Spasms of contraction in these coronary arteries are presumed to be the reason for angina pains.

Britain's R. A. F. Challenging Force Of "The Nazi Evil"

London, Oct. 23 (CP). — There never was a force more challenging to the powers of "the Nazi evil" than Britain's Royal Air Force, Air Undersecretary Harold Balfour told the Overseas Club at a luncheon today.

Terming the R.A.F. definitely an overseas force, Capt. Balfour pointed out its growing internationalism, saying:

"A few days ago the first (Eagle) Squadron of volunteers from the United States was formed in this country. Our squadrons daily fight alongside units of Polish, Czech and Free French pilots.

"We can look with confidence on the position we hold today," he added. "The position achieved during the past two months is one of the great victories of the war.

"Air victories are not a matter of sinking ships and massacring armies. They usually are in the form of a gradual conquest over the opposing force.

"The Germans tried large daylight raids by bombers with fighter escorts against our vital defence points. But on those days we took such a heavy toll of the mass formations they dropped this form of tactics in favor of indiscriminate bombing of the civilian population.

"Our offensive raids into Germany aim at hitting the enemy in their vital military, naval and industrial spots so as to cripple their war effort. The German aim is to break the morale of our civil population.

"Just as long as they neglect military objectives to concentrate on these methods, then just so long will they be battering uselessly against the unbreakable spirit of our people while our own force is engaged in tasks which will bring us toward victory."

Lisbon, Oct. 23.— (AP) —Gen. Francisco Franco was reported en route today to San Sebastian near the French-Spanish border, where Spanish sources said he would meet "one of the world's leading personalities."

(Dispatches from abroad yesterday speculated on the possibility hat Foreign Minister Ribbentrop of Germany might continue southward for a conference with Spanish leaders after his talks yesterday with Hitler and French Vice-Premier Pierre Laval "Somewhere in France".)

He will be assisted by Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson.

Thain Faces Two Charges

Frederick Thain, Rawdon farmer, faces two charges of murder. Thain is charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wellman, it being alleged he shot the elderly Rawdon Township couple to death at their home last February. The accused man is being defended by Robert McCulloch, local barrister.

Robert McFarland and his wife Alice Archer McFarland, Trenton, are separately charged with the murder of Mrs. Alice Archer McFarland's infant child, the Crown alleging Mr. and Mrs. McFarland drowned the infant in the Trent River last August. Separate charges have been preferred in this matter with Jacob Goodman, local barrister, representing the defendants.

Manslaughter is Charged

Hubert Herrington, Belleville, will be charged with manslaughter, arising out of a fatal motor accident which occurred north of Madoc during which Mrs. Jessie Allore of Trenton, sustained fatal injuries. Arising out of the same accident is a charge of criminal negligence preferred against Edward Kellaway, of this city. The Crown alleges that Herrington was driving a truck owned by Kellaway at the time of the fatal accident. The last criminal charge listed for trial is a serious charge preferred against 'Benny' Storms of Napanee. All accused persons have been duly committed for trial.

Four Damage Cases

In the jury cases listed for trial, of which there are four, damages as the result of accidents constitute the basis of the claims. Livingston vs Wickens is a motion for property damages resulting from a motor accident. In a counterclaim discontinuance has been filed with the Clerk of the Court. The C.N.R. et al vs Montomery is a claim for damages resulting from an accident when a motor vehicle struck a railway company gasoline jigger, allegedly causing injuries to J. W. Risk and F. A. Todd, railway employees while the Parks vs Munroe claim is for personal damages resulting from a motor accident. A motion to transfer a share of the residuary part of the estate of J. B. Christie to the plaintiff is also listed.

Police Blotter

An automobile reported stolen at Rossmore the night before last was recovered by city police near the Government Dock late last night. The vehicle, a 1928 model Essex, belonged to Mrs. Craig Russell of Rossmore, and had apparently been stolen by joyriders and abandoned near the waterfront. Constables Arnott and Wright recovered the vehicle.

Edgar Stapley, proprietor of a city parcel delivery, reported the theft of two parcels, which were removed from his parked truck in a city parking lot yesterday. The parcels contained ladies' wearing apparel and were awaiting delivery.

P.C. Thomson apprehendeed a Frankford taxi driver, who allegedly failed to stop at a city stop street yesterday. Constable Thomson reported that the driver not only failed to stop at the Victoria Avenue intersection, while driving north on Pinnacle Street, but speeded past another motor car that was slowing down to observe the stop sign at the intersection. Charges will be preferred in this case Chief Kidd intimated today as he added that more severe punishment would be meted out to offenders of city traffic regulations when they were found in violation in the future.

Finer and more mild weather saw a marked decrease in the number of transients seeking shelter at the police station last night when only seven signed the tramps' register.

CHURCHILL'S TALK TO FRENCH HAD DOUBLE MEANING

Less a Plea for French Rejection of German Intrigue Than a Warning of What Result Would be if Course Taken

SOON HAVE CONTROL

(By Kirke Simpson)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 23.— (AP) — Amid British bombing attacks on German-held bases on the French coast, Prime Minister Churchill's fireside broadcast address must have had a double meaning to Frenchmen who heard it.

It was less a plea for French rejection of German intrigue seeking to enlist France as an ally than a warning of what the result of that course would be for France. It was well calculated to build a fire under the anti-British Laval faction of the Vichy government by putting French public opinion on the alert.

Mr. Churchill said in effect that France could have only a nuisance value as an added foe for Britain. His plea to France not to "hinder", even if she could not help her former ally, meant just that.

More impressive, however, was Mr. Churchill's assertion that Britain will achieve control of the air in 1941 as she now controls the sea.

"Remember what that means", he added.

And what it would mean for a France again drawn into the war can not be doubted by Frenchmen watching or hearing of the intensifying British air fusillade along the channel coast of France. It would mean that France, already crushed by Germany, would bear much of the brunt of the air battle.

Destined to Feel Hunger Pinch

France already is destined to feel the hunger pinch of the British sea blockade more than her conqueror. Frenchmen already pulling in their belts for a hard winter can not believe that the remnants of French air or sea power could avert continued British bombardment of the French coast.

The people of coastal France and, through grapevine routes, the people of all France, probably have a better knowledge of the effect of incessant and increasing British bombing along the Channel front than the British or German peoples.

In the first shock of defeat by Germany last June, French citizens very likely believed Britain could not hold out long against Nazi air might. They know better today. France fell in weeks. Britain not only has stood fast for months but is demonstrating to French coastal residents every night that her power to strike back by air is increasing instead of diminishing.

Echoed Prediction

The Churchill address came at a time when British Cabinet spokesmen were promising early transition of Britain's rôle in the war from the defensive to the offensive. Mr. Churchill echoed that prediction.

Obviously, if the Vichy Government yielded to Nazi pressure to re-enter the war as an ally of the Axis powers, French colonial theatres would be open to British reprisals. Dakar, France's strategic colonial base in West Africa, would be in real peril from British sea and air power.

It is doubtful Dakar could long withstand a real combined assault. That may be coming if the Petain-Laval Government does not promptly disavow any intention of joining up with the Axis. Smashing of what is left of the French fleet also probably would be among the first British moves.

ITALIAN PLANES DRIVEN OFF

Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 22 (Delayed)—(AP)—Italian planes attacked British warships at the Alexandria naval base before dawn today, but authorities said they failed to score any hits.

Guns of the fleet and coastal anti-aircraft batteries which sent up a heavy barrage were credited with forcing the raiders from their objectives.

The raid was the third within nine hours.

Doggett of Thomasburg, both former pastors of the church. Rev. John E. Glover of Hastings whose boyhood days were spent in this vicinity gave a splendid address.

NELSON'S SPIRIT IN BRITISH RACE

The spirit which the people of Britain have shown in the course of their history shows brilliantly in the time of peril. Everyone recalls how indelibly history has recorded the spirit of Drake and the seamen of his day when the threat of Spain with its Armada was dissipated. In the Battle of Trafalgar, the anniversary of which was observed on Monday of this week, Nelson showed the British spirit against Napoleonic tyranny and aggression.

It is no mere chance that Nelson with his seamen won the Battle of Trafalgar. It is not to be wondered at that the spirit of Nelson has lighted up the naval records of the modern world, and that today the same spirit is shown in the navy and in the merchant marine and in the auxiliary naval services which defend the freedom of the seas.

The spirit of Nelson means the spirit of Britain. That spirit traces its way far back into the origins of the race and will be felt to the farthest reaches of time. It cannot be extinguished. Hitler and Mussolini, who war on the world like gangsters with the difference that this brace of international gunmen play with the happiness of millions whereas the ordinary social criminal is limited in his influence and sphere, cannot kill the spirit of an Englishman, a Scotchman, an Irishman or a Welshman or of the British beyond the seas. The spirit that Nelson showed is the spirit that is born into the lives of Britons when they come into the world and every Briton passes that spirit on to the unlimited future.

Contrast with this noble fair-play spirit of freedom, that other spirit of loot and kill, the spirit of grab and treachery, the spirit of thuggery which the Nazis and Fascists show. The Nazi and the Fascist spirit is doomed to die like evil slimy things which fear light. The noble spirit of freedom which the British people show is a living spirit in British hearts and in the world. Hitler and Mussolini like dark demons have come from the abyss, they are attacking liberty but in the course of things, in the face of true liberty and before the Nelson spirit they must drop back into the abyss whence they came with all their machinations.

THE CANADA YEAR BOOK 1940

Publication of the 1940 edition of the Canada Year Book, published by authorization of the Hon. James A. MacKinnon, Minister of Trade and Commerce, is announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The Year Book is the official statistical annual of the country and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, finance, education—in brief, a comprehensive survey within the limits of a single volume of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. It has been thoroughly revised and contains the latest information in all its chapters up to the time of going to press.

The 1940 Year Book extends to over 1,200 pages, dealing with all phases of the national life and more especially with those susceptible of statistical measurement. A statistical summary of the progress of Canada is included in the introductory matter. This gives a picture in figures of the remarkable progress which this country has made since the first census was taken in 1871, sixty-eight years ago.

Chapter 1 deals with the natural features of the Dominion; chapters 2 and 3 with history and chronology; chapters 4 to 6 with a general survey of production and brings together the data from the different fields of Canadian production; chapters 8 to 15, production in leading industries, agriculture, forestry, fur resources and fur production, fisheries, mines and minerals, wate-powers, manufactures and construction; chapter 16, external trades and study of tourist trade; chapter 17, internal trade with special emphasis on grain trade, trade in livestock and animal products and the census of wholesale and retail trade establishments; chapter 18, transportation, waterways, air transportation and facilities, wire and wireless communication, the post office and the press; chapter 19, labor, wages and cost of living; chapter 20, prices of commodities and services; chapter 21, public finance of Canada—Dominion, provincial and municipal, treatment of national wealth and income and Canadian investments abroad and external investments in Canada; chapters 22-24, finance other than public; chapters 25-28, education, public health and related institutions and judicial and penitentiary statistics; chapter 29, sources of official statistical and other information with a list of publications of the Dominion and Provincial Governments; chapter 30, information of Dominion legislation of 1938 and principle events of the period, official appointments.

Persons requiring the Year Book may obtain it from the King's Printer, Ottawa, at the price of $1.50 which merely the cost of paper, printing and binding. By special concession a limited number of paper-bound copies have been set aside for ministers of religion, bona fide students and school teachers, who may obtain copies at the nominal price of 50 cents each.

The Year Book is of great value to all who would keep in close touch with the progress of the Dominion and for those who have the occasion to refer to national statistics.

A Gallant Polish Patriot

The story of Stefan Starzynski, once Mayor of Warsaw, has been told by many men in many ways. Here is the tribute of an American commentator, Gabriel Heatter:

"This man of Warsaw who held out against Nazi Blitzkrieg until every last shot had been fired. Every building in ruins—every last hope gone—even then he refused to raise a white flag—this man of Poland. And some day generations, yet unborn, will read his story — this man whose defiance was a flaming challenge which drove Hitler into a rage of fury.

"And perhaps in a theatre some day, millions will be spellbound by a scene showing how Warsaw fell. How this man held out night and day—they killed his people — his government had been driven into exile—they bombed every home in his city—there he stood his ground fighting alone.

"And even when hundreds of Nazi planes were raining death all around his went to a microphone and in the last feeble hour before the current gave out, he proclaimed his defiance, and begged his countrymen not to yield..and then finally he was told there were only ten minutes left—the Nazi general was even now marching on that radio station....

"Ten minutes left—and the Mayor of Warsaw fired his last flaming defiance at Hitler. The warm and tender and lovely music of Chopin, 'Play it', he cried to a man at a piano, 'play Chopin as you have never played before—let the whole world know Poland lives—even when our country is in ruins', and the tender music of Chopin filled the night air—in that last minute—when the Nazis marched in and led the Mayor of Warsaw away a prisoner.

"And now they say he was killed by a firing squad—Killed? Killed? Does cold steel really kill such men who wear the badge of courage?"

Even more impressive, because it appears in a staid English economic magazine, not given to enthusiasm or the expression of emotion, is the following from the Economist:

"The Germans have celebrated the anniversary of the invasion of Poland by shooting the gallant Lord Mayor of Warsaw, Stefan Starzynski, in the concentration camp at Dachau For Starzynski we can only rejoice that the year's agony has found a term— nothing illustrates so grimly the degredation of the Nazi spirit as their treatment of brave and honorable opponents—but this life which has come to an end is the symbol of a life to which nothing can put an end, the life of the Polish nation. For a year now, the Poles have fought beside us, and little by little we are learning to take the measure of this recklessly gallant people. In our ignorance, we dismissed the Polish campaign with a tribute perhaps to the common soldier, but almost contemptuous references to the inefficiency and instability of our allies.

"Now that the Nazi war machine has blasted its way across five more countries and has brought crashing to the ground the secular power of France, we are in a better position to measure the endurance and fighting qualities of the Poles who, attacked before they were mobilized, without tanks, without aircraft, with virtually no air defences, stabbed in the back by the Russian advance, held out for three weeks against the Germans and created the imperishable legends of Warsaw and the Westerplatte. Not content with this preliminary sacrifice, the Polish forces have been found in the front rank of every subsequent campaign. The Orzel made her heroic escape and fought through a long winter and the spring campaigns beside the British Navy before she was reported missing. The Alpine troops proved their magnificent quality in Norway. Polish troops held the line at Rethel and on the Swiss frontier, 2000 of them covered the French retreat and on the exodus of refugees—and of the 2000 not one remained. In the hour of France's collapse the Poles declared their determination to fight on and while the bulk of them come to England, the 8000 of Syria broke away and crossed into Palestine. And now, in the Battle of Britain, Polish pilots and Polish squadrons are showing the same indomitable spirit and magnificent courage. Here in the age of the machine, the totalitarian mass, the new slavery, are allies who uphold in defeat and in victory the honour and gallantry of free men."

Stewart Says—

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Chas. P Stewart

The tariff may not be a dead issue in the U.S. but certainly it's been somewhat somnolent during this national campaign.

It promised to be very much alive. The war, however, knocked it into unconsciousness and maybe it's completely killed it. Anyway, the indications are that it's past revival for at least a few generations to come.

Cordell Hull gave the free trade idea in the U. S. its notable recent shot in the arm when he became state secretary. Hull was a free trader away back when he was in the senate, and, before that, when he was in the house of representatives. He not only was a believer in the all-around world benefits of an absolutely unrestricted international interchange of commerce, from an economic standpoint. It also was his thesis that most wars are provided by trade barriers between countries.

I once asked him, "If country No. 1 walls itself off against country No. 2, how's country No. 2 to retaliate except by walling itself off against country No. 1?"

To this Senator Hull (he was a senator then) answered, "If a country walls other countries off, it likewise walls itself in. Let a country adopt a bad policy, like that and the joke's on the country that does it; not on the others."

Not Too Sudden

But when Cordell got into the state department, he evidently decided that it would be injudicious for the United States to abandon its protective system too suddenly. Probably he was right about it. It would have been a jolt, undoubtedly. So he hit on his reciprocal plan, by which we were to make a treaty with some other one country at a time, gradually extending this scheme until it included everybody.

It was a world concept. The notion was beginning to take. We actually concluded a few treaties.

Then the warstarted.

Now, with the jumbled-up situation that we've got today, nobody has time to bother with trade treaties. Military alliances?—yes. But to heck with trade treaties!

Some Yankee statesmen never did like the reciprocal proposition. For instance, Senator Charles L. McNary, the G.O.P.'s vice-presidential nominee, doesn't. As a Republican, he's a high protectionist. Consequently, in his campaign speeches, he's taken some mean digs at trade reciprocity. Ditto Senator Henrik Shipstead, formerly a Farmer-Laborite, now a Republican. We did frame up a reciprocal treaty with Canada. It promoted the sale of some of our products (notably automobiles) to Canadians. But it also, Henrik relates, let a lot of Canadian dairy stuff into the United States, in competition with Henrik's Minnesota dairymen.

These aren't the only critics.

Wendell L. Willkie, on the opposite hand, always was a pretty good Democratic free trader until he was nominated by the Republicans for the presidency.

Willkie's Views

Even yet Wendell can't find it quite in his heart to turn thumbs down on the free trade principle. Nevertheless, he's argued thus, in a number of his addresses:

"The totalitarians are their various dictators' slaves. As slaves they'll have to work for slaves' wages. Are we going to let their slave-made products into the United States, to compete with our freemen's output?"

It's the protectionists' old argument. European pauper - made goods! Oriental cheap labor!

All the same, it's thrown a crimp into Secretary Hull's reciprocal program.

To be sure, free trade hasn't been attacked very bitterly. Charlie McNary has criticised it adversely but not violently; apparently he's thought that he had better things to talk about. All Wendell Willkie's said is, in effect, that reciprocity is impractical just now—not that, if it could be made to work, he wouldn't be in favor of it.

And the Democrats don't defend it at all vigorously.

It just has frazzled out as a 1940 campaign issue. For a while it looked oustanding.

Canada's War Chiefs

ENGINEER CAPT. A. D. M, CURRY

Engineer-in-Chief Royal Canadian Navy

(This is one of a series on military chiefs directing Canada's armed forces.)

By KEN CLARK
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Copyright, 1940
By The Canadian Press

When the Royal Canadian Navy needs a new destroyer or motor boat, or a new wharf or drydock, there's a call for Engineer Capt. Angus Downes Mathwin Curry, the Navy's engineer-in-chief.

When an oil tank is required at Esquimault, B.C., or a couple of mine sweepers at Halifax, or there's a suspicion of sabotage, who's to get and who's to fix?—Capt. Curry!

This captain is a tall heavy-boned man with a ruddy face. He is an engineer and he looks like one, out of doors directing operations, indoors poring over blue prints. Only of late has he found it necessary to use spectacles for reading.

His Majesty's ships are nothing new in the Curry family, although the engineering part of it is a slight variation from the strict line. The captain's great grandfather, his grandfather and his uncle were in the Royal Navy. His brother is a captain on the retired list, now actively employed in the Woolwich arsenal, and his nephew is in the Royal Navy's air arm.

Capt. Curry hopes his son, in school here, will be in the navy within a year and thus the family line will run down through the British tradition from the blown frigate to the diesel supersubmarine.

When he had more time Capt. Curry made some study of the development of the man-o'-war, beginning with the canoe and coming down past Ethelred (surnamed the Unready), William the Conqueror and his "Mora", and the battle of La Rochelle where the Spaniards first used guns aboard ship, firing stones.

Capt. Curry recalls with amusement the remark of Lord Melville, First Lord in 1828. When steam was introduced into H.M.S. Monkey, the First Lord averred, "The introduction of steam is calculated to strike a fatal blow to the naval supremacy of the Empire." Sir George Cockburn of White House-burning fame, was also loud in his complaints against steam vessels with their "dirty decks and captains who look like sweeps."

Variety in Activities

While this sort of conversation is going on Capt. Curry is answering half-a-dozen telephone calls, reassuring, ordering, chiding, suggesting. He is apparently a sort of general clearing station for anything needed—constructor, co-ordinator, trouble-shooter-at-large — calm, with the mind working meticulously yet with seafaring vigor, as a captain on the poop, waiting and at the right moment saying "You may fire when ready." It's a sort of old navy quality.

On the formation of the Royal Canadian Navy in August, 1910, he was commissioned engineer sub-lieutenant to the old Rainbow at Portsmouth.

In 1911 Lieut. Curry was in the Niobe and in 1913—after service in H. M. Ships Agamemnon and Colossus—he was transferred to the staff of the Royal Canadian Naval College at Halifax. He served there until 1915 and then went to H.M.S. Vengeance, operating off the east coast of Africa and in the Mediterranean. He returned to the College in 1917 in time for the famous Halifax explosion, and stayed with the College as it moved to Kingston and Esquimault.

Then he went back to sea. He spent two years in H.M.C.S. Patriot and one year in H.M.S. Wanderer. He was engineer officer in both ships.

Tip to landlubbers: Never say engineer officer ON a ship. It's IN. Capt. Curry says you are ON board a ship but you serve IN it. He points out you don't live ON a house.

Later Duties

After serving in the Wanderer, Capt. Curry was an assistant to the Chief Engineer at His Majesty's Dockyard at Chatham, England, and then went to the Royal Naval College at Greenwich to take a senior officer's technical course.

In 1927 he was appointed Chief Engineer at Esquimault and the next year went to England to bring out H.M.C.S. Vancouver. He took up his duties as Chief Engineer at Esquimault upon his return and was later transferred to a similar post at Halifax. For a short time he was aboard H.M.C.S. Saguenay as engineer officer and on Jan. 1, 1934, came to Ottawa as Engineer-in-Chief of the navy, a post he has held ever since.

Capt. Curry is responsible for the construction of ships and the maintenance and repair of all water-borne craft. In this connection his duties have enlarged themselves during the past year to embrace not 13 vessels, but 130 and during the next year his ships will increase by another 100.

He is also responsible for all works projects, maintenance and repair of buildings, wharves, dockyards and the erection of all new buildings.

The jobs must have been less complicated in the days of Ethelred but the King's man then could hardly have been steadier in appearance, speech and action than Capt. Curry. He has an air, infrequent in these jumpy times, of probity in responsibility.

Capt. Curry's golf is in the 90's. He says he likes to "potter about" in his garden at Halifax.

But he has no time for those things these times.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Sugar, a Source of Quick Energy, But Body Needs More than Energy

From 1200 to 1800 chocolate bars are eaten by the students about 4 o'clock every day at a large university with which I was connected. The sugar in the chocolate bar gives these students a little extra energy as they play football, basketball, softball, or engage in boxing, wrestling, swimming, and in general exercise in the gymnasium. There is nothing that gets into the blood and gives energy so rapidly as sugar, but to eat sugar plain instead of in candy, chocolate bars, bananas and oranges is difficult for most students.

The eating of sugar at mid-afternoon is good, not only for university students but for boys and girls and men and women. It gives energy just when it is needed and is used or burned completely, long before the evening meal and so the appetite for the evening meal is not spoiled. Similarly in the mid-morning, 10.30 to 11 o'clock, sugar in some form will often give the uplift to enable the individual to "carry on" till the lunch hour.

However, while sugar is a good source and a rapid source for energy, it must not be forgotten that the body has other requirements besides energy. It needs proteins for body building, fats for protection, water for every cell, vitamins and minerals to protect against infection and wear and tear. If, then, children eat too much candy between meals, and "pick out" the sweet foods at the regular meals, then the body building and infection-resisting foods will not be eaten in sufficient amount to promote proper growth and development. Sweets should be kept away from the child at meal time until after his meat and vegetables, particularly green vegetables, have been eaten and he has taken some milk.

These same rules apply to adults who should make sure of the other food substances at meal hours before indulging in sweets.

The thought, then is that while sugar or sweets are absolutely necessary to give needed energy, they do not contain vitamins, minerals, proteins or fats, all of which supply substances just as necessary to the body as energy. So make sure that you and your children get enough eggs, milk, fruits, and green vegetables before "filling up" on sweets.

Our Pampered Appetites

"Guns or butter?" demanded Goering. The answer, spontaneous or not, was unanimous. "Arms or appetizers?" is a question before Canadians today. "Shall we put equipment in the hands of our troops or eat the price of it?"

The United States is the only country from which we can buy the essentials to keep our troops in fighting trim until our own production overtakes our needs, and for every bomber or bullet that we get the conditions are "cash and carry."

The dollar that we pay for table luxuries is a dollar less with which to buy arms.

The United States will get the dollar anyhow, but what do we choose to take in exchange—military necessities or civilian luxuries?

Last year we paid the United States $13,578,933 for fresh fruits, a large part of them being pre-season varieties that Canadian gardens and orchards would later produce at lower cost and of higher quality. But our pampered appetites could not wait. We had to have strawberries in January, and before June brought our own fruit in superabundance we had imported $500,000 worth—the cost of a squadron of fighter planes!

For grapes we paid more than $1,000,000—for which we could have had 200 light tanks. Apples, peaches, pears and plums—all available in finer tree-ripeped quality in our own country a few weeks later—cost us $1,334,000, or the price of 2,500 heavy machine guns. Melons cost us $227,000—the equivalent of about 100 ambulances.

In the vegetable field we ate United States tomatoes, potatoes and celery to the value of 25 big bomber planes. We had our dainty dinners, and Berliners were spared the bombs! Lettuce, cabbage, carrots and green peas cost us another million dollars.

Citrus fruits have a high medicinal value—but did we eat $8,350,000 worth because the state of our health demanded them, or just because we liked them? (This figure does not include $590,000 worth of United States grapefruit juice, although at least two very fine brands of tropic-ripened British West Indian juice are offered in our grocery shops.)

Can we live without bananas? We bought $1,263,000 worth from the United States last year. For that money we could have had several mine-sweepers.

For dried fruits we paid the United States $1,738,000. Let us not forget that the finest raisins are grown in Australia by veterans of the last Great War.

Our resources of United States exchange are all too limited. We cannot borrow in New York as we did before. Every dollar that goes across the line for other than war essentials is a dollar gone from our fighting-power. Shall twenty million Canadian dollars that might buy munitions of war go for table luxuries in the next 12 months?

CARDS CALLING ALL DOROTHIES

Canadians of the Name Asked to Contribute to Spitfire Fund

Montreal (CP)—What's in a name? Well, if it happens to be Dorothy there is a chance to contribute to the Canadian Dorothy $25,000 Spitfire Fund to buy a fighting airplane to help in the defence of Britain.

The idea started with Dorothy Christie of Montreal, author, former newspaperwoman and munition worker in the First Great War. But it needed money to get it going. She saw her evening cloak in the cupboard. "What use is an evening coat during the war?" she asked. So she sold it for $25 to pay printing and postage. Another Dorothy gave $25 for printing and postage—if necessary. The founders hope it won't be necessary. They want the money to stay in the Fund.

Meanwhile, Dorothy Christie has won the help of other Dorothies. One of them went to France during the last war with the Canadian Army Medical Corps and then to Rumania and to Russia where she nursed in the Anglo-Russian hospital. She was decorated for her services.

Another is an All-Canadian ski champion. One is a school teacher. She can simonize cars and does "an excellent job." She is enlisting all her pupils named Dorothy and they will do cars, "anywhere, any afternoon, at the rate of $4 a car." All the money will go to the Spitfire Fund. Dorothy Thompson, noted American radio commentator, columnist and friend of Britain has given her signature, which will be sold at auction.

There are the Dorothies selling old gold and fire irons. A bookkeeper, a stenographer, a telephone employee, a graduate nurse, a shop-keeper, and two housewives are Dorothies doing the spade work. All Dorothies are asked to give or to collect. No matter how small the amount, it will be a help.

The scheme has the official blessing of the Canadian Government and of Mrs. George O. Spencer, president of the National Council of Women of Canada, who wrote "you can certainly have any help that the National Council is capable of giving. This is a definite war effort and a live idea."

Cards will appear, asking "Is Your Name Dorothy?" and if so "What can I do to help win the war?" The answer offered is the Canadian Dorothy $25,000 Spitfire Fund.

Bringing out to one and all the philosophy of life of which there are only two ways, and these are to be found in the two texts he chose. In the evening the choir rendered an anthem "Creations Hymn" and Mrs. Hulin contributed a solo "Now the day is over." Rev. S. A. Delve of West Huntingdon gave the closing prayer. Travelogue Enjoyed By Marmora Audience

Marmora.—A treat was given a large audience in the Town Hall on Monday evening in the travelogue "Hiking Through South America" presented by Ellsworth Toll, M.A., of the Toll Brothers, with the assistance of his technician, Roy Brule. The Marmora public are indebted to Circle No. 2 of St. Andrew's Women's Association for sponsorship of this "entertaining and instructive travelogue" as it was described by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher who introduced Mr. Toll.

The lecturer, with the aid of beautifully colored still and motion pictures and gifted with a fine flow of oratory showed South America to be a continent of contrasts. On the one hand modern cities were described and illustrated such as Buenos Aires, Rio De Janeiro, Santiago and Lima and on the other hand, a striking contrast was shown with mountain, desert, jungle and great river-scenes and the remains of primitive Indian civilization. For two hours, in an unique and interesting manner, Mr. Toll kept his audience now enthralled, then amused with his description of what he and his brother saw and experienced in accomplishing their feat.

In the morning he visited the two Lower Forms or Marmora High School, and in the afternoon the Public School to which scholars of the Senior Room of Marmora Separate School had also been invited to give half-hour talks on incidents of the travels and show souvenirs to appreciative audiences there. He announced that a book on which he is working which will cover more stories as well as include those given in the travelogue, will be published in about a year's time.

Under the auspices of Sacred Heart Church a card party was held in the Separate School on Thursday evening with a good attendance. Euchre prizes went to Miss Amelia Lahey and James Gehan while the bridge prize was won by Lack Hughes. Bingo was enjoyed and also dancing to music furnished by Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds. Lunch was served by the ladies in charge.

At a meeting of the Holy Name Society held in the Separate School on Sunday evening the following officers were elected:

President—Vincent Lynch.

Vice-President—William Shannon.

Secretary-Treasurer—Leo O'Connor.

Assistant Secretary-Treasurer — Tom Shannon.

Arrangements were made for a card party to be held in the School on Wednesday evening. The members will undertake all duties in connection with this entertainment. Rev. Father Farrell addressed the meeting briefly after which the gathering dispersed.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Red Cross Executive Expresses Appreciation For Loyal Support

The executive of the Red Cross Society met in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday, October 21, the President Mr. Hefkey in the chair.

Mr. Howard Clark reported for the recent campaign. The objective was $8,000 and Belleville and district obtained some $9,300. Mr Clark thanked the collectors and stated this result had been possible only because the people are Red Cross conscious.

Mrs. Lazier reported on work done as follows: During September there were shipped to headquarters: 210 hospital supplies, 790 knitted comforts, 27 quilts, 2 new blankets, 600 pounds of jam. A beginning was made on the quota of 1940 articles of refugee clothing assigned this branch.

To the Women's Institutes and other organizations in the outlying districts the executive would like to express appreciation of their cooperation. The work accomplished by them and the money raised by patient effort and contributed so cheerfully to our great cause speaks well for the Canadian women in the country.

Also the executive would like to thank all those who have given much time and thought to the assembling of the garments cut out, as well as those workers who have finished, inspected and packed so faithfully.

DON'T DRENCH FOODS WITH WEAK SAUCES

Use just a few drops of concentrated relish

ADDING large quantities of weak-flavoured catsups or sauces soon uses up a bottle and runs up expense. From the viewpoint of economy and for your own enjoyment of fine flavours, you will be wise to use a concentrated relish such as H. P. Sauce. Many people claim this is the most savoury sauce in the world: It has such rich, fruity goodness.

Prove the value of H. P. Sauce yourself. Try it in soups, stews, meat pies, salads, macaroni and cheese dishes. Use it with steaks, chops, tenderloins, fish, fowl and other things. H. P. adds a piquant, relishable flavour to all foods. A little goes a long way.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Give the Girl's Father Cigars?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He's a good deal of an old grouch, and his growls have sent many young man down the steps of their very charming home. It occurred to me that I might give the old man a box of cigars. Would it look too businesslike?

Interested.

I believe a whole box of cigars might reveal your interest too plainly. Why not offer a cigar, and if he reacts nicely, you might try him out with other solo offerings before presenting the entire box.

Father Thinks Twenty Is Too Old For Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in love with a young man of 20. I'm 17 years of age. My father does not approve of my going with him, saying he is too old for me. He has forbidden him to come to the house so I meet him in secret. I know this isn't fair to my parents, but although I've tried to forget the young man by going with boys of my own age, I just can't do it. What do you advise me to do about this situation?

Puzzled

There must be some other reason that your father objects to this boy of 20, as a difference of three years in favor of the boy is supposed to be an ideal arrangement. I'm sorry you sneak, which, as you realize, is unfair not only to your parents but to yourself.

If this letter should happen to meet the eye of parents with young daughters, I hope they'll realize that when the parental foot comes down too hard that girls are not above sneaking from under its jurisdiction.

Didn't Understand His Lovemaking

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 years old. Three or four months ago I met a very nice boy on a blind date. We went to a dance and I enjoyed his company very much, and I think he had a good time also. A week later we went on a wienie bake, but I wasn't in a very amiable mood and was rather short to him. On the way to this bake he said he'd like me to meet his mother and I didn't even answer. Coming home, he told me he was planning to get married, but I said I wasn't interested. I imagined he referred to another girl, and not to me.

I happened to see him recently, and know now that I'm in love with him. He hasn't seen me since, but I've seen him several times and he's always alone, so I don't think he married after all. How can I let him know I'm interested and would like a call from him?

Ellen

This girl's letter might serve as a warning to all girls not to indulge in fits of the sulks, when the boy friend is talking casually about marriage. Perhaps he has a long distance way of making love; some men do. And it's just as well to withhold the little fits of temper until you discover whether the call is "local" or "long distance."

Why not give a party or an autumn picnic, a Sunday night supper and invite him? If you invite other young people, it will not look too pointed.

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. Thanks All Who Helped in Work

At the regular weekly meeting of the St. Julien Chapter I. O. D. E. on Monday evening, the officers and members reviewed the activities of their work in connection with the War for the past year, and while they themselves have worked hard and continuously, a great deal of the success of their campaigns is due to the generosity of the public

Following is an expression of appreciation to all who helped in making the work of the Chapter a success:

"The Chapter extends a hearty vote of thanks to all who so generously donated their services, in any capacity what-so-ever, during the past year,. toward furtherance of their War efforts. This includes Municipal and R. C. A. F. Bands, soloists and their accompanists, orchestras, choirs, owners and managers of places of amusement, private donors of money, clothing, quilts, blankets; homes for teas etc; Auxiliary knitters and sewers; co-operation of different business houses; Belleville Fair Board members; Ministerial Association; the Y. M. C. A. of the R. C. A. F. Trenton (through Mr. Reekie), and last, but by no mans least, the local press for readers and reports of the activities of the Chapter.

The Chapter paid special tribute to the owners and the Manager, (Mr. Mascaro) and staff, of the Capitol Theatre, for it is through the patriotic attitude of the personnel of the Capitol Theatre, that the Chapter, as a patriotic organization, has been able to raise a considerable amount of money to carry on a very necessary work at this time. This theatre has been thrown open voluntarily, ever since this War broke out, to us (and we understand to other organizations doing War work) free of any charge. A full staff of the theatre at our disposal and everything possible done to make our Band concerts a success. We just wanted the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to know this, as we think this theatre deserves the patronage of all patriotic peoples of this community.

If we have inadvertently left any group or single person out of this "Vote of Thanks", please remember we mean YOU too".

Mrs. Julia A. Backus, Secretary.

Women Must Accept New Role in Present Day Warfare Says Speaker

Mrs. Madge McBeth, of Ottawa, Addresses Women's Canadian Club Meeting

Women's traditional outlook on their part in war must be radically revised if they are to serve their Empire in the best possible way during this present war, Mrs. Madge McBeth, noted Canadian author, pointed out to members of the Women's Canadian Club at their opening meeting yesterday afternoon in her arresting address "Where is your Fifth Column". Mrs. McBeth's forceful words brought home to the women in her audience the full realization of the need of clear and vigorous thinking, practical and purposeful action in this war when women must forsake the old attitude of merely ministering to the wounded to that of taking their place with Britain's fighting men.

In ages past, wars were fought by men, on men. Both sides saved and protected its women. In this war women are not spared, for the enemy is not the courageous, gallant sort whose ideals could be respected, if not accepted. Today Britain is fighting men whose natures have been deliberately brutalized so that they will "stick" at nothing, who war on hospitals, on helpless refugees, and who do not shrink from mass murder of children on the high seas.

Women can no longer think of their part of war efforts as that of "ministering angels" but must stiffen their spirits and regard themselves in the light of fighting men. The sooner they do this the sooner war will be over.

How this old attitude can be very hampering was demonstrated to the speaker when she was endeavouring to raise funds to buy an anti-aircraft gun. Not one but a dozen women listened to her plea with horror at the idea of her asking women for money to buy weapons of destruction.

"What do you suppose the Germans are killing our boys with? Soap bubbles? Pea-shooters?" she asked them . Women must buy guns. They may even have to learn to use them.

It is important to gather hospital supplies for relieving pain after the harm has been done by the enemy but it is equally vital to gather defense equipment. If there were fifty times more airplanes and anti-aircraft guns there would be fifty times less need for ambulances and fifty times fewer broken hearts. This idea of working after men, women and children have been wounded must be changed. If women fought like men there would be less wounded.

On the other hand the work of knitting, sewing, of furthering Red Cross projects is magnificent and one would dare not think of what this war would be like if it were not for the Red Cross and its services. Yet in this war, there is the other side of the question.

"What we need most in this most horrible of all wars, and will need until it is over, is a constant feeding of equipment to our men and a rigid maintenance of the blockade", said Mrs. McBeth.

Stiffen Spirits

She urged her hearers to stiffen their spirits against appeals for food to the people of conquered countries. Such appeals are instigated by adroit enemy propaganda and even neutrals agree that such food supplies will never reach their objective but will be commandeered by Germany for her armies. Heart rending as these appeals may be it is better to have the agony of hungry stomachs endured by a few in one part of the world now, than to have agony-stricken souls all over the world. There is enough food in Europe, even now, for all, if it were fairly distributed. Women are warned not to be misled by appeals that have apparently no appearance of coming from Germany. That is the diabolic subtlety of the German propaganda machine, and Mrs. McBeth verified this statement with first hand information.

"If you send parcels to people in conquered countries, even when inspired by pity, and in good faith, with no intentioon of wrong-doing, by your act you might be supporting Canada's Fifth Column" pointed out the speaker. "Wherever Canadians are weak, wherever they are thoughtless, when they withhold help economically that will aid England, wherever they give help of any kind that will aid the enemy, that is where the Fifth Column lies. It is better to sacrifice some things now, than everything later, for England's collapse is your collapse".

Upheld Morale

Something more that women can do is to keep a tight rein on their morale, the seed of depression sown by careless talk may bear gloomy fruit in some one else's heart. Britain must have the confidence of every individual in the Empire. Another definite service women can render is by buying Empire made goods, Canadian preferably, but at any rate, Empire made. Thus the blockade may be maintained on the other side, keeping enemies from sending their products out to Canada.

Above all women can keep before the world and themselves the reason they are fighting.

"We are fighting for a proud and honourable past, built through sacrifice, hardship and dreams and we are fighting for a future. We are fighting for the fogs of Nova Scotia, the sweet warm rains of British Columbia, the heady scent of the Rockies, for the prairie countries, the lush valleys, the dark mines. We are fighting for our heritage of lakes and trees; for a vision that might be called Canada, a vision to hold before our men, ourselves, and the world. We are in great danger of losing it, and without vision, the people perish".

Program of Clubs

Appreciation of her splendid address was conveyed by Mrs. C. E. Argue to Mrs. McBeth. The members yesterday had the honor of entertaining the National Secretary of Canadian Clubs, Mrs. B. A. Wheeler, Ottawa, who told of the special part the Canadian Clubs are playing in war time work. They are supplying, at the request of the government, lecturers to visit the training camps, each month. They are also co-operating with the government by being the means of bringing before the public various kinds of propaganda, the voice of the government ,in a non political way. The more members there are enrolled in Canadian Clubs, the more people will be reached and the more war work will be accomplished. Mrs. Wheeler commended the Clubs for their part in war work, stressing the fact that in their undertakings they should not lose their identity as Women's Canadian Clubs.

Tea was served at the conclusion of the meeting.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

RECEIVING LINE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please tell me who is in the receiving line at a wedding reception, and what the proper procedure of the receiving line is? My daughter is being married next month, and we are very uncertain about this.

2. We also would like to plan to have a bride's table. Will you tell me what the correct seating is for this table?

3. I also understand that there is a difference between the "bride's cake" and the "wedding cake." If this is true, will you please explain this difference to me?

The Bride's Mother

1. At the wedding reception, whether it is formal or informal, the bride and bridegroom and the bride's attendants are a part of the receiving line. The best man and ushers never have places in the receiving line. As to the other members of the receiving line, there are no fixed rules. Customarily, however, and appropriately too, the bride's mother, who is the hostess of the occasion, and the bride's father, the host, stand first in the line to greet and welcome the guests. Next to the bride's mother and father, are, usually, the groom's father and mother. Then, next to his mother, the groom; at his right, the bride; at her right, the maid (or matron) of honor; and at her right, the bridesmaids.

As the guests arrive, they are greeted first by the bride's mother and father, and then they pass down the line, saying a few words of greeting, making some pleasant and appreciative comment about the "beautiful wedding," "the lovely bride", or other gracious remark.

2. When all the guests have been received, the bride and bridegroom and their attendants take their places at the bride's table. The bride sits at the right of the bridegroom; the best man at the right of the bride; the maid of honor at the left of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids and ushers are seated alternately.

3. The bride's cake is a white cake, iced, and often elaborately decorated. It is usually given the place of honor on the table, used as the centerpiece. The bride cuts the first slice of this cake, and shares it with the bridegroom. If the reception is a small one, she usually cuts the cake for the rest of the guests. If it is a large reception, an attendant cuts a slice for every guest. If it is a buffet, the guests may cut the cake for themselves.

The wedding cake is a dark fruit cake. Sometimes this is served in slices, but usually small monogrammed boxes of this cake are placed on a table near the door, so that each departing guest may take a box as a momento of the wedding.

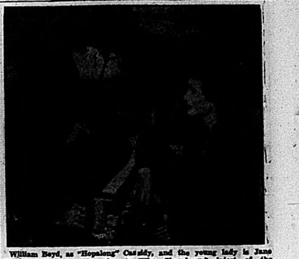
ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Dar Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correst acknowledgment of an introduction?

Wondering Reader.

"How do you do" is the correct acknowledgment of an introduction. Use these yords and you'll always be right. And you'll be gracious if you add the person's name, if you are sure that you heard it correctly . . . "How do you do, Miss Robinson."



William Boyd, as "Hopalong" Cassidy, and the young lady is Jane Clayton. This scene takes place in "The Showdown," latest of the popular Cassidy pictures, which opens next at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Woman In Distress," starring May Robson.

Convulsions in Children

Mothers are always excited and worried when a young child has a convulsion. Yet in most cases their fear is far greater than the convulsion warrants, for in young children the convulsion is more or less common and not serious. Apparently a human's nervous system isn't fully developed until about the age of three, and during this period it takes but little to upset the nervous system and bring on a convulsion. A child may react with a convulsion to some simple little infection which would cause an older person to have only a chill or fever.

Most people are so frightened by convulsions in children because they think they are a disease. The fact is they are only the symptoms of disease and they may be brought on by many conditions.

The sight of a convulsion is, of course, very frightening, and fills the ordinary person with a great feeling of helplessness. With little or no warning, the patient falls down, the eyes diverge, the arms, legs and head jerk and twist uncontrollably while the face becomes red and sometimes blue in color. The body alternately relaxes and stiffens for periods ranging from a few seconds to several minutes. All this time the patient may also be frothing at the mouth.

During the convulsion the child will be unconscious and when it is over, he will lapse into a deep sleep which may last for half an hour or may go on for two or three hours. When he awakens, he will feel quite weak, and will have no memory whatever of the attack.

Treatment for the rodinary convulsion, as distinguished from the epileptic fit, is easy, and simple—do nothing, or little. Many people believe that if the body's jerkings and twistings can be restrained the patient will be helped. The fact is, this doesn't do a bit of good. All the onlooker can do to help is hold the victim's head so it doesn't strike something, and, if the jaws are working spasmodically, as they often do, insert a corner of a towel between the teeth so the child doesn't bite its tongue.

Other than this, there is nothing to be done effectively. When the attack subsides, the patient should be left wherever he is to sleep as long as he will. This sleep is very beneficial and interrupting it is actually harmful to the patient.

Of course, a doctor should be summoned at once, for convulsions are, as I said, a symptom of a disease, probably a warning of the onset of some infection. The doctor, forewarned by a convulsion, can often stave off a serious illness by recognizing its symptoms before it has taken a really firm hold.

If School is Strain on Nerves

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Your child who always seemed healthy, happy and cooperative may, a few weeks after entering school, grow jittery, quarrelsome and stubborn. A cheery, smiling youngster once, he may grow suddenly peevish and ill-natured. He may not get to sleep promptly nor sleep soundly. He may have a strained demeanor and often cry. He may be hard to manage and get along with.

The change in the child may have resulted from the new experiences at school — less opportunity to move about freely, problems of adaptation to so many other children, stimulation from the classroom and playground activities. Then he may feel the need of competing in lessons and play. Or perhaps he may suffer from eye-strain.

Any such irregularity in the school child should suggest the need of a complete check by a physician, probably also by an eye specialist, and more strictness in the child's routine. Be sure he goes to bed early enough and does not rise too early. Let him learn to sleep in the morning till called at a regular time. It can be done.

Curb Exciting Diversions

Exciting radio programs, always bad for the child, are especially harmful to the nervous child and should be summarily forbidden. Also he should not go to the movies often. His parents should, however, treat him with great patience and generous affection.

In extreme cases, this child should be required to lie down half an hour before the evening meal. Dad might quiet him then by reading to him. He should lie down for at least one hour on Saturday and on Sunday. On the advice of the physician, this child should stay home from school a day or half-day a week, varying the days, until marked improvement is shown. The wise teacher will assign this child to special brief rest periods at school.

No doubt more children grow nervous after entering school because of problems of getting along with other children than because of problems of book learning. Some children are in constant dread of bullies. Their sufferings are indescribable, especially if they lack the courage to stand up in self-defense with their fists. Boxing lessons should help a few of these intimidated children.

Parents of tots should encourage these youngsters to get into the rough and tumble of the neighborhood playground, fighting their own battles and settling their own quarrels. The better the child in these early years has learned to get along with other children his age, the fewer problems he will have after entering school and the less likely, therefore, he will be to suffer from nervous strain.

ROOSEVELT MAKES FIRST CAMPAIGN ADDRESS TONIGHT

President Will Speak at Philadelphia and Observers Say He Will "Take His Gloves Off"

STILL CONFIDENT

Issues Not Clear-Cut and Possibly Will be Decided on Advisability of Third Term

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 23 —(CP)— Whether President Roosevelt took a leaf from the book of Prime Minister Mackenzie King or is merely driven by the same set of circumstances, he has conducted the present election campaign in a manner similar to that adopted by the Canadian Prime Minister last winter.

Like Mr. King, the President announced at the outset that he would be unable to stump the country because of the necessity of his remaining close to Washington while the situation abroad was so critical.

But, as Mr. King did, he will make a number of political speeches in centres close to the capital, the first of them tonight in Philadelphia.

Mr. Roosevelt"s appearance on a Philadelphia platform tonight will be his first outright campaign speech in this strangest and hardest fought United States campaign in 25 years.

It is hardest fought, Washington observers declare, from the point of view of the whirlwind campaign of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate, and the efforts of the third-term opponents to defeat Mr. Roosevelt.

No Clear-Cut Issues

It is strange because of the almost complete lack of clear-cut issues between the parties. Both are avowedly determined to continue all aid possible to the British war cause and to keep he United States out of war by attaining superiority on land, sea and air.

Reports of increasing Willkie sentiment appear to leave Mr. Roosevelt unperturbed. Yesterday he leaned back in his office chair, shirt-sleeved and confident, to tell correspondents at his regular press conference that his private election forecast of three weeks ago still held good.

With war and defence the predominant thought in the minds of all Americans it would appear that the only choice to be made by the people Nov. 5 is one between personalities and between whatever conflicting views the electors may hold on the advisability of electing a president for a third consecutive term as against swapping horses while crossing a stream.

From the platform of his special train, and at several mass meetings President Roosevelt will turn the full force of his personality upon the voters in Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio. His formal speeches will be broadcast.

Always Near Washington.

But he will remain always within the "12-hour limit" of Washington, the President said. This means that he will never be more than a 12-hour journey from the White House.

"In the interests of peace, Mr. Roosevelt said, he should remain close to his desk. Later, if the tension abroad seemed to be lessening, he might do some travelling farther afield.

Meanwhile Congress, technically in session, meets occasionally only to adjourn within a few minutes. This is unusual during an election campaign in the United States but it arises from the same circumstance that has kept the Canadian parliament adjourned since last August to be ready for instant action if an emergency demanded it.

The entire House of Representatives of 435 members must be elected Nov. 5 and one-third of the senate of 96 members. Most of the Representatives are away on the hustings and it is seldom there is a quorum for the rare House sittings held during the campaign.

May Lean To Willkie.

Political Washington is keenly interested in the speech to be made by John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on Friday night when it is generally expected he will at least lean toward Willkie if he does not go all out for the Republican cause.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference yesterday if, from his recent talk with Lewis he could give any indication of what the labor leader would say.

But Mr. Roosevelt smilingly replied that he hadn't the faintest idea. He said the forthcoming speech had not been discussed with him.

Arrangements are being made for the Lewis speech to be heard by about 30,000,000 people, estimated to be the largest audience that can be reached in the United States by radio. It is expected to cost about $65,000 for the hook-up.

Franco-German Peace Settlement Said to Rest on France's Acceptance Of Terms Embodied in Seven Clauses

London, Oct. 23—(CP)—A Reuters' News Agency dispatch today quoted the Zurich newspaper Volksrecht as listing the following seven points as the proposed German basis for a settlement with Vichy, France:

1. Northern French Morocco to be handed over to Spain.
2. Indo-China to be handed over to Japan.
3. Tunis to be divided between France and Italy.
4. The remaining French African colonies to be jointly administered and exploited by, France, Germany and Italy except Algeria, which would remain French.
5. Vichy to place the Mediterranean fleet and the north African Air Force at the disposal of the axis for use against Britain.
6. Germany to get Alsace-Lorraine and Italy to get Nice.
7. In return, Germany to evacuate all of occupied France except the Channel ports and a strip of Burgundy along the Swiss frontier to the Belgian frontier and the Somme.

The despatch said Marshal Petain had led the fight against acceptance.

The diplomatic correspondent of Reuters wrote that "the most surprising thing about the meeting between Hitler and Laval is that it should have taken place at all."

"That Hitler at this moment should find it necessary or desirable to see Laval tells the story itself," he added. "That four months after the downfall of France, Germany should come to realize that something may yet be made out of the despondent and defeated remnants of the great empire is a remarkable confession not of the latent strength of France but of the desperate need of Germany . . .

"Although most of the French fleet has been sunk, immobilized or is in British harbors, there still remains a very respectable number of units, including a modern battle cruiser that would form a notable addition to axis naval strength in the Mediterranean.

"It is, however, too early to assume that the Vichy Government has sunk so low that it would submit to such humiliating conditions."

City's Application for New North Front Street Bridge Refused by Transport Board

The application of the City of Belleville for an order directing the widening of the Canadian National Railway's bridge on North Front Street, highway No. 14, to provide safer conditions for present day vehicular traffic and the motion of the Belleville Board of Education to alleviate the hazardous situation with the possible erection of a pedestrian bridge on the west side of the said bridge was refused by the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada that met at the Court House here today to consider these questions.

After receiving the motions from both the City of Belleville and the Board of Education and hearing the testimony of all parties concerned, including the Canadian National Railways, Col. J. A. Cross, Chief Commissioner of the Board, said on behalf of the Board's findings:

Board's Decision

"The City of Belleville asks for the widening of the C.N.R. bridge at North Front Street. The only complaint on the part of the city is the fact they contend the bridge is too narrow for present-day vehicular traffic, it being but 19 feet one inch wide on the centre travelled portion.

"This bridge was constructed in 1917 and resurfaced with asphalt in 1926. This Board inspected the bridge, which forms part of Highway No. 14 and agree there is much traffic passing this point. The capacity of the bridge is sound and the normal life of the structure isn't impeded, as I understand the usual life of such a structure is from 50 to 60 years.

"It has been suggested to erect a new bridge. The cost of a 28-foot bridge would be about $35,000, while the estimated cost of a 24-foot bridge would be about $30,000. After this it would cost the City of Belleville approximately $15,000 for the erection of adequate approaches, which would mean an estimated cost all told of something like $50,000.

"There have been no serious accidents on this bridge, which is a credit to the users, of course. Traffic at this point is under the control of the city authorities. We feel for the safety of the public and especially the school children, but perhaps a little more energy and pressure on the part of the Board and the Council might reap the necessary benefits.

"The city has a perfect right to come before this Board with such a motion and after viewing the case both bodies have doubtless devoted much energy to the cause.

"However, this Board cannot grant the application at this time and it is therefore refused. The city is quite free to make further application in this matter, but we are devoting our energies to one cause now. However, if the railway and city do not reach a mutual agreement the Board will entertain any future application for consideration," concluded Col. Cross.

The Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada presiding at Belleville today consisted of Col. Cross, Chief Commissioner, Hugh Wardrope, Assistant-Commissioner and Commissioner J. A. Stoneman.

Railway Represented

R. E. Laidlaw K.C., assistant Regional counsel for the Canadian National Railways represented the C.N.R. "I wonder if the Board of Education has sought police protection at this point?" asked Mr. Laidlaw, who was later informed by the Board of Education representatives that such had been sought, but that the Belleville Police Department was under-manned and unable to co-operate.

"If the council and Board of Education agree to mutual terms upon the construction of approaches to the west side of the bridge, there is no doubt they would be met favourably by us regarding the west pedestrian bridge," intimated Mr. Laidlaw.

A. B. Collins K.C., city solicitor for the City of Belleville, Alderman J. Allin, chairman, Alderman R. Pringle, Mayor Thompson and City Engineer Chas. Mott represented the city, while Rev. A. B. Payne, chairman H. B. Fetterly and Mr. L. A. Kells, principal of King George School spoke on behalf of the Board of Education, while R. E. Laidlaw K.C., E. R. Logie, C.E., for the C.N.R. and Mr. J. F. Pringle, General Superintendent of the C.N.R., Toronto, represented the railway.

Sketches and drawings of the bridge and approaches were submitted by Charles A. Mott, city engineer, while Mr. Collins held in argument that it would be impossible to restrict the speed limit of motor vehicles at this point, as it is a provincial highway.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Germany's attempt to enlist the active aid of the Petain-Laval administration apparently fell flat today as a Vichy spokesman said his government would fight no one. Simultaneously came reports of increased activity in France of adherents to the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Indication that German efforts to buy French help with an offer of a cheap peace had failed came swiftly after the efforts were advertised in Berlin. At the same time it was disclosed in London that Royal Air Force activity had affected 20 per cent of Germany's war-time production.

Hamburg Port Virtually Destroyed

Britons were cheered by an authoritative statement on R.A.F. damage to German war industry in a "master plan" of destruction which has produced among its results the virtual destruction of the great port of Hamburg which the Germans now consider must be rebuilt. Plans for rebuilding of "Hanseatic Hamburg" were advertised in the Berlin newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter with promises of steady employment for persons ranging in rank from architects to low-grade clerks.

Arrests in France

Indications of mounting disaffection among French citizens came in an announcement that 75 "Communists" had been arrested in the Marseille vicinity and charged with disseminating De Gaulle propaganda. Elsewhere in unoccupied France other arrests were made for similar offences against the new regime.

The declaration that France would not fight Britain came from Foreign Minister Paul Beaudoin while another Foreign Office spokesman declared his country would undertake "no military, naval nor aerial action against England."

This statement followed a mysterious meeting "somewhere in France" between Hitler and Vice-Premier Pierre Laval who was reported yesterday to be leaning towards some sort of Franco-German collaboration.

Growing German Weakness Seen

Neutral observers saw indications of growing German weakness in the approach to the Vichy government. As one observer put it: "You don't look for a partner when business is good."

A hint of the damage and distress the R.A.F. is causing in Berlin was seen in the announcement of plans to send 75 special trainloads of children from the German capital to less congested and safer areas, a course similar to that taken in London even before the war started.

WAR INDUSTRIES REQUIRE ADEQUATE NUMBER OF MEN

Effectiveness of Army Depends on Provision of Sufficient Manpower in Industry

Ottawa, Oct. 23 (CP)—The Canadian army recognizes that provision of adequate manpower for industry is essential if the army is to be made fully effective, Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff, told Ottawa Canadian Club today.

Gen. Crerar said there were two important reasons for his recommendation to limit to 30 days the initial training period of recruits called into the Non-Permanent Active Militia for compulsory military training:

1. The short training period enabled a larger number of young Canadians to gain a proper conception of their national obligations within a given time.

2. Canada's limited supply of modern weapons made it impracticable just now to carry the individual training of these young men beyond the basic stage.

These factors, he said, were not of enduring importance, and as Defence Minister Ralston stated recently, consideration was being given to possible alterations in the training schedule in order to adjust the period of compulsory training to changes and improvements in conditions and to the requirements of industry.

But it was his honest opinion, Gen. Crerar added, "that the trained and efficient munitions worker, who unselfishly puts his every ounce into the production of weapons urgently needed for our fighting forces in the United Kingdom and Canada is, at the moment, rendering a vital service to the defence of his country."

REPORTER VIEWS FRENCH ATTITUDE

Observers Find it Difficult to Believe France Would Willingly Enter War as German Ally

(Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press roving reporter, recently returned from four months spent in France covering the defeat of the Republic and post-armistice developments, gives in this story his observations regarding current Franco-German negotiations.)

(By Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 23—(AP)—Unless Britain makes some colossal diplomatic or military blunder which irreparably antagonizes the French people, informed observers—here and in France—find it hard to believe that France will willingly re-enter the war as an ally of Germany.

Rumors and reports similar to those now emanating from Berlin which predict that France may join the axis powers in return for favorable peace terms, have circulated in France from time to time, but have always been discounted immediately.

Popular Vote Would Probably Oppose War

Few Frenchmen believe France has the strength, will or desire to re-enter the war on either side. A popular vote would probably show a tremendous majority against any military activity directed against Britain. The few belligerently-minded Frenchmen I met were, on the contrary, anti-German and favored helping Britain, if possible. Most, however, shrugged their shoulders and exclaimed: "If we could not stand up against the Germans when we were supposed to be prepared, what could we do now?"

Many Frenchmen do, nevertheless, envisage the day when the Germans, grown either desperate or bold, will force the French to render Germany every possible assistance "short of war."

The Vichy Government is not in a position to refuse to co-operate with Germany if it demands territorial concessions, insists on closer diplomatic collaboration, seizes French warships or planes to be used against Britain or makes other bayonet-backed "suggestions."

The Vichy Government — which includes two men of anti-British views, Vice-Premier Pierre Laval and Foreign Minister Baudouin—emphasized yesterday its willingness to co-operate with Germany, once a "just" peace is obtained for France. Baudouin said it would be "imbecile, insane and absurd" to do otherwise for geographic, military and economic reasons.

France today actually is surrounded by Germany and its axis associates, dominated by German guns and almost completely dependent on Germany economically.

Many observers consider German pressure, plus willing (or otherwise) co-operation of the present French Government, can go a long way toward achieving the most of the complete collaboration the Germans demand—except France's participation in the war.

MAJOR ISSUE TO WIN THIS WAR IN EUROPE-CRERAR

'At the Same Time Our Local Defence Must Not be Neglected,' Says Chief of Staff

WAR'S OUTLOOK

General Crerar in Address at Ottawa Says Decisive Victory Against German Land Forces Necessary

Ottawa, Oct. 23—(CP) — Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar said today Canadians face a difficult military problem, but he added his belief that "with determination and effective effort we will be equal to it and that we shall contribute our full and powerful share to the overthrow of the evil forces which confront us."

Decisive Victory Foreseen

The chief of the Canadian general staff said that given something approaching equality in numbers and armament, there is no reason to doubt that the empire forces can meet and defeat the German armies "even more decisively, if that be possible," than they did 25 years ago.

But he warned his Ottawa Canadian Club audience that situations might arise in the future which would seem even more desperate or critical than those experienced in the past.

"We would be wise to brace ourselves to the prospects of this war becoming a cataclysm from which no continent and few nations will be spared," Gen. Crerar said.

"The greatest gangster of all time is on the march. The usual initial gangster success of cruel and determined might over human right are now being demonstrated in respect to nations and continents."

Balance In Effort Necessary.

Gen. Crerar said Canada must constantly strive to attain balance in her military development, and there were great difficulties.

"For instance, the enlistment of large numbers of eager men is more quickly done than the less obvious, more complicated, but equally essential action of gearing up industry to produce all the arms and equipment they need," he explained.

"At the present time, these components, unquestionably, are not balanced. We have a large active service force mobilized in this country. We have scores of thousands of officers and men in our reserve formations.

"But we have some distance to go before our supplies of armament and equipment can be brought up to the level of the requirements of war or existing fighting manpower.

Concentrate On Two Objects.

"Our present efforts must therefore concentrate on two things. We must utilize to the full all the skill, ingenuity and facilities we now possess to advance the fundamental training of all ranks now in our army in the science and art of their profession.

"We must also intensify our efforts towards the complete provision of the armament required by those men before they are called upon to meet the enemy in battle."

Aim To Win War In Europe.

Gen. Crerar said he holds the view—and he was not alone in doing so—that the major issue confronting Canada in particular and North America in general is "to win this war in Europe and so prevent any possibility of this continent finding itself in a definitely isolated and exposed stuation,"

"At the same time our direct defence must not be neglected," he continued, "and it is not being neglected."

Joint Defence.

"It is being approached in the most effective manner possible, namely, by joint action on the part of the United States and Canada in respect to such problems as have a common bearing on the security of our respective frontiers."

Static Defence Inviting Defeat

A lesson learned in the present war was that reliance on static defence and an army of defensive type is "inviting defeat", and does not provide the dynamic force requized for victory.

"The failure of the Allies has been due to the lack of attacking power", he said.

Hitler now "urgently needs and desires" peace, Gen. Crerar said, but it would be dishonorable to the Allies and dangerous beyond words to the whole world. The German people had been promised peace with victory by the end of this year.

"It may be that within this period Hitler may find himself able to claim still further territorial conquests", he said, "but so long as the British Empire continues to fight here will be no ignoble peace".

Certainty of another winter of war under worse economic conditions, with more hostile nations to hold down and with constant air raids might be expected to have a "profoundly depressing effect on the German population". However, it would be inviting disaster to assume that Hitler's "obvious failure" in the battle of Britain permitted the slightest slackening in the Empire's war effort.

Victory By Defeat of German Land Forces

The Empire and its Allies could not be assured of decisive victory unless they meet and defeat the German land forces in battle. Hitler's armies still had a superiority in numbers and a considerable superiority in equipment, but he could not utilize the advantage without similar domination of the seas and in the air.

"I suggest that providing we maintain our superiority afloat and reach at least equality in the air, Hitler has exposed himself to conditions which will place him under greatly increasing disadvantages as regards operations on land", Gen. Crerar said.

Hitler Has to Continue Seeking Decision

Hitler had greatly extended his boundaries, and this strategical over-extension would increase rather than diminish. The German dictator had to continue searching, even more distantly, for a decision. This was the reason for the commencement of operations in North East Africa, the chief responsibility for which falls on the "unhappy and unwilling forces" of Mussolini, and the "obvious German intention" of extending the war to, and through, the Balkans.

KIWANIS MEMBERS PLAY HOSTS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Banquet Held at Cannifton United Church for Those Working in Poultry Project of Club

PRIZES AWARDED

Kiwanis Club members enjoyed one of the finest banquets in years at the Cannifton United Church last evening, when they played hosts to the school children of six schools in Thurlow and Sidney Townships, who carried out the Poultry Project, outlined by the Kiwanis Club. Lyle Hunter of the Swift Canadian Company, and L. G. Fair, Agriculture Representative for Hastings County, who materially assisted in putting the scheme across were special guests at the luncheon. To the ladies of Cannifton United Church a special word of praise should be forthcoming for they provided a most bountiful repast, which included plenty of chicken and all the accessories that go with a splendid meal. The thanks of the Club was tendered to the ladies by "Dick" Flynn, president of the Club, and also to Alec Gordon, who ably acted as accompanist for the community singing conducted by Jack McIntosh. Ed Willing collected the fines but was balked on several occasions.

Charlie Tripp in Charge

Charlie Tripp, chairman of the Agriculture committee and his members, Bruce Bottum, Jim Cowan, Herb Fox, Harold Seldon and Ross Stiver had charge of the meeting, after the business was concluded with Mr. Tripp presiding as chairman and a fine job Charlie did. Mr. Tripp outlined the project in its entirety naming the schools taking part and the interest that was displayed from the first announcement. Mr. Bird of Centenary, Miss Sine of Fourth Line Sidney, Miss Hall of 3rd Thurlow, Mr. Godwin of 5th Sidney, and Miss Spencer of 2nd Thurlow were all congratulated for their keen interest. Mr. Elliott was unable to be present due to a heavy cold. The prize-winners were given, with Leroy Sills of the 3rd of Thurlow School receiving the major prize for having the best judged flock of chickens raising 24 out of the 25 given him.

The Prize Winners

The other prize winners were: 3rd Thurlow, John Wilson and Mary Hamilton; 2nd Thurlow, William Leeming and Lorne Dougherty; Centenary, Evelyn Ray and Bruce Holton; 4th Sidney, Adelaide Hall and Alice Brenay; Wallbridge, Jack Moore and Marguerite Shorey and 5th Sidney, Vincent Mulvihill and Ethel Striker. The youngest girl to take part in the project was Lois Benedict, aged seven, and the oldest, Doris Waite of Centenary and Gerald Johnson of Wallbridge, both 15.

Members of each school contributed to the program that followed and the solos, duets, guitars and piano selections were quite pleasing showing the splendid instruction given by the teachers of the several schools. The Swift Canadian Company trophy for the schools having the best chickens was won by S. S. No. 3 Thurlow and was accepted by Miss Spencer. Mr. Lyle Hunter, who made the presentation of the fine trophy stated he was pleased with the Kiwanis Club for enlarging the project and hoped that it would be further enlarged another year. He stated that the project built a closer contact between the Kiwanis Club and the rural communities, that it provided the students with a project and that it could be developed into something of real value. Mr. Hunter explained that 72 per cent of the chickens placed out were raised to majority and that seven out of the sixty pupils having chicks raised 24 out of the 25 given them. He showed that the combined value of the chickens left with the pupils was between $800 and $900. The speaker explained the competition was very keen and he believed much good would come of the activity of the students in this type of school work.

Mr. Fair Heard

Mr. L. G. Fair stated that the children would receive untold experience from the project particularly when the country needs all the foodstuffs it can get. He asked the children left at home, whose brothers were in khaki to carry on and assist the parents on the farms whenever possible because he said, "You can be as great soldiers of the land as the boys in khaki." He told the pupils "that if you are good to the poultry the poultry will be good to you." A prize given for the child having the closest birthday to October 22nd, was won by Jack Stolliker, who was celebrating his birthday at the banquet.

The aims and objectives of the Kiwanis Club were explained by Cliff Baragar, the speaker dwelling on the rule "to build a better community" and he believed gatherings such as the one last night were the simplest and the finest way to foster that co-operation so urgently needed at the present time. Bruce Lattimer was given the privilege of introducing Larry Langlois as a new member of the club and Eddie Logan extended the welcome of the club to the visitors.

Madawaska Power Development to Start at Once

Dr. T. H. Hogg, Speaking at Kingston, Says Project Will Cost $7,000,000

USING MORE POWER

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 23.—(CP)—Work will start at once on the Madawaska Power development at a cost of $7,000,000 Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, announced today at the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electrical Association.

The plant itself will cost $5,500,000 and there will be an additional expenditure of $1,500,000 for a storage plant at Dark Lake. Madawaska will develop 54,000 horsepower.

Dr. Hogg said that a gang of 100 men is already doing preliminary work at Madawaska.

The St. Lawrence Power project is also becoming more of a reality, Dr. Hogg told members of the Association.

"It is a distinct advance when they got to the stage where they set down on paper the engineering and construction problems", he said.

With a capital investment of $20,000,000 and a total reserve of $10,000,000 the Hydro-Electric Power Commission is in a "most happy position for the future". The surplus this year will be approximately $500,000.

The time is rapidly approaching when it would be advantageous for Southern Ontario to merge the Niagara, Eastern and Georgian Bay Power Systems, said Dr. Hogg. Question of amalgamation may come sooner than many now realize, he added.

"The Board will start immediately to crystalize the idea as far as it can be done on paper", said Mr. Hogg.

Tremendous increase in the amount of electric power being consumed was described by Dr. Hogg. In September, 1939, the peak load was 141,200 horsepower and this year it was 155,174 or an increase of 10 per cent.

The expected peak in November will be 185,000 horsepower and in 1941 it will be 195,000 or 200,000 for the same month.

"I think we can estimate for at least another 30,000 horsepower for the winters of 1942-43", he said.

"The increase will be double that of normal times".

The Eastern system has a peak capacity of 152,000 horsepower which is 20,000 to 25,000 less the capacity that loads will be this fall.

"We are too close to the line", warned Dr. Hogg. "We have been left on a delicate edge because the new loads have come on so suddenly. We must make early decision about new capacities and new capacities can't be provided before 1941. We will have to carry on through 1941-42 with present facilities".

16-YEAR-OLD GIRL SHOT IN BACK AT NIAGARA FALLS

Her Alleged Assailant Rushes to His Apartment and Fires Bullet Into Head

DEFIES POLICE

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP)—A 16-year-old girl, Ruth McKenna, is seriously wounded and William Poynton, 41, is dead as a result of a double shooting here shortly after noon today.

The girl was shot by Poynton as she walked along the street. Poynton died in hospital later from a self-inflicted wound. No inquest will be held.

The man had previously been charged with molesting girls and last year was sentenced to ninety days for attempting to intimidate the girl wounded today.

Police said Poynton today overtook the girl on the street, drew an automatic and shot her. The bullet entered one side and came out the other. It was found on the street later by police.

After the shooting Poynton ran to his apartment nearby. When police arrived there, they ordered him to come out and hammered on the door. He threatened to shoot if they entered, they said. They were preparing to use tear gas to force the man out of the apartment when they heard a shot inside. Breaking in the door, they found Poynton lying in a pool of blood, a bullet in his head.

Though seriously wounded, Miss McKenna was able to tell police her assailant was Poynton.

The contracts, let in Ontario, their approximate cost, approximate completion dates and contractors employed were:

Air Armament School, Trenton, Ont., $10,000, wood construction, November, W. C. Brennan Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Elementary Flying Training School, Brantford, Ontario, $9,000, heating systems, November, R. H. Steen Co., Toronto.

SIR CHARLES HARINGTON DIED

H. G. Wells Assailed in British House for Slurs on Throne, Religion

London, Oct. 23.—(CP)—H. G. Wells, the novelist, and Prince Ernst Von Starhemberg, former vice-chancellor of Austria who is now serving as a lieutenant in the Free French Air Force were the targets of criticism in the House of Commons today.

Earl Winterton, Conservative, assailed Mr. Wells on the ground that the author "for years past has suggested that the throne is a mediaeval and useless institution, that the Christian religion is superstition and that the whole structure of society is rotten".

Mr. Wells is now in the United States.

Osbert Peake, under-secretary for Home Affairs, somewhat lightened the atmosphere by quipping that all agreed to the eminence of the novelist, "at any rate in the world of fiction", and added:

"There would be no United States of America and we should not now be having this debate had permits been required when the Mayflower left these shores in 1620".

Lord Winterton questioned the wisdom of allowing Mr. Wells "to run down his country abroad—of all places in the United States".

(This was an evident reference to Mr. Wells' recent assertion in the United States that Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax should be removed from the government.)

A government spokesman declared: "It would be fatal if the idea got about in America that we were only going to permit to proceed to that country those persons whose views were favorable to the government. We must leave it to the good sense of the American public to assess the value of Mr. Wells' views."

Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Independent, asked if it was not "indecent" that Prince von Stahremberg, "who assassinated democracy in Austria, should now be allowed to fight on our side and be paid by us in a war for democracy."

Capt. Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, replied: 'Anyone who is willing now to risk his life and fight in our cause is entitled to our gratitude."

The House roared with cries of "Order! Order!" as Col. Wedgwood continued his tirade, in which he called the prince a "traitor" and a "scoundrel".

In the furore over Mr. Wells' comments abroad, Capt. Peake pointed out that Wells' lectures were earning dollars "which are of great importance," Lord Winterton interjected.

"Then why not let Sir Oswald Mosley out on parole to go to the U.S.A. and lecture?"

Tension in the House was broken by laughter at the jest about Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, who is under arrest as a suspected "fifth columnist".

Game This Weekend Between the Two Clubs Will be a Real Contest

(By The Canadian Press)

Diplomatic relations between Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders, strained severely many a time in the past, showed signs today of actually reaching the breaking point.

The latest bit of friction between the two clubs arises from an injury suffered by half-back Tony Golab of the Riders in last Saturday's game against Argos.

Golab suffered a back injury in the contest, won 41-8 by the Riders which is likely to keep him out of action for the remainder of the season. At present, the interprovincial Rugby Football Union is in a turmoil over demands by business manager Jim McCaffrey of the Riders for an investigation into the play in which Golab was hurt.

The football season wouldn't seem complete without at least one scrap between the two clubs. It was only two season ago that a similar situation arose when Harry Sonshine, a top-flight flying wing with the Argonauts, had his jaw broken in a game with Riders.

Great Fuss Stirred Up

The Golab incident, however, seems to have stirred up the greatest fuss in Eastern Canadian football since the season of 1935 when it was revealed that an American playing with Ottawa under the name of Roy Berry was in reality Bohn Hilliard.

There was quite a to-do about Berry-Hilliard, particularly after Argonauts won the first six games of their nine-game schedule and then lost the last three to be nosed out for first place by Hamilton Tigers. Argos played Riders in the last game of the season needing a victory to clinch the top position, but Berry-Hilliard ran wild to give Riders the game.

While the talk over the Golab affair continues the teams in the East are still undergoing heavy drills in preparation for game this Saturday. Most of the interest, naturally, centres in the return game at Toronto between Argonauts and Riders.

Coach Bill Hughes of Montreal may trot out a newcomer against Hamilton Tigers at Montreal in the person of Norm Bertrand, a 20-year-old Ottawa boy now working in Montreal. Hughes also had another new player at practice last night. He was Tom Glenn, a 230-pound lineman who worked out early in the season with Riders but then obtained a position in Montreal.

Ross Will Stand Pat on Lineup Of Last Year

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 23 (AP)—The Boston Bruins play their second exhibition hockey game at the pre-season training tonight, meeting the Hershey Bear Farm team, which they defeated 2-1 last Saturday night.

The Bruins forward line of Bill Cowley, Roy Conacher and Mel Hill will do double duty tonight, making up a wave in a preliminary game for the Hershey All-Stars against the Bruin amateurs in addition to their regular chores with the Boston club.

As the training season draws to an end, indications are that General Manager Art Ross will stand pat on his lineup which bore the brunt of the 1939-1940 campaign.

DAY INSISTS TEAM WILL PLAY TWO-WAY HOCKEY

Accent Will be on Back-Checking an Art Lost Last Year by Leafs

BUILDS ATTACK

Coach Day Given Complete Control of Team on Ice by Connie Smythe

By Dick Sheridan Canadian Press Staff Writer.

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP)—Clarence (Hap) Day of Toronto Leafs who claims he's trying to make the team himself, has no radical experiments in mind for his first National Hockey League tutoring job. But he does insist on two-way hockey, with the accent on backchecking.

Day, a former Leaf defenceman and league official the past few years, succeeds Dick Irvin to the Toronto coaching job. Irvin is handling Montreal Canadiens.

In theory, Day claims hockey, offensively and defensively, is a 50-50 proposition. A team in an average game has the puck only half the time he contends.

So working on this presumption, which he says is agreed to by Manager Conn Smythe, Day is building up an attack by packing up his defence. When his players are moving fast both ways, they're bound to get goals, he reasons.

This system calls for good physical condition, a subject the new coach dotes on. A non-drinker and non-smoker, Hap is physically fit at all times.

Whether it is in the early morning walks or the whirls around the ice after each scrimmage—the players claim this is the hardest part of their training—Day leads the way. He even drops back to urge on the laggards.

Day has practically the same team that fought such a rousing fight before losing the Stanley Cup to New York Rangers last year.

Born in Owen Sound 39 years ago, he played on Toronto teams for 14 years before finishing his playing career with New York Americans in 1938.

He is popular with Toronto fans who are hoping he will bring the Leafs their first Stanley Cup since 1932. Day was a member of that championship club.

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Chitter chatter: J. M. Saunderson has coached football at Morningside College for 29 straight years and who can beat that?. . Sam Snead's older brother, Pete, is assistant pro at a Club in Hot Springs, Va. They look so much alike visitors often say to Pete: "Hello, Sam" . . . when Floyd Giebels, young Tiger pitcher, bumped into Pat Mullen his old room-mate at Buffalo the other day he pulled out his world's series roll stripped off two fifties and said "There's a wedding present for you, Butch". . . . .(Pat gets married down in West Virginia today).

When Dick Chapman won the French amateur golf championship last year, the French wouldn't let him bring him the trophy . . . made him take a picture of it, instead . . . ALL IN HOW YOU LOOK AT IT

There are some big moments in football for the players as well as the fans—thrills that the fans know nothing about. For instance at TOP, Vince Dennery of the Fordham university Rams gives you the reaction of an end charging in to block a punt. The kicker's foot looks as big as an automobile and just as irresistible. CENTRE, how the hand of Len Eshmont of the Rams looks at the big end of a straight arm. This is from the would-be tackler's viewpoint. BOTTOM, the ball doesn't look any too small to Joe Ungerer as he stands ready to receive a pass tossed by Fordham's Flip Filipowicz. This was a nice easy peg. Flip can sling 'em to make the ball appear about the size of a peanut with the speed of a bullet.

N. H. L. Training Camp Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

Jockeys have nothing on hockey players when it comes to watching their weight. Take Gordie Drillon, the big right wing star with Toronto Maple Leafs, as an example. Drillon reported for training at 201 pounds. He says that his best playing weight is 187 which means that he'll be bearing down plenty to take off those extra pounds in the next two weeks.

Another star bothered with the weight bogey is Hector (Toe) Blake of Montreal Canadiens. National Hockey League scoring champion two season ago, Blake reported in camp at St. Hyacinthe, Que., weighing 190 pounds. Five of those pounds have disappeared already and Toe says that five more will go before Canadiens open thea regular schedule on Nov. 3.

Art Ross, who talks, thinks and probably dreams hockey, has come up with another novel idea. Ross is the man who invented the goal nets now in use around the National Hockey League circuit, and has several other inventions to his credit. Now he has bobbed up with a plan to better the offensive work of his defencemen. In yesterday's drill at Hershey, Pa., Ross had the defencemen working on the Wings.

The first serious casualty in the Toronto camp at St. Catharines, Ont., is Basil (Bummer) Doran. The defenceman, slated to be sent either to Providence Reds or New Haven Eagles suffered a severed artery in his ankle when he fell while engaged in a battle for the puck with centre Red Heron. Doran fell on one of Heron's skates and will be out for three weeks.

Hold-out Syd Howe's comment was brief and to the point when he told of rejecting a Detroit Red Wings' contract offered by Manager Jack Adams. Said Howe: "I feel I've served my apprenticeship. None of those kid salaries for me." Howe turned professional with the old Ottawa Senators in the 1930-31 season.

The signing of Armand Mondou as coach of New Haven's American League Eagles has served one of the last links between the present-day Montreal Canadiens and the great habitant teams that won the Stanley Cup in the 1929-30 and 1930-31 season. Only other player still with Canadiens from those days is left winger George Mantha, now in training at the habitants' camp in St. Hyacinthe. Mantha was on the Eagles' line-up the other day in an exhibition game against Canadiens.

A Lion pass goes astray. Blanton, of Georgia, seems to stand on the head of Snavely of Columbia to intercept pass tossed by Governali of Columbia. The pass was intended for Wood (21) shown on the RIGHT. Columbia won the game 19 to 13.

LESTER PATRICK SURE RANGERS WILL REPEAT

Team is Intact From Last Season and in Splendid Condition

BOUCHER IS COACH

Former Centre of the Rangers Will Direct Team From the Bench

(By Charles Edwards, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 23—(CP)—New York Rangers are hockey champions of the world, they're intact from last season and they're young. All this has led Manager Lester Patrick to predict a successful defence of the National League championship and the Stanley Cup.

"We see no reason why we should be displaced," said Patrick when he closed the Ranger training camp here and took the club on an exhibition tour of the west with New York Americans. "We're intact and we're the champions. Let the other fellow do the worrying."

Lester has reasons enough for confidence. Rangers were loaded with injuries and illness when they wrested the N.H.L. championship from Boston Bruins in six games last spring and went on to win the Stanley Cup in six games against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Immediately after the Toronto series eight Rangers went to hospital. Dutch Hiller had his appendix removed; Kilby Macdonald underwent a serious stomach operation; Dave Kerr, Murray Patrick and Alex Shibicky had elbow operations; Alf Pike and the Colville brothers, Neil and Mac had their tonsils removed.

In Precarious Condition

"Some of these boys were in precarious condition all last season," said Patrick. "Now they're all in good shape and we have a right to expect even better results."

The one change in the team this year was the appointment of Frank Boucher as coach. One of the game's greatest centres for 12 seasons with Rangers, Boucher will take over full responsibility to direct the team from the bench. He was Patrick's assistant last year.

Kerr, who won the Georges Vezina trophy last season as the N. H. L. goalie with the lowest number of goals scored against him, will guard the nets. Captain Art Coulter and Murray Patrick, one of Lester's two sons on the team, form one defence pair: Ott Heller and Babe Pratt the other.

No "First String" Line

Patrick says that he has no "first string" forward line, that his attacking combinations are equally effective. Neil Colville pivots one line with brother Mac on right wing and Shibicky on left. Phil Watson is flanked on the right by Bryan Hextall and on the left by Hiller. The third line has Macdonald and Pike the club's only rookies last season, alternating on right wing with Clint Smith at centre and Lynn Patrick on left.

That, as Lester said, is "considerable hockey team." Coulter is the oldest player at 31, Kerr and Heller are 30 and the others are in the 20's. They're a happy gang on the ice, well conditioned and high in morale.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, I played bridge with Blantch Terner today, Willyum, you know her husband has the same position that you have, only with the Dubble Security Company.

Yes, I understand Erick Terner has done very well for himself, pop said, and ma said, He hasn't done a particle better than you have for land sakes, you're both doing exactly the same work to a tea. And that's the point, Willyum, I mean according to Blantch Terner her husband is making 17 thousand dollers a year. Something mitey funny must be going on when a man of your capacity is forced to sit idly by and see a man like Blantch Terner's husband draw down 17 thousand dollers a year for the same work that you're doing for far less, she said.

Well now, companies vary, pop said, and ma said, And so do men. As far as ability goes, Erik Terner isn't fit to hold a candle in your shadow, anybody can see that with one careless glance at his face, and here's his wife dripping with costly furs and casual remarks about his 17 thousand doller salary, she said.

It might be a good idea to invite them around, pop said. He sounds like a good man to lend me 50 dollers or so from time to time, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum dont be rediculous, you know you're not the borrowing kind. Quite the contrary, you're the type that repays. But just a same it might not be a bad idea to invite the Terners to call, because otherwise I dont know when I'll ever seen Blantch Terner again, and she borrowed 5 dollers from me, ma said.

Yee gods, I've been hit by some last straws lately, but that's the heaviest, pop said. If anybody inquires for me, I'll be in my tent, he said.

"CLOTHIERS OF QUALITY"

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

We were always under the impression that Abraham Lincoln abolished slavery and the trafficking of humans on this continent many years ago, but after the recent agreement completed between the Canadian Amateur (?) Hockey Association and the National Hockey League regarding the outright paying for amateur pucksters it begins to look as though we need an Abraham Lincoln or Judge Landis to govern hockey activities. The N. H. L. agreed to pay $500 for every amateur hockey player signed to a professional contract and $250 for every player signed to a minor league contract in the future. No matter which way you look at this set-up, it's bound to ultimately boomerang. It is common sense to believe the major puck moguls are not going to pay five C's for an amateur player, if the player can be brought up through their farm system at half that price. When a player is drafted from the amateur ranks directly into the N.H.L. and the $500 paid over, just what club has the call for the draft price loot providing the said player has been with more than one amateur club?

Actually all agree the basic principle of the idea is sound and something towards contributing finances to the amateur clubs that have been robbed of their birthright by the cash and carry moguls for years past. Sportwriters view with alarm the new proposal. A small club may tutor a player as a juvenile and junior, when he learns the fundamentals of the game; then along comes a prosperous senior or intermediate amateur club to snatch the kid away and maybe the next year he lands in the "big time." Now the question arises what percentage of the $500 loot price will be awarded the smaller and poorer club, that originally raised the player in question to prominence? Although the money from the professionals is to be paid over to the C.A.H.A. it begins to look as though the little fellows will again continue to hold the well-known bag, as has been the case ever since hockey moved into the major sport picture.

Do you remember when the Pacific Coast Hockey League, with Frank Patrick, now manager of Montreal Canadiens, at the helm, adopted six-man hockey at its annual meeting in Vancouver 18 years ago today.

We read a lot in the big city papers about Tony Golab's injury during last Saturday's Argo at Ottawa game, following which Coach Lew Hayman stated some of his players were not exerting themselves this year. However, we read nothing of the attack on Jimmie Follwell, who sustained a badly lacerated face in his second attempt to punt last Saturday. The Rough Riders cracked through the Argo line, drove Follwell to the ground and when the dust had settled five stitches were needed to close a nasty gash across Jimmie's upper lip and on the left side of his nose. Follwell has proven the best punter with the Argos this season but it didn't take Ottawa long to dispose of him and his educated toe early in the game. Follwell isn't a Toronto boy which may be attributed the reason the Hog Town sportwriters failed to as much as make mention of the attack or injury.

True sportsmanship was displayed by Coach Morley Baker and his B.C.I. senior Interscholastic grid squad yesterday. According to schedule Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate were to have clashed for their first meeting in the senior Interscholastic circles today. However, Coach Pete Beach's squad ran into several serious injuries, including Bruce Wilson's fractured collar bone, during last Saturday's game versus Cobourg. Coach Beach sought to have today's game postponed 48 hours in order that his players might recuperate. Coach Baker's "collegians" agreed to the postponement, so the game will be held Friday. "We do not want to take any unfair advantage of the Albert team. Pete Beach is a swell guy and we'll do anything within reason to accommodate him or his boys anytime it is possible," assured Coach Baker today as he prepared to put his charges through their paces in a strenuous practice. All of the B.C.I. squad is in fine fettle, except "Goldie" Mullholland, who is still recuperating from torn ligaments of the knee, sustained in pre-season training.

	W.	L.	F.	A.	Pts.
Belleville C. I. ...	1	0	22	0	2
Albert College ...	1	1	19	6	2
Cobourg C. I. ...	1	2	6	41	2

SPORT SPICE—Good defencemen are worth their weight in gold to an N.H.L. club this season. . . . Flash Hollett, who the Maple Leafs passed up and the Bruins snatched up quickly, is just about the No. 1 rearguardsman in the big show today. Five clubs, the Memorial Cup Champion Oshawa sextette, Marlboros, Young Rangers, Native Sons and Guelph will compose the junior O.H.A. "A" group this winter. . . Toronto Varsity is out. . . . A number of local grid fans are contemplating on taking in the Ottawa Rough Rider at Toronto Argo game on Saturday. . . After the Golab-Follwell injuries the wolves are looking for the kill, but mark it down—"after the storm comes the lull." . . . Dit Clapper, veteran Hastings puckster, has been named captain of the Boston Bruins again this year. . . . Red Hamill has also caught on. . . . Both Clapper and Hammill played softball for Hastings against Wooler in the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

URGES HIGHWAY PREPAREDNESS

Capt. Brandt Says For Common Defence Against 'a Common Enemy' Canada and U.S. Should Co-operate on Road

Quebec, Oct. 23 (CP)—For joint defence against "a common enemy," practical co-operation between Canada and the United States on highway construction is necessary, delegates to the Canadian Good Roads Convention were told today by Capt. Arthur W. Brandt, Superintendent of Public Works, State of New York.

Addressing 400 delegates on the second day of the three-day meeting, Capt. Brandt declared:-

"If Canada and the United States are to jointly defend themselves against a common enemy, co-operation and co-ordination in highway construction for military preparedness are a necessity, not a theory. If the Canadian-American defence committee has not already considered defence highways it undoubtedly will.

"I must confess, however, that military men appear too little interested in highway preparedness, in spite of the lessons of the present war. Billions of dollars are being spent for equipment that cannot operate at all without highways and bridges, and not 100 per cent effectively without a well-built and well-co-ordinated highway system."

Good Roads Essential in Modern War

The principles of highway construction and location in the United States paralleled those in Canada, said Capt. Brandt, and "as with us your money and your energy should be expended in protecting those sections of your country where munitions of war are manufactured, where army depots and troop concentrations are located, and where the mass of your people live."

Pointing out that good highways were essential in modern warfare, Capt. Brandt said that such roads were just as useful in peace-time for commercial and recreational purposes.

For the efficient operation of a defending army, said Capt. Brandt, there must be at least one road leading to the front over which munitions, food, supplies and replacements could be transported. There must be others for the return of empty trucks to supply bases, for refugees and for the transportation of troops and equipment from one section of the front to another.

ARMY EXAMINERS WISE TO DODGES OF MALINGERERS

U.S. Army Issues Book That Will Aid Doctors to Detect Fakers Attempting to Evade Draft

FEW WILL ESCAPE

Washington, Oct. 23—(AP) — A book that is wise to all the tricks and artful dodges will aid United States selective service medical examiners in exposing fakers who attempt to evade the draft by pretending to be ill or disabled.

Going out from national draft headquarters to the 48 states today, the volume contains physical standards for men to be drafted into the army. As forecast, the standards are slightly less exacting than regular army requirements.

Broadly, the regulations state that to be eligible for the army, a registrant "must be able to see well; have comparatively good hearing; have a heart able to withstand the stress of physical exertion; be intelligent enough to understand and execute military manoeuvres, obey commands and protect himself; and be able to transport himself by walking as the exigencies of military life may demand."

Doctors attached to each local draft board will examine all men who are placed in class one—available for service—on the basis of their answers to the draft questionnaire which will be sent to all 17,000,000 men who registered last week. Questionnaires will be mailed in the order in which the serial numbers of draft-age men are drawn in next Tuesday's national lottery here.

It is anticipated that only those in Class 1A; about one man in every five registered, will be called for training under the present program. Others might be called in an emergency.

Local doctors are instructed by the regulations to watch for malingerers who feign disqualifying physical defects and for patriots who attempt to hide defects in order to get into the army.

Men suspected of malingering may be reported to the national director, or to the local United States attorney for prosecution. Those who maim themselves may be forced to serve anyway.

While discouraging disclosure of the tests they have designed to catch fakers, national medical officers significantly warned that few tricksters would escape.

The doctors will be on the lookout for men who pretend to be blind or deaf, men who take drugs to cause abnormal heart action, who put sand under their eyelids to cause inflammation, who take acid to simulate jaundice, who use fake crutches, or those who pretend insanity or epilepsy.

Knox Says U. S. Will Not Try to Appease Anybody

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—An Axis victory at either or both ends of the Mediterranean would cut the life line of the British Empire and seriously threaten the United States, Navy Secretary Frank Knox believes.

The secretary said in an address to the Insurance Institute of America last night that renewed negotiations between the Axis powers and Spain presaged a new attempt to open a route to Africa.

Such an attempt, if successful, he said, would be "immensely important" to the United States because it would give the Nazis an air base on the West African coast, 1,600 miles from Brazil.

Warning of "grim things" ahead this winter, Secretary Knox declared:—

"The sea power which blockades Europe is British sea power, and its blockade has not yet been broken. If Great Britain can escape German invasion across the Channel . . .", and can maintain herself in the Mediterranean, she will make this blockade effective this winter".

He asserted that "we will continue to help Britain and China regardless of what Hitler and Mussolini think", and added, "we will pile up armaments, and we will not try to appease anybody".

In his speech before the Insurance Institute Col. Knox discussing the position of Gibraltar, said: "Already the Germans are reported to have a whole division and more in civilian clothes in Spain. They have another division of troops on the Spanish border."

(His mention of Germans in civilian clothes apparently was a reference to recurrent reports that Spain was being invaded by German "tourists".)

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

(By Louis V. Hunter, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23—(CP) — A North London housewife digging potatoes on her allotment uncovered a big root of potatoes perfectly cooked in their jackets. She dug deeper—and found a partly burnt-out incendiary bomb —the potatoes were fit for the table.

One of London's best roof-spotters is guided by the rhythm of German motors. According to him, the Heinkel engine says slowly, "I'm Goering, I'm Goering." The Dornier rhythm is "Where will you have it? Where will you have it?" The Messerschmitt repeats "I'm coming. I'm coming."

Splinter - proof spectacles, which help protect the eyes from flying splinters and dust during air raids, have made their appearance. The lenses are covered with fine mesh netting which does not impair the vision and can be detached when not required.

The Ministry of Supply has asked householders to save old phonegraph records. They are useful for making munitions.

Because of air raids, a Presbyterian church in London has advanced the hour for Sunday vespers from 7.30 p.m. to 4 in the afternoon.

Theatres, too, plan to open earlier. Opening times of 10.30 a.m. on weekdays and 1.30 p.m. on Sunday have been suggested. Theatres now are closing at 9 in the evening.

A policeman walking down a street stepped up his pace when a queer crackling noise sounded behind him during an air raid. Finally, he looked around and found he was being followed by a duck that had escaped from a bombed pet shop.

The Hotspurs, a northeast concert party, claim to hold the record for a single night's voluntary entertainment—nine hours, almost unbroken, from 7.30 p.m. until 4.30 a.m. They performed first before 500 troops, then during an alert they gave a three-hour concert in a shelter. They were caught in a raid when finally they reached home so it meant another-two-hour concert in a shelter.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct. 23 (Special)—The Picton branch of the Red Cross is undertaking a number of projects to raise funds for war work. These were planned at a meeting this week. Beginning this week a salvage campaign is to get under way. James deC. Hepburn, M.L.A., Colin Carter and Frank McKee, representing the Chamber of Commerce are responsible for collections, members of the Armchair Club for receiving and storage salvage at the fair grounds buildings.

The second project is a mile of coppers to take place on the armouries' sidewalk on Saturday, Nov. 2nd. To open the drive, the school children of the town will hold a parade followed by short speeches and music. Philip Dodds is convener and assistants are Mrs. C. A. Publow, Mrs. Colin Carter and Mrs. John Goodwin.

Other means of raising funds being utilized include selling tickets on a pair of antique andirons donated by Mrs. Walter Fraser and saving of wrappers from various products for which a cash allowance is made.

Veterans to Hold Smoker

The Picton Post of the Canadian Legion and the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary are engaged in war work with real vigor. They are planning to hold the annual Remembrance Day parade and service, but the veterans instead of having the usual banquet have decided upon a smoker. They have sent several hundred magazines to the soldiers at Camp Borden and the ladies are now engaged in making clothing for refugee children. They are also planning a 'Roll out the barrel' drive on November 2nd, when barrels will be placed in all grocery stores to received canned goods and tea. This is to be sent overseas to the Salvation Army for use in their mobile canteens which are so welcome to the soldiers when on long marches. In similar drives they have secured 42 cases of canned goods for the Red Cross. The Auxiliary's quilt, bearing nine-hundred names of men overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is to be exhibited in Belleville in the near future. It has recently been shown at Cobourg.

Clinton E. Lansing died at his home at Woodville, east of Picton, on Monday after a short illness. In his 76th year, he was a life long resident of Prince Edward County and well and favorably known. He is survived by his wife. The funeral was held at his late residence on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 23rd, with interment in Glenwood cemetery, Picton.

Picton is to have several new businesses. Another funeral home is to be opened here and other new businesses are a restaurant and a fruit store. A small ware store and a radio store opened recently so that there are now no vacant places on Main street.

Late Mrs. Bela Johnson

Harriett A. Dulmage, wife of the late Bela Johnson died at her home here on Tuesday in her 81st year. She has been a prominent resident of the town for many years. The funeral is being held Thursday at the home of Charles Pierson with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

The Sir Thomas Picton Chapter of the I.O.D.E. is planning to ship sixteen barrels of apples overseas for members of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. It is planned to have these arrive for Christmas when they will be a welcome gift. The Chapter will also send cigarettes to the men overseas as an additional treat. Other organizations are planning to send parcels to all local boys in England.

Mrs. John Halliday is seriously ill at her home on Mary Sreet.

Mrs. Ernest Tripp, Belleville, has returned home after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. D. G. Jackson in Toronto, and with Capt. A. E. Jackson who is leaving for overseas. Capt. Jackson is a Wellington boy.

Fred Handley and Clayton Scott wered in Toronto this week.

Sgt. and Mrs. J. C. Crawford have returned to Kingston after a week spent visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Stewart Graffety returned Tuesday afternoon to Montreal after attending the funeral of her father, John Mitchell, who died suddenly.

Mrs. William Phillips, Toronto, was a guest this week of Miss Ida Martin.

UNITS REST AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP)—The main body of Artillery units which participated in army manouevres near Montreal and Lachute last week arrived at Brockville and Prescott Tuesday afternoon. A group of 800 was billeted for the night at Prescott while the other 1,200 were accommodated in public buildings here. The soldiers will continue their journey to Petawawa Camp today.

The council will notify all qualified voters of its decision. Only if a petition of five per cent of the ratepayers is received will the question be submitted to the electors.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—Golds and industrials backed away moderately today on Toronto Exchange. Prices were lower than yesterday's closing. Other groups held firm. Trading was quiet with 180,000 shares traded.

Steep Rock was the heavy trader in the base metal group but it showed a small net loss at early afternoon against a morning gain.

Coniaurum moved ahead 11 cents and then retreated under profit-taking. The announcement of an extra dividend was an early buying stimulant. Several golds, including Aunor, Chesterville, East Malartic, Upper Canada and Broulan, lost ground.

Abitibi Pfd. showed strength. The steel, food and utility groups held steady and in the western oils Anglo-Canadian and Dalhousie were up slightly and Home and Royalite were off narrowly.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Stocks moved up fractions to around a point in a moderately active market today, and bonds and commodities followed suit.

Gains of the morning were maintained toward the fourth hour with steels the leading attraction.

On the rising side were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Wheeling Steel, Chrysler, Goodyear, U.S. Rubber, Caterpillar, Boeing, Douglas, Western Union, Anaconda, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, American Can, Eastman and Santa Fe.

Gainers in the Canadian section included Dome Mines and Hiram Walker. Lake Shore Mines were easy. In the bond market Canada 4s advanced ¼ point.

Restrictions Lifted On Short Selling

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange announced today that restrictions against short selling on the Toronto Exchange will be withdrawn at the opening tomorrow, Thursday, October 24. The ban was imposed on May 24 last in fear of a market break coincidental with the German advance through Holland and Belgium.

Suggestion Rejected In House of Commons

London, Oct. 23.—(CP) — A suggestion that Soviet aid be invited in the removal of children from Britain was rejected in the House of Commons today by Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The Under-Secretary said that while Britain "naturally welcomes all offers of assistance on humanitarian grounds from neutral governments and persons, they have never invited the co-operation of any foreign government in this matter".

"Did we not seek the assistance of the American government?" asked Emanuel Shinwell, Labor.

"I do not think we technically sought their assistance", Mr. Butler said. "Of course we are very grateful".

R.C.A.F. MEN WOUNDED

Ottawa, Oct. 23—(CP)—The Royal Canadian Air Force announced today the wounding by German bombs in London of two R.C.A.F. men from Winnipeg, Sgt. Lloyd William Thomas Penn and Lac. Hugh Tait.

The announcement was made in a statement, rather than an official casualty list, and did not give the extent of the men's injuries.

WILL VISIT MUSSOLINI

Rome, Oct. 23 (AP).—Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's chief of state, has accepted an invitation of Premier Mussolini to visit Rome and is expected to come early in November, an authoritative source said today, as evidence of Rumania's attachment to the axis.

The Italian press published a statement by Antonescu indicating he was coming to pledge his country's fidelity to her Roman origins and her faith in future protection by the axis powers.

Butter Prices Advance Further

Toronto, Oct. 23 — Prevailing small offerings of both fresh and storage stocks resulted in another 1-2 cent advance in butter on the Toronto open produce market. The first-grade Ontario product closed around the highest level of the year at 28 3-4c a pound, at which figure demand turned spotty when buyers were reluctant at paying this increased price. Supplies cleared freely at 28 1-2c in morning action. Retail prices reflected the advance on the wholesale market as No. 1 creamery prints sold 1-2 cent higher at 29 1-2c to 30c.

Exports to the United Kingdom last week totalled 43,578 boxes, bringing total shipments for the current season to date to 905,020 boxes, against 639,778 boxes in the same period of last year.

Trading slackened for top grades and quickened for pullets on the egg market. Receipts arrived in light volume, however, and prices in both sections held unchanged. The price to country shippers on Grade A pullet eggs should have read 29c to 30c and not 23c as was shown in the egg price table in Tuesday morning's paper.

Increasing Use Of Air Power in Land Operations Mooted

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—An increasing use of air power in land operations, apparently with reference to expected large-scale fighting in the Near East, was foreshadowed in a statement today by an authorized spokesman.

He asserted that squadrons of bombers "and possibly fighters" would be placed temporarily under army command when needed "for any particular operation."

The spokesman said that, while the idea of creating "an army air arm" similar to the fleet air arm of the navy had been turned down, the army expected to make increased use of air support in future operations.

The army air proposal had been rejected, he explained, because neither the army nor the air general staff wanted it, because a fundamental change of this sort in the middle of the war would be more likely to upset than improve conditions, and because difficult questions of equipment would arise.

SOLDIER IS KILLED, STRUCK BY AUTO

Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP)—Private Langley Shuker, 35, Kirkland Lake, Ont., member of the Algonquin Regiment which arrived here recently to occupy newly-completed training quarters, was killed last night when knocked down by an automobile a short distance from the camp.

Private Shuker apparently was walking back to the camp after being away for the evening. Police are completing an investigation.

Hitler Expected to Reap Trouble If France Forced to Fight U.K.

(In this article John Evans, chief of the Associated Press foreign service, discusses the situation that would arise with a Vichy-Berlin alliance against Great Britain. A veteran European correspondent for the A.P. before he took over his present duties, Mr. Evans headed its Paris bureau for several years.)

By JOHN EVANS
(Associated Press Chief of Foreign Service.)

New York, Oct. 23 —(AP)—Hitler may get the present government of Occupied France as his ally to fight Great Britain, but if he does there's a fair chance he will wish he hadn't.

It still is someone's secret exactly what Germany has in mind about conquered France, but Prime Minister Churchill showed Monday he thought the Petain-Laval Government might be tempted to join the Axis. He asked directly of all French that "if you cannot help us, at least you will not hinder us."

Hitler can offer attractive terms to aged Marshal Petain if Petain believes Hiter can win the war. He can promise France that her old empire shall remain almost as it was, Germany taking only Alsace-Lorraine and the colonies which France took from Germany after the last war.

The stake:

1. Vichy as an Axis ally could swing into action what is left of her fleet . The British fleet damaged some of her warships and others are immobilized under British control.

2. French colonies throughout the world might follow Vichy. The psychological influence might be to give Germany, Italy and Japan friendly and useful access to air, land and sea bases around the world.

The difficulties:—

1. France is a beaten, disorganized nation that would need food for the body and inspiration for the soul. Germany wouldn't be eager to supply much food and it could be far from easy to make 40,000,000 Frenchmen gladly go to war after they broke their hearts in a surrender to get peace.

2. France might be pushed back into the war, but if so the famed Flanders fields would sprout quickly as a great crop of hate for the German conqueror. Possibly many despairing people might think joining Germany better than resisting her pressure, but it is easy to imagine the silent, sullen revolt of millions of families born of soldiers who feared or hated the German enemy of two wars.

The empty arsenal:

France is a disarmed army, a wrecked industry, a battered battlefield and a blighted farm.

France is cut in two. Marshal Petain rules the unoccupied area which grows too little food for itself, makes few of the things it needs and is shell-shocked from war and its bitter aftermath.

Occupied France governs herself as best she may but with Germans in command at the top. This is the rich part of France, rich in fine food, and wine, full of factories with abundant coal and skilled workers.

Germany already holds French ports that face England and she has all the northern section for air fields. She has whatever French war material survived the wreck. She controls the railroads. She rules the land.

Finds Less Damage in London To Military Targets Than Expected

London, Oct. 23.—(CP Cable)—Ralph Ingersoll, editor of the New York newspaper PM, said at a press conference today that he had found on a tour of London's bombed areas less damage to obvious military targets than he had expected from the impression he had gathered in the United States.

He found, however, more damage to non-military objectives than he had thought would be the case.

The New York editor compared the complete freedom with which he was able to tour London and the country with the restrictions placed on newspapermen in Germany. He said PM's Berlin representative reported he was permitted to visit bombed places only when conducted.

CAROL, LUPESCU

Urdareanu was reported to have raised hands which trembled and in a faltering voice exclaimed: "They'll kill me if we are sent back to Rumania. How is extradition possible?"

Notified at Hotel

Through the partly opened door Mme. Lupescu listened to the opening conversation. The news perhaps was not altogether a surprise since the Madrid newspaper, Arriba, organ of the Spanish Falangists, hinted yesterday that she and Urdareanu might be compelled to return to Rumania to face trial.

Urdareanu's emaciated face became tense.

"His Majesty should hear about this," he said weakly.

Then he and Mme. Lupescu withdrew to Carol's suite, followed by the police chief.

The King, it was reported, could scarcely conceal his astonishment.

"Who, pray, gave you those orders?" he demanded.

"My superiors," replied the chief. Almost mechanically Carol asked: "And who are your superiors?" The chief did not answer.

Police Vigilance

Police vigilance around the hotel was doubled. Later, however, Carol was told that he and the others could go into town under escort.

The former king later visited the Civil Governor, who told him they would leave for Granada tomorrow.

(Reports from Bucharest had quoted Rumanian officials as saying that the government had decided to ask for the extradition of Mme. Lupescu and Urdareanu. The Iron Guard in Rumania has demanded the arrest and trial of Mme. Lupescu. An editorial in Arriba yesterday accused Carol's two companions of complicity in the assassination of a former Iron Guard chief.)

mained unreported.

Five Men Aboard

The little Glace Bay craft, the Alvin W. carried Capt. Walter Pink, his son Alvin, and John Turner, each of the three other vessels, all of Newfoundland register, had aboard a skipper and five men.

Fishermen here feared that even the three larger vessels, though considered seaworthy enough to ride out what the returning men described as a near-hurricane, might have had trouble picking up their men in the dories when the snow closed down. The fierce weather made the task difficult for the vessels that did make port.

The gale blew up suddenly, a few hours before the vessels would have started for home after the day's fishing. It reached an unofficial peak of 50 miles an hour, and vessels already in port stayed at their moorings until it abated.

SUPPLY TRUCKS

Although the Japanese have said an oil agreement was concluded with the Indies last Saturday, the Tokyo Press generally seemed to believe the matter still was unsatisfactory.

(Netherlands officials at Batavia have denied an agreement was reached.)

Scoff at Dispatches

The newspaper Yomiuri scoffed at dispatches from London that Britain had contracted for all the Indies' output of high-grade gasoline used for aviation fuel but said "a firmer front by Japan against Britain is now considered inevitable".

Yakichiro Suma spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Office, insisted there had been no hitch in the oil negotiations.

Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported that Capt. Aginichi Torigoe, Naval Attache of the Japanese Legation at Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), had been called home. No reason was given.

(Reports from Hanoi, French Indo-China announced the start of removal from Northern Indo-China of Japanese troops who fought their way into the country last month.

(In Hong Kong, the Central Chinese News Agency said the first fleet of supply trucks to negotiate the Burma Road since Britain reopened it last week, in the face of Japanese bomb threats, had reacherd Kunming, capital of the southernmost Chinese Province of Yunnan, yesterday.)

Voters May be Required to Produce Registration Cards

Toronto, Oct. 23—(CP) — Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said today that his department is studying a plan whereby each voter in municipal elections will be required to produce his or her national registration card.

"It is only a matter of the proper procedure," Mr. Cross said. "Under the present Municipal Election Laws, Deputy Returning Officers have not the authority to demand production of the card by request Ottawa to extend the revoters and it may be necessary to gistration regulations to include D. R.O.'s as persons qualified to ask that the card be shown."

Mr. Cross said the suggestion, advanced by Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto last week, had his approval.

Premier Hepburn also expressed approval of the plan. Legislation to make the production of registration cards at elections mandatory will be considered when the legislature meets in February, Mr. Hepburn said.

BRITISH DESTROY

The Kimberley went into action when Italian destroyers attacked a British convoy.

It was the fourth Italian destroyer acounted for in the quickening war in the Mediterranean during the last ten days. In the previous action the cruiser Ajax, already distinguished for her battle with the Admiral Graf Spee almost a year ago, sank two enemy destroyers and damaged a third, which was later finished off by the cruiser York.

The Admiralty said that during last Sunday night and early Monday morning a British convoy in the Red Sea was attacked by two Italian destroyers, which fired torpedoes at the escorting vessels and began to shell the convoy.

The escorting vessels lost no time in opening fire on the enemy and a chase ensued.

In the dark preceding the dawn contact was temporarily lost, but the Kimberley, under Lieut.-Commander J. S. M. Richardson, R.N., regained touch at daylight and engaged one of the enemy destroyers, the Francesco Nullo.

There followed forty minutes of intense action in which the Italian destroyer, badly damaged, ran aground. A torpedo fired from the Kimberley blew her up.

The Kimberley's action, it was disclosed, was carried out despite the fact that the destroyer was under fire from shore batteries as well as from the guns of the ship with which she was battling.

The shore guns scored one hit, the Admiralty said, a steampipe being damaged by splinters and thus speed was reduced. Returning the fire of these guns, the Kimberley silenced two of the three in action.

Describing the action as "spirited" the Admiralty said that three aboard the Kimberley were wounded. There were no other casualties. It added: "No other ship, either escorting vessel or in the convoy, received any damage."

Another Admiralty bulletin announced that two patrol vessels, the 0.6 and the 0.7, formerly French, commanded respectively by Lieutenant W. B. Galbraith, R.N., and Sub-Lieutenant G. A. Gabbett-Mulhallen, were sunk by light enemy craft. "There is reason to believe a number of the crews have been made prisoners," the bulletin said. Details of locality of this action were not announced.

The Red Sea battle was believed to have occurred near a group of islands off Assab, on the Eritrean coast near the Strait of Bab El Mandeb.

Official reports from Cairo said Royal Air Force planes intercepted an Italian bomber in the Red Sea battle and pursued it thirty miles before they saw it plunge rapidly with thick smoke pouring from it.

Other British planes scored a direct hit on the stern of one Italian destroyer.

The Kimberley is a destroyer of the Javelin class. Begun in January, 1938, she was launched in June of 1939, and completed shortly after the outbreak of the war, since there is usually at least a six-month interval between launching and completion.

She carried a normal complement of 183, six 4.7-inch guns, six of smaller calibre and 10 21-inch torpedo tubes.

The Francesco Nullo was completed in 1925. She carried four 4.7-inch guns, four 37-mm. anti-aircraft guns, two 13-mm. anti-aircraft and four 21-inch torpedo tubes. Her normal complement is 142 men.

The Admiralty announced that the Kimberley suffered some slight damage from shore guns, but silenced two of these guns, and that "no other ship, either escorting vessel or in the convoy, received any damage."

Following is the statement issued by the Admiralty:

"During the night of Oct. 20-21 one of our convoys in the Red Sea was attacked by two Italian destroyers who fired torpedoes at the escorting vessels and shelled the convoy. Our escorting vessels immediately opened fire on the enemy and gave chase.

"Contact was temporarily lost, but H.M.S. Kimberley (Lieut.-Cmdr. J. S. M. Richardson, R.N.) regained touch at daylight and engaged one enemy destroyer identified as the Francesco Nullo.

"After an action lasting forty minutes the Italian destroyer, having been heavily damaged, ran ashore and was blown up by a torpedo fired from the Kimberley.

"The Kimberley came under fire of a shore battery of three guns and received one hit, splinters from which damaged a steampipe and reduced her speed.

"The Kimberley succeeded, however, in silencing two out of three shore guns.

In this spirited action the Kimberley sustained three wounded and the next-of-kin will be informed as soon as possible.

"No other ship, either escorting vessel or in the convoy, received any damage."

In another statement, the Admiralty announced the sinking by "enemy light craft" of two patrol vessels, formerly of the French Navy.

The Admiralty added: "There is reason to believe a number of the crews have been made prisoners."

It indicated some casualties resulted. The craft were the 0.6 and 0.7.

Further setbacks for Italy were indicated in the following communique issued by the Air Ministry today:

"Between Salum and Buqbug, aircraft of the R.A.F. carried out a series of low level attacks (Monday). Enemy working parties and motor transports were hit, a number of military vehicles were destroyed by fire and others severely damaged.

Raids in Eritrea.

"In Eritrea several raids were carried out by R.A.F. bombers on Asmara and Gura. Tanks near workshops were hit and other bombs fell on buildings, starting fies.

"Two raids were made on Bahar Dar (Lake Tana) in Italian East Africa. Bombs fell on the wharf and also on two large sheds on the airdrome, causing three explosions.

"At Tessenei direct hits were registered on buildings. An Italian S-79 bomber was intercepted over the Red Sea by R.A.F. aircraft and chased for thirty miles. When last seen the enemy craft was losing height rapidly and emitting thick black smoke from its fuselage.

"An enemy destroyer in the Red Sea was attacked by R.A.F. bombers and a direct hit was registered on its stern.

"In a recent engagement over the Kenya-Abyssinia frontier a fighter aircraft of the South African Air Force shot down an Italian bomber, the crew of which was taken prisoner. A number of enemy planes over Malta yesterday made off without attempting to attack when they were intercepted by our fighters."

FRANCE WILL NOT

no question of declaring war on Britain, and added that there was no question either of France surrendering its fleet or aircraft to Britain.

Commenting on yesterday's D.N.B. (German propaganda agency) announcement of the meeting of Hitler and Foreign Minister Ribbentrop with Vice-Premier Laval, the Vichy-controlled Havas agency said:—

"All Frenchmen will understand the meeting concerns the future of our nation. It is the most important event since the armistice."

(Here five lines were censored).

A French Government spokesman announced an "important" communique would be issued on the Paris negotiations some time this afternoon.

Meanwhile, official sources were maintaining the strictest silence.

Might Bring People Closer

Berlin, Oct. 23.—(AP)— Circles generally regarded as well-informed voiced the opinion today that yesterday's conference between Hitler and Vice Premier Pierre Laval of the Vichy Government might result in bringing France closer to Axis policy and enable her government to return to Paris.

(French government officials in Vichy said last night important negotiations which might have a bearing on the future of the fallen Republic were still underway somewhere in France, but a Foreign Office spokesman declared talk of France joining Germany in the war against Britain had no foundation.

(Earlier claims from Berlin said events seemed to be shaping toward an attempt to join the surviving units of the French navy with the German and Italian fleets for a combined effort to smash Britain's seapower. The terms of the armistice concluded last June 24 between France and Germany provided the French navy should not be used against Britain.)

Treated With Reserve

The negotiations were treated with the utmost reserve by the controlled Nazi press as only three Berlin morning newspapers printed the communique, and none offered a word of comment.

The announcement said German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop had participated in the meeting. The fact, however, that Hitler himself journeyed to France to meet Laval, instead of entrusting his foreign minister with the task, was seen as increasing the significance of the questions discussed.

(Observers at Berne, Switzerland, also found significance in the fact that Laval, not Premier Petain, had participated in the negotiations with Hitler, which they believed indicated a final French-German war settlement was near.

(These observers saw in Laval's part in the proceedings an indication that he might take over from this aged chief soon the actual leadership of the French government.)

Swiss Opinion on Situation

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 23 (AP)—Well-informed sources here expressed the opinion today that the future of Vichy, France, apparently hinges on the outcome of a violent battle inside the Petain-Laval government over whether to let what remains of the French war fleet "collaborate" with the Axis powers in the war against Britain.

This opinion was based on reports from Berlin and Rome reaching unofficial sources here. Such "collaboration," according to these reports, would be the price Vichy, France would have to pay for a "peace settlement."

Informed Frenchmen here said the battle lines were clearly drawn at Vichy today, following a cabinet meeting last night and the conference of Vice-Premier Pierre Laval with Hitler somewhere in France, presumably Paris.

Dispatch From Rome

Rome, Oct. 23 (AP)—Hitler is reported in foreign circles here to have sounded out Vice-Premier Pierre Laval on a plan for a temporary settlement between the Axis powers and Vichy which would make them "collaborators" in the prosecution of the war.

Laval, under this supposed plan, would have greater power in France, French functionaires would be allowed to resume their administrative posts in the German-occupied area, and Germany would aid in France's "reconstruction," a usually reliable non-Italian source said.

LONDONERS GIVEN

Elsewhere, there were only intermittent raids except in the midlands, where one town was bombed for two hours with some persons killed and injured.

Nazi planes which did cross the fog-shrouded coast apparently were forced to fly and bomb "blind," British said, through the second successive night of thick weather.

The mist held the heavy smoke of London's chimney pots low over the city in a yellowish pall that penetrated buildings, cut visibility in the streets and reinforced the wartime blackout.

District Bombed is Small

The capital's now-routine alarm at dusk came as usual. But the all-clear sounded before midnight after light attacks. There was a second brief alarm after midnight, but the only detonations heard were the firing of anti-aircraft guns.

Observers reported the number of districts bombed throughout Britain seemed the smallest since mass German air attacks were started 47 days ago.

A communique described the raiding as on "a much reduced scale" but said: "In the Midlands an attack which lasted about two hours was mainly concentrated on one town."

Isolated Attacks

There homes and other buildings were damaged and fires started. There was some loss of life. Elsewhere in the Midlands, the communique said casualties were "not numerous."

There were isolated attacks in western England, South Wales and in the southeast, where British fighter planes scattered a formation of Nazi fighters and bombers in what observers estimated was a battle of more than 100 planes.

The London Press today carried columns praising the work of United States Ambassador Joseph J. Kennedy, who left for home yesterday.

Columnists and editorial writers praised Kennedy's part in "the extreme cordiality reached in Anglo-American relations" and, the Herald said, for helping to make the United States and Britain "Allies forever in deeds if not in written words."

Authoritative sources said British planes did not bomb Germany or German-occupied territory last night because of "extremely bad weather conditions".

No Attacks On Reich.

Authoritative quarters said, however, that extremely bad weather kept the Royal Air Force grounded in Britain last night and no new attacks were made on the Reich.

These sources said evidence had come to hand of the wrecking of a gas works at Gelsenkirchen which is one of the largest of its kind in Europe.

They added that a neutral observer reported a large Berlin factory making precision machinery for the fighting services has been brought to a temporary standstill, while elsewhere in the city another factory containing machinery of vital importance also suffered severe damage from direct bomb hits.

Railway Property Damaged.

Another informant was quoted as saying that much damage had been done to railway property in Berlin, and service on the rapid transit system interrupted on several of its sections.

As a result of open criticism of German anti-aircraft defences, authoritative sources said, one of Germany's leading newspapers recently had published the following statement:

"A large section of the population appears to have a completely wrong idea of the possibilities of anti-aircraft barrage. For example, the opinion is freely expressed that the 'flak' should shoot down many more British aircraft than it does, and even prevent them from flying over German territory."

CHAPTER XXIII

Olive Castle had finished dressing for dinner and was giving sundry pats and touches to her perfectly arranged hair when the telephone on the bed stand sounded a gentle signal.

"Get it, will you, darling?" she murmured to Jeffrey who had come in a moment before from his adjoining suite. He strolled over and rather clumsily disposed of a French doll whose billowy silken skirts screened the instrument from view.

"Seems it's for me," he announced after an interval. "Long distance. Would you rather I took it on the hall extension?"

"Why? Don't you want me to listen in?"

His reply was made to the operator. Then: "Yes, this is Castle. Who? Oh! How are you, old man? Glad you caught me . . . just going out." After that it seemed that the party on the other end of the line was doing all the talking, Jeffrey furnishing an occasional monosyllable. Finally he said, "Thanks a lot for calling," and hung up.

Olive's delicate brows drew down in a puzzled frown as she watched Jeffrey's reflection in the mirror. He was still holding the instrument in his hand, staring moodily into the distance. "Jeff! What in the world!" She turned to face him, wondering the more at the start he gave.

"Oh! That was Vic. Calling from Parville." He put the telephone back in its place. He had almost said "from home".

"You look as if he was telling you some bad news."

"He was. Very bad."

"Darling! There's nothing wrong at your home, is there?"

"No. He called to say that Tony Swan was killed this afternoon. Not killed exactly . . . jumped in a creek to rescue a child, and the shock did him in. Seems he had a bad heart."

"You're talking about Audrey's father, of course. That is too bad. I'm sorry for her. Did Victor call you just to tell you that?"

"Certainly. He knows that Tony and I have been good friends ever since I was a kid. The funeral is Thursday morning."

"I'm going, of course. It's the least I can do for the poor old chap."

"It would have been a nice little mark of respect. But we can send flowers. You know you're going to the matinee that afternoon. You couldn't possibly be back in time. It's quite too bad."

"Too bad for the matinee," Jeffrey returned thoughtfully. "I'm leaving for Parville tomorrow evening. I wish that you'd go with me."

"Me go! Why? That man means nothing to me . . . except that he did ruin a perfectly good pair of boots that I was wearing for the first time."

Jeffrey looked at her with a steady stare. There was something in his brown eyes she had never seen before. For some reason it disturbed her more than she wanted to reveal. "I shall always wish you hadn't said that," he remarked slowly.

"Oh, don't be stupid, Jeffrey! You haven't stopped to think things out. If you go down there tomorrow, it means putting up at that town hotel when you get there. What are people going to think? It's an impossible situation . . . practically turned out of your father's home."

"I didn't create that particular situation."

"And," she hurried on, "it won't surprise me in the least if your father and mother think they have to be at the funeral. Suppose they don't even speak to you? Do you think all the others won't gloat? And you think so little of me that you are quite willing to have me humiliated before a mob. Fortunately, I think more of myself than that."

"I don't believe it will be so bad as you think, Olive. I'd appreciate it if you'd go."

Olive's temper, usually under supreme control, flared. "I certainly have no intention of going! I hope that is clear . . . . as clear as the reason that is taking you. Your wife's feelings deserve no consideration when something concerns that childhood sweetheart of yours."

"Skip that, please, Olive. It's silly."

"Oh, yes? It should be, but it isn't. Do you suppose I haven't been able to see why it was so hard for you to tear yourself away from that odious town and why you are always running back there on the slightest provocation? I've done everything I can to make you consider your self-respect, but this is intolerable." Tears suddenly filled her dark eyes. "Don't go, Jeff! I'm asking you not to."

"I'm sorry, Olive." Jeffrey seemed to be weighing his words. "I've tried to do the things you want. But there will always be times when I must do the thing that seems right. I'm sorry, but I'll have to go down there. I mean I'm going." He went out into the hall without looking back. And closed the door after him.

Jeffrey did not see his wife before he left for Parville. An inquiry after breakfast the following morning elicited the information from Olive's maid that her mistress was suffering from a violent headache and would have to be excused.

It was after eleven that night when he registered at the Parville House, explaining carelessly to Leon Meyers that he had come down unexpectedly and that it was a little late to rouse the folks at home, if Leon could take care of him.

The brief services were about to begin when Jeffrey entered the little chapel the next morning and dropped unobtrusively on a bench at the rear. Almost at once he discovered Audrey and her mother. A man and a woman sat with them, relatives probably, but strangers. Vic Quinn was there. The little room was well filled, but Jeffrey saw no sign of his father or mother and it made him resentful. It wouldn't have hurt them to come. After all, the Swans were their nearest neighbors.

When Jeffrey filed out with the others, nodding to an occasional acquaintance, he stood irresolutely on the sidewalk until a hand was laid on his arm and a quiet voice said: "Glad you made it, old man."

"Oh, hello, Vic. Sad business, this."

"Tough, all right. Are you going out to the cemetery? I'll be glad to have company. Some cousins of Mrs. Swan are sort of looking out for them."

"I don't believe I shall, thanks. There wouldn't be any chance to speak to Audrey and her mother. If they haven't seen me, I'll be glad if you let them know I was here.

"Of course. Come on and stroll up to my car, if you don't mind. It's in the next block. Somebody may want to ride out."

As they moved off, Jeff remarked: "I rather expected I'd bump into the folks here. Maybe it's just as well."

"Your father is up in the city, Jeff. He said he would be back this morning, but he hadn't shown up when I left the office."

"Hmm . . . m. If I were sure I wouldn't barge into him, I'd run out and say hello to Mother. But I guess I'll be shoving back. I don't feel up to another scene."

As he opened his car door, Vic said quietly: "Jeff, if you can arrange it, try to see Audrey before you leave. I am sure she'd appreciate it very much."

"Think so?" There was almost an eagerness in the question.

"I know it. I called you the other night at Audrey's request." It cost Victor something to say that, much as he tried to banish the realization.

"Oh! Then I WILL drop in on my way back. Thanks. Couldn't you manage lunch with me at the hotel? Just by way of saving the townsmen from a lot of extra speculation?"

"Sorry old man, but I really can't. My morning's gone and I've quite a job I must get out of the way for the evening mail. Looks as if I'll have to omit lunch. Sorry I can't ask you to loaf around the office in the meantime . . rather, I'm sorry that you wouldn't care to. I don't like it."

"Not your fault, fella. Thanks, and so long."

It was several hours later that Jeffrey drove up to the Swan home. Until he glanced back at the stables standing without sign of life, he had not realized how different the place would be after this. It was a relief to see that there were no cars parked on the drive. It was more of a relief to have Audrey open the door to him. Her face was still colorless, but she managed a smile of welcome.

"Cygie!"

"It was good of you to come, Jeff."

SECOND SESSION OF PARLIAMENT OPENS NOV. 7

Prime Minister King Tells Press Parliament Will Convene on 5th and Then Adjourn Till 7th

WILL DISCUSS WAR

Negotiations Between Hon. J. G. Gardiner and British Ministers "Distinctly Helpful"

Ottawa, Oct. 23—(CP)—The second session of Canada's 1940 Parliament will begin Nov. 7, two days after members of the House of Commons and Senate reassemble following a three-month adjournment.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King made the announcement at a Press conference in his east block office last night. He said Parliament would assemble Nov. 5, the date set at the time of adjournment last August, and prorogue the same day.

At the new session starting Nov. 7, members would be given ample opportunity for full discussion of the international situation, the war effort and any other matters they may desire to bring up.

His announcement, made to about 20 parliamentary correspondents came several weeks after his earlier statement that Parliament would meet only formally Nov. 5 and adjourn to early January when the new session would start. That statement brought objections from M. J. Coldwell, acting leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative House Leader.

Mr. King said announcement might be made some time today of Canada's representatives on the temporary joint committee to carry out investigations leading to power developments in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River.

He said that present negotiations between Agriculture Minister Gardiner and British Supply Ministries are "very much worthwhile and distinctly helpful."

Sees No Reason For Change

Mr. King said he thought it was a splendid thing to have Mr. Gardiner head of both the Agriculture and War Services Departments, because so many problems which had to be dealt with by the government were interlocked with both departments.

This comment was made in reply to a suggestion that Mr. King might be announcing a new Minister of Agriculture soon. At any rate, he said, he certainly would not be making such an announcement while Mr. Gardiner was away, what-ever might happen later.

Referring to reports that Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec might be named Dominion Agriculture Minister, and be groomed to take Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe's place as Quebec's leading Minister in the cabinet, the Prime Minister said: "Mr. Godbout is doing so magnificently where he is, as is Mr. Lapointe, I see no reason for a change."

Mr. King said he was "very much impressed" by the airports and dockyards he saw during his recent whirlwind tour of defence establishments in the Atlantic area. Quebec was playing a magnificent part in the war effort.

In announcing that a new session of parliament would begin Nov. 7, Mr. King said the government had never desired to avoid a free discussion.

Full Discussion

"The members will have full opportunity to discuss international affairs, the war effort and such other matters as they may wish to bring up", he added.

If the government had gone ahead with its original plan of meeting Nov. 5 only for another adjournment, a debate would have started on the motion leading to adjournment. When the new session started in January, much of that debate would have been repeated.

The government decided it would be preferable to start a new session at once, and have all the debate at the same time. There would be no debate preceding prorogation.

Mr. King said there was no pressing government legislation, and it was likely that parliament would adjourn for the Christmas recess as soon as the debate on the address is completed and some estimates have been brought down.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner would be back from his conferences in the United Kingdom before Nov. 5, and Defence Minister Ralston had delayed his trip to Britain. The government would be in a position to give the members a great deal of information when the new session opened, Mr. King said.

"The Showdown"

Six guns blaze, hoof beats drum along the prairie and frontier justice prevails again as Clarence E. Mulford's celebrated cowboy character "Hopalong" Cassidy rides to high adventure and romance in his latest motion picture, "The Showdown" which opens next at the Capitol theatre.

And, where it was mostly the machinations of cattle rustlers, train robbers and all around bad men of the West who called "Hoppy" to the saddle in his previous action dramas, it's horse thieves in "The Showdown," and Harry Sherman, who produces these popular pictures has seen to it that there are enough horses in action in this picture to satisfy the most rabid horses lovers in this or any other country.

At "Hoppy's" side, ready for a fight, a frolic or a feast, rides handsome Russell Hayden, while Britt Wood, former vaudeville artist who has appeared in three or four previous Cassidy sagas, is again in his accustomed place. The cast is rounded out by Morris Ankrum, Jane Clayton, "The King's Men," and over fifty other seasoned riders.

The added attraction "Women in Distress" starring May Robson with Irene Hervey and Dean Jaggers will thrill you from start to finish and give you plenty of laughs throughout.

The "Baer-Comiskey" fight pictures will also be presented as well as Universal News of the day and the third chapter of our thrilling new serial "Tim Tyler's Luck" makes it an ideal program for the entire family.

AT THE BELLE

"I Married a Nazi"

Does any woman ever really know the man she loves?

That is the question propounded in "I Married a Nazi" the 20th Century-Fox film which is the next attraction at the Belle Theatre. The picture stars Joan Bennett as the art critic on New York's smartest magazine and Francis Lederer as the man she learns to fear. Also starred are Lloyd Nolan and Anna Sten.

A beautiful girl's amazing experiences, with the husband she found out too late, are dramatically revealed. After they leave with their child for a vacation in the husband's native land, he falls under the influence of the "other" woman, portrayed by Anna Sten.

Played by a brilliant cast including Otto Kruger, Maria Ouspenkaya, Johnny Russell and Ludwig Stossel, "I Married a Nazi" smashes into a thrilling climax that gripped previewers.

Joan Bennett, member of the "royal family" of Bennett, famous in theatrical and motion picture circles for two generations, is more beautiful than ever in the leading feminine role. Joan gives one of the most poignant and powerful portrayals of her great career in "I Married a Nazi" which brought raves into advance reports.

After a highly successful engagement on the New York stage in which he appeared in "No Time For Comedy," Francis Lederer returned to Hollywood for the much sought after role in "I Married a Nazi." Capable, virile and handsome, Lederer is believed to top his greatest screen successes of the past with his newest effort.

Lloyd Nolan, who plays the role of special American correspondent in Europe, won the high regard of 20th Century-Fox studio officials for his sterling work in "Johnny Apollo." Nolan is said to more than justify the faith Producer Darryl F. Zanuck placed in him.

Anna Sten, beautiful and exotic European actress, does a grand job in an exacting role. In the supporting roles, Kruger, Maria Ouspenskaya, Johnny Russell and Ludwig Stossel, round out a beautifully balanced cast.

Thrilling Football Film

Showing the real drama behind the thrills of football and the roaring crowds, "Yesterday's Heroes" tells the story of a college hero and his girl—who showed him that there's more to life than headlines and cheers.

As a Saturday Evening Post serial, "Yesterday's Heroes" thrilled thousands of readers. Made into a picture by 20th Century-Fox, the film, which is announced as the co-feature, is even more thrilling.

Jean Rogers is the girl and Robert Sterling portrays the football star. Others featured with them in a strong cast are Ted North, Katharine Aldridge and Russell Gleason.

"Land of Flowers" a beautiful traveltalk of sunny Florida in full beautiful technicolor will also be exhibited.

"Sporting Blood"

Maureen O'Sullivan provides the romance with Robert Young in "Sporting Blood," an exciting drama of the race-track, and the old South, featuring Lewis Stone and Lynn Carver, now closing its engagement at the Belle.

Mystery, romance and genuine thrills are provided in "The Mystery Sea Raider," the associate feature with Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon and Onslow Stevens in the leading roles.

The Belle news of the hour will also be exhibited.

Ungrumbling Stoicism of Londoners Impresses Newsman on Arrival

By Ross Munro Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Oct. 23 (CP)—Like a battle-scarred fighter with an iron jaw and a tested guard against knockout blows, London weathers the terrors of the air attack and takes its nightly marathon raid as part of the city's wartime life.

A Canadian just arriving from the Dominion is struck by the ungrumbling stoicism of these doughty burghers under the most prolonged ordeal of bombing ever inflicted on a civilized people, by the growing strength of the city's air defence and by the failure of the Nazi airmen to hammer the Metropolis to its knees.

There is damage—plenty of it, ruthlessly inflicted—but life moves along at an Englishman's unhurried pace.

Wandering about the city, you see the courageous heart of England reflected in the determined faces of the people on every bus, on every ancient street. Over the city in the darkness, the scene is as fantastic as anything in fiction.

From the streets and from a west-end flat, nine storeys up, I watch the nighty raids. As the blackout draws over London not a light is visible. Between 7.30 p.m. and 8.30 the first warning shrills through the city. The raiders come over pretty much on schedule. The drone of planes can be heard in the blackness and then the anti-aircraft batteries, rimming the outskirts and dotted through the city, start their barrage.

Occasionally a spray of incendiary bombs falls and a fitful blaze lights the sky. London's fire fighters, among the most heroic defenders of the city, battle it. It is brought under control and blackness again cloaks London.

From dusk to dawn it goes on like this. It's war on civilians with the little man in the front lines. A war where you can sit in a comfortable arm chair nine floors up and watch the instruments of death and destruction over a valiant city.

Searchlights Knife Clouds

Sometimes there is the whistle of a bomb and the thud of an explosive landing, but the feature of the night marauding is the anti-aircraft fire. Only the odd searchlight now knifes into the clouds.

In the morning you look out again over the city's acres of chimney pots. There might be a few more craters and freshly-wrecked buildings on the way downtown as London starts another day of business as usual.

The transportation system remains as good as in any large Canadian city. There is no problem finding good places to eat at reasonable prices. there are movies and a few stage shows and night clubs.

The storied central area has its havoc but the pigeons remain on Trafalgar Square outside Canada House. Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square still throng with people.

You marvel that there is not more damage and disruption of Metropolitan life after so many weeks of bombing.

Jon Hall and Frances Farmer in a scene from Edward Small's thrilling adventure romance of the South Seas, "South of Pago Pago," the next production that opens at the McCarthy Theatre.

Petain Leaves Vichy for Paris Says Berne Report

Rumor Reaches Switzerland Premier And Laval May Sign New French-German Pact

Berne, Oct. 24 (AP). — Reports reaching diplomatic sources from Vichy, France, today said Premier Petain with two aides and the Minister of Justice had left Vichy for Paris. It was believed here he was going to join Vice-Premier Pierre Laval to sign a new French-German agreement.

The news was first received through diplomatic channels because correspondents and officials at Vichy were under strict orders to give no details of the marshal's departure, his destination or the purpose of his trip.

Vice-Premier Pierre Laval also left today for Paris, where Tuesday he conferred with Hitler and Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, presumably concerning Vichy's role in Hitler's "new order" in Europe.

(Hitler, who conferred with Gen. Francisco Franco at the French-Spanish border yesterday, might have been back in Paris today to meet Petain.)

Reports of Hitler's talks with Laval and Franco received here said the axis is hatching an offensive to cover not only the Mediterranean but the South Atlantic as well.

Informed French sources said Hitler and Laval had put the finishing touches to an agreement whereby the Vichy Government would give the Axis powers use of air and naval bases in Africa, Syria and unoccupied France in return for certain concessions.

At the same time reports reaching diplomatic quarters indicated that one of the subjects discussed by Hitler and Franco was the possible use of Spanish ports and airfields on the Spanish Atlantic coast and in the Canary Islands as springboards for Nazi attacks on Britain's South Atlantic shipping.

These sources envisioned a campaign in which Italy and Spain would attempt to seize Gibraltar and smash Britain's power in the Mediterranean while Germany and

DUNCAN PRESENTS BADGES TO FIRST AIR OBSERVERS

First Air Crew Graduates Under Air Training Plan

FIVE-MONTH COURSE

Trenton, Ont., Oct. 24.—Beneath the brilliant rays of an early morning October sun, a large group of stalwart young Canadians, the first air crew graduates under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, received the gold-threaded single wing badge bearing the capital "O" emblematic of an air observer at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force today.

The husky young flyers, forerunners of thousands of such graduates stood stiffly at attention in front of a flag-covered table as Acting Deputy Minister of National Defence for Air, James S. Duncan, pinned the coveted wing on their breasts and added his congratulations. Overhead fluttered the R.C.A.F. ensign. In the distance the stirring strains of the crack base band rang out in the clear morning air. Behind them, drawn up in the traditional British squares stood two thousand of the personnel of the base.

Seven Occupants Held Until Word Comes From Washington as to Their Status

Lowville, N.Y., Oct. 24 (AP)—Two Royal Canadian Air Force bombers were grounded in northern New York today after becoming separated from four companion ships on a flight between Montreal and Trenton, Ont.

One of the planes, piloted by C. W. Wright of Los Angeles, Calif. senior flying officer, landed late last night in a cow pasture south of this village. The other came down in a field between Ogdensburg and Canton.

State Police refused to divulge the names of the seven occupants of the plane landing near Ogdensburg. Trooper C. W. Bentley of the Lowville patrol, however, said passengers in the plane here were students on their way to Trenton to receive their wings—James Flattery, Toronto; Earl Mann, Galt, Ont., and George Jeffrey, Ottawa.

The Lowville plane landed with the aid of police, firemen and townspeople who lighted flares to illuminate the field. The other dropped flares before coming down.

Occupants of both bombers were held by immigration authorities pending receipt of word from Washington as to their official status.

LONDONERS ENJOY BEST NIGHT'S REST IN LAST 17 DAYS

Raiders Arrive on Schedule but the Attacks Quickly Taper Off

BAD LANDING WEATHER

Some Bombs Dropped in London and the Counties and in Northeastern England

London, Oct. 24 (CP).—Heavy formations of German planes made short, repeated stabs at a London shrouded in thick, chill weather today but succeeded only in dropping bombs in rural areas.

Observers reported large groups of raiders crossed the southeast coast early in the afternoon, most of them obscured by clouds, and heading in the direction of London.

A few moments later a flight of nine fighter planes, acting as a rear guard, was glimpsed as it scooted through low clouds.

The approach of these planes caused a second air raid alert of the day in London, but it, like the first, was brief. No gunfire or bomb explosions were heard in London during the first alert.

German planes were reported also to have flown over the vicinity of Liverpool and a west coast town.

The Air Ministry announced that a German Dornier 17 bomber had been shot down by a Spitfire in a morning duel over the channel.

A heavy channel rain and the anti-aircraft defences on London's outskirts held the raiders at bay overnight, giving the city its quietest night in the last seventeen.

Five persons were killed by a bomb which wrecked a cottage in a small village near London last night. An 18-month-old baby was found alive on top of the debris.

British Houses Discuss Defence, Sessions Secret

London, Oct. 24—(CP) — Questions of defence against Hitler's air offensive were debated today by both houses of parliament in secret sessions.

The House of Commons went into closed session after Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, had told a questioner that it would be "premature" to approach the United States and Soviet Russia concerning post-war collaboration on relief, reconstruction and international co-operation.

He outlined the functions of the new Ministry of Works and Public Buildings headed by Sir John Reith which is to direct plans for extensive government building.

He said the ministry will be responsible for erection of all new government buildings and "approval of plans for new private factories and extensions of existing factories," being aided by the Ministry of Supply.

Also it will be responsible for "the licensing of private building and for determining priority for rebuilding buildings damaged by air raid."

U.S. Reorganizes Army Air Corps, Increases Combat Groups 25 to 54

Washington, Oct. 24—(AP)—Reorganization of the army air corps to double its present number of combat groups and create a "highly mobile fighting force," capable of operation anywhere in the western hemisphere, was announced today by the United States War Department.

The reorganization took the form of establishment of four air districts. It will include expansion of the four air corps wings now in continental United States to 17 wings as rapidly as trained personnel and equipment, now in production, become available.

Instead of the present 25 combat groups, the expanded air force will have 54, the announcement said.

"The purpose of the creation of the air districts," the department explained, " is to effect decentralization of training and inspection duties of the commanding general, general headquarters air force, and to provide for the development of commanders and staffs for such special task forces as may be required for operation in war."

The air force commander, at present Major-General Delos C. Emmons, will remain in command of all these units. The commander's headquarters will be transferred from Langley Field, Va., to Balling Field, on the outskirts of Washington, D.C.

Reconditioned Subs Of U.S. Navy May Join Overage Destroyers

(By C. R. Blackburn)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 24—(CP)—Reconditioned submarines of the United States Navy may soon join the fifty overage American destroyers now being transferred to the Canadian and British navies.

Some thirty older underwater craft are reported to be going through a reconditioning process and an investigator for a Washington paper (News) suggests they may be destined for service with the British sea forces.

Persistent claims in Congress and elsewhere of new and unrevealed transactions involving transfer to the British of important air fighting units have met with silence or non-commital comments from administration officials.

State Secretary Hull told a questioner at a press conference that he had not heard the matter discussed when asked if the 110 war planes diverted from Swedish buyers would go to Canada or Great Britain.

Not Sure of Number

Mr. Hull said he was not sure how many planes were involved in the order of the Swedish government. All are being requisitioned by the army air force and the number has been variously placed at from 100 to 300.

It is claimed by private investigators here that the United States Government, on order of President Roosevelt, has already sent to Britain or her Allies, since the war began, 2,200 planes of various types 500,000 rifles and 150,000,000 rounds of ammunition, 70,000 machine guns and 6,000 field artillery pieces.

These are in addition to the 300 tanks built for the First Great War, sent to Canada, and the 50 destroyers shared between the Canadian and British navies.

104 Subs Ready for Duty

It is understood the United States navy has 104 submarines fit for first line service, 81 under construction, and 36 being conditioned, possibly for the British navy.

Of the huge, four motored "flying fortresses" so badly needed by the Royal Air Force, the first of the latest model, B-17-C, arrived today for tests at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

According to reports here this model has already been superseded by a new model B-17D, but that 80 are in production and the other 78 will be delivered in December.

There are about 50 of the older model, B-17-B available for use by the United States army air corps but administration critics claim some of these have been sent to Great Britain and that others are going.

Comparatively new, these huge warplanes are said to have a flying range of 3,000 miles without refuelling. They carry a minimum crew of seven and the United States Air Force wants 1,100 of them for their own use.

Roosevelt Denies There Are Any Secret Foreign Treaties To Involve the U. S. in War

President Opens Campaign With Vigorous Defence of Administration's Policy

WILLKIE ON UPSWING

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 24 (CP)—The United States' presidential fight, Roosevelt vs Willkie, looked like the real article today for the first time. President Roosevelt was in there swinging against his challenger, hoarse-voiced Wendell Willkie.

Mr. Willkie has been in constant action since mid-September. Up and down the country he has carried the fight to the President, declaring against a third term, expressing disbelief that Mr. Roosevelt would keep the United States out of war, relentlessly hammering at the Democratic New Deal as a failure.

In accord with Mr. Roosevelt's policy of giving Great Britain every aid in the war short of troops Mr. Willkie nevertheless protested against the secrecy preceding the President's deal with Britain for naval bases in exchange for overage destroyers.

Many times he has insisted on the people's right to know what Mr. Roosevelt intends next to do for Britain. His view is that the President has assumed powers no man should hold in a democracy; that a third term for the President would be a terrific blow to Democratic ideals.

Two nights ago, as strong physically as when he started but hoarse from so much talking, Mr. Willkie listed at Chicago what he said were Roosevelt broken promises in the last eight years—failure to beat the depression, to revive industry, to provide jobs for the unemployed; failure to arm the United States defences.

Italian Communique Reports R.A.F. Bombed 7 Airports in E. Africa

Rome, Oct. 24 (AP)—The Italian High Command communique today claimed the Italian destroyer Nullo was scuttled after being seriously damaged in a fight in the Red Sea.

(The British Admiralty announced Tuesday that this destroyer was forced ashore and blown up by a direct torpedo hit from H.M.S. Kimberley.)

The communique said the Royal Air Force had bombed seven airports in operations over East Africa.

U.S. ASSISTANCE WILL CONTINUE AFTER ELECTION

Belief is Expressed at Washington that Material Aid Will be Continued No Matter Who Wins Election

BROTHERHOOD SPIRIT

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 24 (CP).—American friendship toward Canada and Great Britain, expressed in practical assistance in the war effort, will continue no matter who wins the election, according to opinion expressed in authoritative circles here today.

In spite of a growing wave of belief in Wendell Willkie's chances of blighting the third-term hopes of President Roosevelt's supporters, opinion in this hot-bed of political gossip seems to favor the present incumbent of the White House.

But nowhere does there appear to be any feeling that a Republican victory would alter the policy adopted by the Roosevelt regime toward assistance to Britain, nor interfere with its smooth working.

"The United States policy of assistance to Canada and the United Kingdom in their war effort comes from two powerful impulses," an official told The Canadian Press.

Brothers In Spirit.

"In the hearts of most Americans there is the feeling that Canadians and the British are their brothers in spirit and ideals and there is a brotherly desire to help.

"But in addition to that the practical minded American knows that his hopes for a continuation of the American way of living depends in a large measure upon the success of British arms.

USE BOMBS FOR DECORATION

London, Oct. 24 (CP)—A Royal Air Force fighter command station in the south of England has found a new use for German bombs. Two bombs taken from a Dornier shot down by a fighter from the station now stand in ornamental flower pots at each side of the entrance.

AIR MINISTER SAYS FORMATION IS CONSIDERED

Parachute Corps Would be Joint Service as Between Army and Air Force

METHOD OF TRAINING

Air Minister Says Commonwealth Air Plan Graduations to Take Place Every Four Weeks

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—(CP)—Looking toward the time of a British offensive, serious consideration is being given to establishment of a Canadian Parachute Corps, Air Minister Power said at a press conference today.

"The feeling is that training of parachute troops should begin as against some time when we may take the offensive", the Air Minister said.

"Our view is the Royal Canadian Air force will have to come into the picture although the troops will not belong to the R.C.A.F. their utility would be naturally as infantry rather than air force".

No Date For Training Mentioned

The Minister did not state when training of any men selected for a Parachute Corps might start. He did say however that training would begin with small jumps with controlled parachutes and gradually the men would become skilled enough to attempt jumps of greater height.

Maj. Power said parachutists probably would be arranged for in the same manner as were special corps in the First Great War.

A parachute corps would be a joint service as between the Army and Air force and selections might

GERMANS ADMIT BERLIN RAIDED

Nazi Communique Says One Factory Was Struck With Bombs

Berlin, Oct. 24 (AP)—The German High Command communique today announced that British planes had raided Berlin, striking one factory with bombs.

(Beyond a brief announcement that the raids had been made, no account of last night's R.A.F. attacks on Germany has been issued by the Air Ministry at London.)

The communique claimed that British war vessels had been driven away from the Flanders coast by naval artillery.

(No comment on this claim was forthcoming immediately from the British Admiralty.)

Dorothy Thompson Supports F. D. R.

New York, Oct. 24 —(AP) — Dorothy Thompson, newspaper columnist, said Wednesday night "I am going to vote for Roosevelt because I don't believe in taking the quarterback out of the game at this minute."

In a question and answer program broadcast under auspices of the Independent Committee for Roosevelt and Wallace, Miss Thompson said "I not only have not got anything against Wendell Willkie but I would like to see him in the cabinet. I like him very much."

"But since we are speaking openly," she added, "there are lots of people behind Wendell Willkie that I don't like one little bit. And I have my doubts whether he could get them off his neck if he were elected."

Will Repair Air Raid Damage, Britain Calls Skilled Workers

London, Oct. 24 —(CP)— A call for skilled building trades workers to repair air raid damage in London and maintain a large government construction program was issued by the Ministry of Labor today.

Bricklayers, carpenters, steel workers and related craftsmen not now engaged on "other work of national importance" were asked "to come forward and offer themselves for work."

Royal Air Force Raids Emden Area Bombs Docks

Oil Plants, Railway Junctions, Airdromes In Germany and German-Held Holland Attacked

London, Oct. 24. —(CP)—British bombers successfully torpedoed two German supply ships in the North Sea yesterday and heavily machine-gunned another vessel, the Air Ministry announced today.

Last night, the Ministry said, British planes raided various military targets in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany and German-held Holland, including railway wharves and warehouses at Emden, and oil plants, railway junctions, airdromes and docks.

The Ministry said the torpedoing of the supply ships was carried out by planes of the R.A.F. coastal command.

"Last night our bombers attacked objectives in the Berlin area causing fires and explosions," it continued.

The Ministry called the attack on the Port of Emden, "a concentrated raid".

Widespread Raids

The widespread raids on Germany were made after R.A.F. planes had been grounded by rain and fog which made flying impractical Tuesday night.

Oil plants attacked included those at Magdeburg and Hanover, targets in earlier British forays. One of the objectives in the Berlin area was a freight yard, the Ministry said.

Near Hanover and at Frankfurt various industrial targets were bombed, as well as railway junctions in northern and western Germany and docks at the hook of Hollano. Airdromes also were bombed, the Ministry said.

One British plane is missing.

50 Million Expected To Vote November 5

(Copyright 1940 by The Associated Press)

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—Heavy registrations throughout the United States, particularly in the big cities, indicated today that a history-breaking popular vote of around 50,000,000 may be cast in the presidential election next month.

A compilation of official and estimated registrations in each State disclosed a possible total vote of 49,719,200, or about 37 for every 100 of population.

This figure compares with an actual vote of 45,647,117 in the Roosevelt-Landon contest in 1936, and 39,816,522 in the Roosevelt-Hoover election of 1932.

It is based on an analysis of voter-filings and other data showing 60,576,979 may be eligible to vote in the Nov. 5 elections, or about 45 per cent of the total population of 131,409,881.

Many Do Not Record Vote

Comparison of the eligible vote four years ago with the actual vote cast revealed that from 15 to 20 per cent of those qualified remained away from the polls. In some southern states the stay-at-home vote ran as high as 50 per cent. This was taken into account in arriving at this year's estimated vote.

New York and California, with an aggregate of 69 out of the 531 electoral votes, turned in record-smashing registrations for the coming elections.

New York has an estimated registration of 6,891,238 and an estimated vote of 6,202,000, a gain of 605,602 over the actual vote four years ago.

Much That Happened 'Remains Mystery'

London, Oct. 24 (CP).—Qustions were asked in the House of Commons today concerning the loss of the aircraft carrier Glorious with 1,204 officers and men off Narvik, Norway, in June.

Labor members wanted to know why "no adequate steps were taken to rescue many hunderds of survivors who remained 48 hours afloat on rafts."

Sir Victor Warrender, financial secretary to the Admiralty, said British aircraft and ships passed close to the rafts from the Glorious but "unfortunately did not see them".

Sir Victor said a court of inquiry had been instituted but that since Capt. Guy D'Oyly-Hughes went down with his ship "much of what happened must of necessity remain a mystery".

ITALIANS SUSTAIN HEAVY CASUALTIES

1,000 Italian Troops Attacked at Close Range by British Motorized Patrol

London, Oct. 24 (CP)—"Very heavy casualties" were inflicted on a column of 1,000 Italian troops by a British motorized patrol in the Kassala region of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan last Sunday, it was announced today through the Ministry of Information.

The Italians were attacked at close range from the rear and were taken by surprise, said the British communique. No casualties were suffered by the British patrol.

Tuesday night an Italian camp east of Sidi Barrani in the western desert of Egypt was raided successfully by British forces. Eight motor vehicles were destroyed and one Italian prisoner taken.

Official Board Of Foxboro Charge Holds Meeting

The official board of the Foxboro charge of the United Church, representing the churches of Foxboro, Chatterton and Holloway, met at the parsonage on Monday, Oct. 21. There was a good representation and reports reflected a healthy condition in all the churches. Plans were made for the minister, Rev. E. M. Cook, to present the needs and work of the Ontario Temperance Federation to the congregation in the near future.

Plans were also outlined for bringing the claims of the missionary and maintenance work of the United Church to the fore during next month. The board accepted the financial objective suggested by the Belleville Presbytery for the charge, $275, and unanimously decided to commend it to the congregations, with a careful distribution of church literature.

The visit of the moderator, Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, M.A., B.D., L.L.D., to Belleville Presbytery, was anticipated and J. W. Daniels appointed representative to the next Presbytery meeting.

It was also decided to hold the annual circuit supper in Foxboro on Nov. 1st, an event of great interest and helpfulness.

The petition presented to the Dominion Government last July by the representative committee of the churches of Canada re temperance, was considered at some length and the following resolution passed which will also be sent to the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services. Later a petition will be placed in the churches for signatures.

"Realizing as we do the supreme crisis through which we as a nation and empire are now passing, and realizing that the call for self-denial and sacrifice should be heeded, and deeming intoxicants an enemy of the individual and the state, we petition the Dominion Government to heed the petition made to it last July by the deputation representing the churches of the Dominion.

"We would especially urge, if and when this petition be granted, that greater efforts be made to provide His Majesty's Active Forces with other diversions and recreations less harmful and more helpful than those represented by the wet canteen.

"We also deprecate any move in the direction of reducing the excise tax on liquors as an inducement to U.S. citizens. We consider such a suggestion unworthy of us and uncomplimentary to our neighbor, U. S. A. citizens."

Thurlow and Sidney Pupils Take Part In Musical Festival

That the pupils of the school sections of Thurlow and Sidney Townships are endowed with more than ordinary musical ability was evidenced Wednesday night in Foxboro United Church when they took part in a musical festival under the direction of Miss Margaret Atkinson, district instructress in music, before an enthusiastic gathering.

The entire proceeds of the function were turned over to the Red Cross Society. Inspector J. R. Pickering of South Hastings presided and congratulated the children on their fine showing. Appreciation of Miss Atkinson's efforts in bringing the schools to their present fine musical status was shown in the presentation by two dainty little girls of beautiful bouquets of roses to their teacher.

Pupils from Latta, Centenary, Stockdale, Sidney 16, Zion Hill, Wallbridge contributed to a varied program that was outstanding in its individual and ensemble numbers. A rhythm band added to the general enjoyment with well-selected numbers. Junior choruses vied with the seniors of the various schools and showed the results of fine training. A choir sang the ever-popular "There'll Always be an England" while the entire audience and youthful artists stood at attention when the National Anthem concluded a fine evening's entertainment.

POLICE COURT

Fifteen traffic cases were listed for trial before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's County Police Court held at the Court House, Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch entering eleven and Motorcycle Patrolman C. E. Siple four.

Charges of speeding found convictions registered against J. LaFleur, Cecil Taylor, R. H. Forbes-Roberts, Alfred Purdy, William Wallace and J. G. Findlater and the minimum fines assessed, along with costs.

Edward MacDonald, 19-year-old Stirling farmhand, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated and also to driving without having obtained a driver's licence. A third charge of reckless driving was dismissed, however.

Constable Hatch testified he had apprehended MacDonald while investigating a hit-and-run complaint near Stirling on Oct. 12th last. R. D. Arnott K.C., appearing on behalf of the accused, held that the reckless charge arose out of the drunk-driving episode. His Worship agreed and dismissed the latter count. MacDonald was sentenced to serve 14 days on the drunk-driving count, to date from the time of his arrest. He has one more day in which to languish in jail. A fine of $10.00 and costs was paid in the matter of driving without a licence, however.

H. Faulkner, Holloway, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving. "There were no injuries resulting from this matter, although the accused man's car was a total wreck," revealed Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, who prosecuted all cases today. The minimum fine of "ten and costs" was imposed.

When His Worship learned that subsequent charges were to be heard against Richard J. Ewing, Toronto and Thomas Van Zalkenberg, Thurlow, Magistrate Butler remanded the pair today when they appeared on charges of the theft of grain and also on a second count of the theft of a heifer calf. "We might as well hear all of these counts at one time," suggested His Worship.

HARD TO FIND NAZI BOMBERS DURING NIGHT

Control From Ground Essential to Help Spot the Enemy Raiders

DISCUSSES BALKANS

London, Oct. 24 (CP).—Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, noted soldier and airman, said in a broadcast last night that while the situation in the Far East is still "full of anxiety," there is no reason to believe that it should "deteriorate any further". He spoke on the British Broadcasting Corporation's nightly "Britain Speaks" feature.

"The stand taken by the United States has tended to produce a more rational attitude among Japanese warmongers," Sir Philip said.

He added it was difficult to understand why Japan had "teamed up" with Germany. "It seems that only a small section of military-minded people in Japan has become imbued with the spirit of Nazism," he said.

Athough the situation in the Balkans and the Near East was "dangerous", Germany would have to go a long way before being successful in those regions.

Turning to the air war over Britain, Sir Philip told of difficulties experienced by British fighter planes in intercepting enemy bombers at night.

Impossible To See At Night.

It was almost impossible for the British pilots to see enemy aircraft at night.

"Control from the ground" was essential to help spot the enemy and even after the pilot had been guided by ground watchers, he still had to see the enemy with his own eyes and bring his guns to bear.

Considerable progress had been made in overcoming these difficulties, which was resulting in more successful interceptor work.

"We shall continue to improve until we are able to take a far greater toll of enemy bombers at night," Sir Philip said.

He referred to disappointment expressed in German newspapers at the failure of Britain to collapse under the strain of air raids, and predicted that when the supply of American airplanes reaches the scale expected next spring "the German press will have more to express than mere disappointmnt."

Prayers Offered for Personal Destruction Of Mussolini

London, Oct. 24.—(CP)—Prayers for the personal destruction of Mussolini have been offered in the Mosque at Aden, the British Broadcasting Corporation said Wednesday, as it reported mounting anger in Moslem countries over the Italian bombings of Bahrein and Sidi-Arabia.

"At Aden, in addition to prayers in the Mosque for a British victory, special petitions were offered calling down destruction upon Signor Mussolini personally", the BBC said.

Sweden has raised enough wheat and rye this year, added to the carry over from last year, to meet its needs for a year.

MESS SECRETARY, STEWARD, KILLED

Lieut. Howard Allin and Gunner Collett Fatally Injured in Automobile Accident

Pembroke, Ont., Oct. 24—(CP)—Lieut. Howard S. Allin, 37th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, and Gunner Stanley Collett, also of the 37th Battery, were killed instantly on the highway six miles west of here Wednesday when the motorcycle on which they were riding collided with a motor truck. The truck was driven by Isaac Genis, Ottawa, who is in a Pembroke hospital suffering from bruises and cuts.

Lieut. Allin, whose home is in Kenora, and Gunner Collett of Portage La Prairie, Man., had been in Pembroke to purchase supplies and the accident occurred on their return trip to Petawawa Camp, where their battery is in training. Allin was secretary to his mess and Collett was mess steward.

Judgment Reserved On Application to Abandon Railway Line

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 24.—(CP)—The Board of Transport Commissioners, under chairmanship of Chief Commissioner Col. J. A. Cross, K.C., reserved judgment Wednesday following the hearing of the application for abandonment of the seven-mile sub-division of the Canadian National Railways between Napanee and Deseronto. The line was opened about 40 years ago.

R. E. Laidlaw, K.C., counsel for the C.N.R., said there had been a 50-per-cent reduction in revenue from 1936 to 1939 and although expenses for operating service were cut 30 per cent, loss on operation rose from $2,282 in 1936 to $4,126 in 1939.

George Prior, Montreal, agent for the Colonial Canners, successors to The Associated Quality Canners, said the plant had been closed three years but protested abandonment of the line. He felt it would jeopardize any chance of selling the property and would depreciate its value which now represented an investment of $100,000.

German Airmen Taken by Canadians Praise Ack Ack Fire

With the C.A.S.F., Somewhere in England, Oct. 24—(CP)—German airmen captured in Canadian lines after parachuting from their falling planes frequently express amazement at the strength of the British anti-aircraft barrage. They also admit the superiority of the British fighter planes.

A Canadian officer who has talked to a number of these prisoners said it was a common story to hear from the Nazis. Some German pilots who could scarcely speak English stammered out: "Spitfires good; ack ack (anti-aircraft) very good".

This officer said it is a popular belief among captured aviators that the invasion of Britain must be attempted before long. They reason that all the German conquests are useless until Britain is crushed.

Rawdon

Rawdon — On Sunday, October 20th anniversary services were held at Bethel United Church on the Rawdon circuit. The church was adorned with several bouquets of Autumn blooms despite the snow-flurries and cold atmosphere outside and the flowers gave a cheerful taste to the auditorium.

A half-hour before the morning service the church was filled to the doors and when the service began every available bench was filled with worshippers to welcome back to Rawdon a former beloved pastor Rev. F. G. Joblin and his wife Mrs. Joblin of Scugog Island. The welcome was the same at night as the church was filled at 7 p.m. and those who came late sat on benches. Many of the worshippers were in their seats an hour before the service showing their keen interest and love for the Joblin family.

Bethel anniversary was most successful despite the fact that two other anniversaries were in progress at Stirling and West Huntingdon. The trustee board asked for one hundred and twenty-five dollars and at the morning service $127.90 was placed on the plates.

Rev. Joblin gave two splendid discourses, the evening subject being, "The Scarecrows", which frightened the man of one talent.

Bethel choir of twelve voices with Mrs. R. Shortt officiating at the organ and Mrs. Will Heath accompanying on the piano rendered special music for the occasion. The choir contributed four anthems with individual parts. Mr. Arthur Duncan of Stirling delighted with a vocal solo in the morning.

At the evening service Mrs. Walter Warren, Miss Elda McMullen, Messrs Arthur Duncan and Harry Heath contributed a quartette.

Miss Bessie McMullen was a recent guest at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. A. Sharp, Stirling.

Mr. Earl Ruttan spent the week end with his parents at Kingston.

The Morton-Dracup orchard suffered a heavy loss over the week-end when the heavy frost froze the apples on the trees. There are around one thousand barrels of apples still unpicked.

Several plots of cabbage still uncut were frozen through on Saturday.

R. A. F.'S BLOWS SMASHING TO GERMAN MORALE

One hundred bombs a minute fell on the Nazi-held invasion ports on Sunday night.

So goes on the steadily increasing development of the R.A.F. as a striking force. How this body has been able to do the vast amount of damage to the German objectives in Germany and in conquered territory it has caused is one of the miracles of this war which in the short space of a few months has changed the tempo of the fight. And today the evidence of British air strength and the recent defeat of the German attempt to set in motion an invasion fleet from the German-held coasts of France and the Low Countries and the reports that Germans are being evacuated from Berlin show that the war tempo has changed and that the German Nazis are looking forward to greatly increased raids from British airmen as time goes on. Intensification of the attacks on the German war industries and targets will grow more and more. In time British offensive against Germany in the air will mean, as experts suggest, a great slackening of the attacks by the Nazis on London and other parts of England. Signs point to that likelihood having been grasped by the enemy.

A story last week which is not confirmed was published estimating losses of the Nazis caused by the Royal Air Force at 200,000 men since the war began. Whether this is exact or not, the Royal Air Force is incessantly pounding and causing immense damage and losses to the enemy. The bombardment of Cherbourg is mentioned as one of the major disasters caused to the Germans.

Ability to deliver such smashing blows is one of the greatest factors in the increasing effectiveness of British power.

HOW BRITISH LOVE OF LIBERTY HAS DEVELOPED

Those who have marvelled at the calmness of the British people in a world of storm and strain should know from their histories what the British people have achieved throughout the centuries. They should go back in thought to the days of Alfred the Great who was the founder of the navy, for he saw that ships meant trade for England, an island nation. They must recall the time of John, that king, who was forced at Runnymede to sign the Magna Charta. They must think of the era of Charles First and the Petition of Rights and the English Civil War which shook the nation for some years but never created the lingering struggle and malady which have been the fate of some races in finding their way forward towards freedom. Britain was fortunate in solving, in early days, her problem of liberty. But other nations have gone through crises which have shaken them deeply, that there lacks a reasonable development. Russia has had a revolution of sweeping character and of a character which has fallen most heavily on Russia herself. But Germany in a sense never cleared her house for she arrived late on the scene and she has left her problems before the world of today and out of the turmoil of the last war and of this war Germany will have to pass through a stage which it would have been better for the world and for herself had she worked out satisfactorily generations or centuries ago. Militarism in international affairs might thus have been eliminated long ago.

In Africa native races are arriving and will arrive at the crossroads where they will have to develop in a generation or a century what Britain took over centuries to develop. British life and the British constitution have placed Britain on a solid foundation after a natural development. Fortunately Britain is able to guide many of the native races towards the goal of liberty and a sane constitution. She has the light of experience to guide her as her people and her constitution were developed and moulded step by step along with the growth of freedom of the mind and the development of science while some other races in the nature of things did not find their progress so normal.

Britain's status is the direct outcome of the British instinct for parliamentary and constitutional development. Germany has never had this experience. Her people did not struggle for their liberty and the result is that today they have been made the pawns on the stage of militarists such as Frederick the Great or of men like Bismark and the ex-Kaiser and now of the upstart Austrian, who seizing every weakness of Germany, has led her to the whirlpool. A Hitler could not have come forward in Britain. British sense would have seen to that. Germany has not shown the slightest gift towards development; she has thrown her full weight upon might and violence. These facts explain the peculiar British gift in colonization in which so many nations have failed as history records.

In the United States is one of the brightest examples of a new land, heir to liberty and progress, a powerful nascent republic alert to science and social development. She is the heir of all the best of the ages and she possesses the spirit of progress in her science and in the lives of her citizens.

Canada, too, is one of the great heirs of all the ages, rooted in British liberty and with a past laid by heroic pioneers, an alert public conscience and sense of freedom. The same is true of the other British Dominions and Colonies.

With these stands Britain herself joining the past with the present, the past being the broad foundation on which the present superstructure of British greatness rests.

The English speaking peoples have been peculiarly blessed through the development of the British race, the British constitution and British liberty.

Dizziness May Be Due to Allergy

Many years ago dizziness was greatly feared as it was considered one symptom of heart disease. Later it became known that it was not a symptom of heart disease and it was believe to be always due to sluggishness of liver and gall bladder. Still later dizziness was shown to be a sign of a disturbance of the balancing canals in the ear and frequently there is present some loss of hearing.

Accompanying dizziness in many of these ear cases is nausea and vomiting. The condition is known as Meniere's disease and the latest treatment is by diet. The diet treatment is cutting down on table salt and on foods rich in sodium such as bacon, corned beef, ham, salt fish, butter, roquefort cheese, oleomargarine, peanut butter.

Some physicians state that practically all cases of dizziness are due to disturbances of the liver or of the ear. They also state that when the dizziness is due to disturbance of liver and gall bladder, it is the "up and down" type of dizziness, whereas the "round and round" dizziness (objects going around in a circle) is due to ear disturbances.

If, then, you are bothered with dizziness, remember that it is not a symptom of heart disease but in most cases due to ear or liver disturbances. Your family physician can prescribe for one type and an ear specialist for the other type.

Very recently physicians are reporting that despite dye and other tests of the liver and gall bladder, and repeated examinations by ear specialists, the cause of some cases of dizziness cannot be found.

Fortunately another cause has been found and that is sensitiveness (allergy) to foods and other substances. Dr. Leo H. Cripp in Pennsylvania Medical Journal suggests that if the liver, gall bladder, and ear have been investigated and the cause of dizziness cannot be found, the patient should be given the usual tests for allergy, especially if there is a family history of hives, asthma, eczema, or hay fever.

How can one know if allergy is the cause of dizziness without undergoing the tests for the various substances that usually cause symptoms?

If dizziness is due to allergy, the usual treatment for allergy—injections of epinephrine (adrenalin)—will stop the dizziness.

A hydraulic metal stretching press has been developed for forming airplane coverings and cowlings instead of hammering them into shape.

PEACE FEELERS EXTENDED TO END CHINO-JAP WAR

Neutral Representatives Have Directed Efforts to Bring Peace to Belligerents

JAPS CONCILIATORY

Tokyo, Oct. 24—(AP) — Neutral representatives have extended feelers directed toward negotiating a peace in the three-year-old Japanese conflict with China, apparently well grounded reports said today.

Influential Chinese unconnected with either the Chungking (Chinese Nationalist) or the Nanking (Japanese sponsored) regime were understood to have contacted Japanese first in Hong Kong and later in Tokyo to sound the possibilities of ending the conflict.

There were indications Japan still is willing to employ Premier Prince Fumimara Konoye's statement of Dec. 12, 1938 as a basis for possible negotiations.

In this statement, the Prince promised that Japan would respect Chinese sovereignty, dicsuss abolition of extra-territoriality and would demand neither territory nor indemnity of China. In return the statement said, Japan would ask Chinese economic and political cooperation.

(Diplomatic sources in London reported yesterday the Japanese had offered new terms including demilitarization of the Yangtse delta, formation of an autonomous state of five north China provinces under Chinese sovereignty but with Japan holding full economic control, recognition by China of the independence of Manchoukuo and establishment of Japanese concessions in all Chinese ports.)

Say Offers are Unofficial

Hong Kong, Oct. 24—(AP)—Official Chinese quarters in Hong Kong said today they knew nothing about a reported Japanese offer of peace terms to the Chungking Chinese Nationalist Government and asserted that rumors of peace offers or negotiations had been spread regularly mostly as feelers, by the Japanese.

These quarters, said China, as repeatedly emphasized by Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, never would agree to any peace involving a sacrifice of her political or territorial integrity. They declared recent developments of the international situation had strengthened China's resolution to continue the war with Japan until victory was achieved.

Agreement Reached Says Ambassadors

San Francisco, Oct. 24 —(AP)— The Chronicle today quoted Kensuke Horinouchi, retiring Japanese Ambassador, as saying a peace agreement which lacked "final official action" had been reached between Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese Generalissimo, and Wang Ching-Wei, the Japanese-installed ruler at Nanking.

Horinouchi, the newspaper said, stated the agreement was reached "recently" but that he did not know what terms would be disclosed.

"The terms, I should think, are along the lines stated by the Japanese Government two years ago," he was quoted.

(At that time, Japan demanded that China join the Anti-Comintern Pact and allow stationing of a Japanese army in North China.)

Efforts to reach the ambassador directly at h's hotel early today were unsuccessful. He arrived here last night en route to Japan, for which he will sail Friday.

C.B.C. GOVERNOR RESIGNS POST

Alan B. Plaunt, Ottawa, Says He Has Ceased to Have Confidence in Setup of Organization

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)—Alan B. Plaunt of Ottawa, since Nov. 2, 1936, a member of the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, announced Wednesday he had tendered his resignation from the Board to Munitions Minister Howe under whose jurisdiction the CBC falls, on Aug. 30.

In his letter of resignation he stated he was taking the step because "I feel that, as a public trustee, I should not continue to accept responsibility for the internal organization and executive direction of the Corporation when I have long ceased to have confidence in it."

He expressed the view "the present conditions seriously hamper the corporation in fulfilling its function in the war emergency and prejudice its survival as an effective instrument of the national unity afterwards."

In his letter Mr. Plaunt said he did not mean to suggest he considered the framework of the Broadcasting Act inadequate. "On the contrary, it is generally agreed that the Act provides an admirable framework for the development of a non-partisan, business-like, and effective system of national broadcasting.

"I would have taken this step early in the year had not my colleagues given me some reason to hope that the serious defects revealed by the reports prepared at their unanimous request, by Mr. J. C. Thompson and myself would be remedied. I have, however, finally been obliged to conclude that such is not the case.

Coastal Patrol Work, Training Seamen, Work of Command

By HERBERT L. JONES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A West Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 24 (CP)—Coastal patrol work and training of seamen in the creation of a greater and stronger navy—these are the big jobs for the Pacific Command of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Wartime patrol work on 700 miles of deeply-indented and island-dotted coastline is no easy task. But it is being done and the navy is carrying on with its other wartime jobs of fitting out ships of war and manning coastal batteries.

Most of the job of patrol falls to the fishermen's reserve, now the eyes and ears of the navy. Its members are trained in navigation, minesweeping, signalling and gunnery.

Sturdy armed fishpackers patrol the coast, augmented by more heavily armed converted yachts and cruisers. The crew know every part of the coast from Wales Island at Alaska's southern tip to Race Rocks at the southern end of Vancouver Island.

A big job, too, is the training of men for war at sea. The training base is known as a ship—H.M.C.S. Naden—and classes are conducted under conditions prevailing aboard any naval vessel. Men 'keep watch' and sleep in hammocks. They are trained in wireless, gunnery and seamanship.

With 15,000 young Canadians on the navy's waiting list, the base is filled to overflowing and some of the men are sleeping in tents. Naval Minister Angus Macdonald has promised increased accommodation.

Canada needs ships of war for the men she is training. She is getting them. Almost every shipyard along the coast is buzzing with wartime activity and turning out Corvette-type vessels for minesweeping and other duties.

Letters From the Troops

Bomb Whistles Past Canuck As He Writes Letter Home

Pte. Jack Telford, Plainfield, Predicts Smashing Victory for Britain—Meets Home Town Pal in England

"BABY CRYING AGAIN"

Dear Anne, —

Received your letters of September 7 and 9th. Glad to know you are all well. You will excuse me if I don't write you as many long letters for you must realize I don't have the opportunities to write that you do. There is a lot of things about this war I cannot tell you about. You have not had any letters censored yet but you cannot tell when you will have. An A. A. gun Anne. is what is known as a pom-pom and shoots a good sized shell up into the air, when it gets up a certain height it explodes and covers quite a large area with pieces of shell and coming into contact with a plane it will bring it down. It is a very rapid firing gun and places of importance are surrounded with them, also very powerful searchlights. It is called a Pom-pom or ack-ack gun or for short just A. A. gun. A Bren gun is also an Ack-ack gun when it is mounted on a tripod ready for aircraft action.

Now about a balloon barrage. It is a lot of balloons around and through London. They are sent up on thin cables and the special air is lighter than ordinary air so they will float high and easy. these balloons are exceedingly large and comprised of a lot of compartments so that if one or two compartments are punctured by bullets the balloon will still stay up as the rest of it is still intact and holding air. If one or two bullets would put them down they would be no good as the cables would then fall to the ground and be useless. These balloons are up a certain height all the time, but when a raid is coming they are sent up higher into the clouds. The cables are all over the place like a spider's web and as the balloons blow about a plane dare not come down below the baloons because if he touches a cable drawn tight it will cut his plane in two and certainly bring him down. A pilot has to come quite low to see his target to make a direct hit but Hitler's men don't seem to be trying to make direct hits on military objectives so they stay above the barrage dropping their bombs at random.

The idea of the incendiary bombs is to start fires. It serves two purposes. one to panic the people and second to cause a blaze that will light up the place so the pilot will see where to bomb and of course fires are very destructive naturally. He is waging a war on civilians the same tactics he used in Poland and France with the idea probably of putting the people in a state of panic and disorganization thus holding up production of ammunition, tanks, planes and various other articles necessary to carry on a war. But he will never be able to break the spirit or morale of the British people for they just get their night's rest in — and carry on their work in the day time as usual.

The British can take it on the chin and come back for more but when we get ready to hand it to him he won't come back for more. We are just waiting till the time is ripe.

In the meantime he is pounding away and he might as well be ramming his head against a steel plate for he is only wasting tons and tons of valuable explosive and losing a lot of planes, but he can't afford (I don't think) to lose so many pilots and when his planes come down here the men are either killed or captured, where our pilots, a lot of them bail out in parachutes and being in our country are saved, We are certainly not fighting a losing battle. You have to occupy a country before you can take it and he can't occupy it from the air, also he cannot land troops here by boat for we have a navy that is a navy and if a few of them did get through they wouldn't last long. So don't let any one tell you we are losing because I'm here and know a bit of it.

The air raid siren is just finishing and I can hear German bombers on their way to London but it just means another one of those raids where some more of their pilots and machines won't go back to Germany or France for our boys will be going up to meet them. The English will not give in if London and the other cities were in ruins. When the sirens start to go the Londoners say "The Baby is crying again", as that is what it sounds like and when they hear the planes they say "Mamma, that man is here again". Just now I had to dive for the floor. I heard a bomb whistle past me. It has landed 500 yards away. It must be a time bomb as it has not exploded. It may go off in half an hour or may not go for 10 hours. We have dived into ditches and we don't wait to investigate of there is mud or not.

The planes are quite numerous above us right now and I can hear bombs and A. A. guns not far away. This last day or two I have seen some lovely fights in the air and a lot of planes coming down in flames. Bill Bailey's company is about 5 miles from us so have not seen him this week. I was reading your letter yesterday when a fellow saw Plainfield on the envelope and he told me he had his wife there. Then he said Della Barker was who he married. His name was Sherwin. I expect I will get my leave the end of — for 7 days. Hope you are all well. Give my love to Glen.

Yours.
Jack.

FRED HOUCHON, NEW POSTMASTER AT STIRLING

Born in England and Has an Unusual Military Record

SERVED OVERSEAS

Stirling, Oct. 24.—(Special)—Mr. Fred Houchin, who recently accepted the duties of Postmaster of Stirling, following his appointment by the civil service commission a few months ago is, in the belief of many local citizens, one possessing all the necessary qualifications to fill the office from every standpoint. An active citizen of Stirling for several years he is widely known throughout the entire district and his wide and varied business experience will also serve him to good advantage.

Born in Brighton, England, he received his early academic training in Brighton Municipal Secondary school and took special preparatory training for civil service work. With the outbreak of war in 1914 he enlisted and served with B.E.F. along with four other brothers. At the time of demobilization in 1919, he turned his attention to agriculture taking special training in fruit plantation in Kent and market gardening in Bedfordshire. After a time he came to Canada and furthered his interest in farming in the Stirling district where he made many friends. Since that time his experience his included farming in Saskatchewan; electrical work in Toronto; a sales agency in South Hastings, factory work at Oshawa and lately the operation of the Rose Tea room in Stirling of which he is the proprietor.

Since 1922 has been associated with the 1st Batt. Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and was recently awarded the long service medal for this service and at the present time is a lieutenant in the 2nd Batt. Hastings and Prince Edward Regt.

Keenly interested in all affairs of the community, he is president of the Stirling Horticultural Society and one of the most prominent workers in St. John's Anglican Church and a licensed Lay Reader of the Diocese of Ontario, President of the Hastings Deanery, Sunday School Association and Supt. of St. John's Sunday School.

Having knowledge of the thoroughness with which he has officiated in these many capacities his many friends of Stirling and district are confident that he will be efficient and obliging and capable in every manner as a public servant and wish him every success in his new position as Postmaster of Stirling.

Mr. Houchin officially took charge of the operation of the new Stirling Post Office on October 15th., 1940.

St. Paul's Church Stirling Observes 87th Anniversary

The auditorium of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was filled to the doors for two most inspirational services of worship on Sunday, October 20th as friends from all parts of the county joined with the congregation in marking the 87th anniversary of the founding of the church. The guest speaker of the day was Rev. Dr. A. J. Johnston, Professor Emeritus of Preaching at Emmanuel College, Toronto University, a graduate of Albert College, Belleville, he expressed keen interest in his return to the district where he began his academic training, and delivered two forceful and timely messages to the large congregations.

An outstanding feature of the splendid services which were considered the most successful services in several years, was the fine musical contribution of the large choir under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute organist and choir leader.

An unique departure from the regular conduction of service was the staff of specially selected ushers made up from the younger members of the congregation, who performed their duty with commendable thoroughness throughout the day.

St. Paul's Y.P.U. Reorganize

At the regular weekly meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Union the annual election of officers was conducted by Rev. A. M. Laverty the minister. Miss Phyllis David was appointed head of the new executive group and in the office of Vice President Don Tucker will preside.

The meeting was opened with a brief devotional period directed by Mr. Don Williams with the use of hymns and two scripture readings given by Marietta McKee and Douglas Patterson; Miss Greta Nicholson gave a fine reading on Stewardship.

Miss M. Grey Speaks

The speaker of the evening was Miss Madeline Grey who delivered a fine address on the subject of "Stewardship" basing her thought on the parable of the talents. "Stewardship involves much more than the material phase of its being and should include prayer, reading, reercation, occupation influence and family responsibility," she declared. A musical contribution to the fine program was an instrumental duet by Misses Dorothy Pidgeon and Marie McKee.

Election of Officers

Conducted by the Minister Rev. A. M. Laverty resulted in the following directors being duly elected, Hon. President, Rev. A. M. Laverty, President, Miss Phyllis David, Vice President, Donald Tucker, Secretary Douglas Paterson, Treasurer, Geo. Duffin, Press Secretary, Mrs. Nora Wescott. These along with the committee conveners will direct activities for 1940-41. A brief and interesting recreation period directed by the minister followed the close of the meeting.

Personal Items of Interest

Rev. and Mrs. F. Joblin of Scugog Island, spent a few days recently renewing old acquaintances in Stirling and district. Rev. Joblin was present to conduct the anniversary services of Bethel United Church held on Sunday last.

Mr. Arthur Duncan attended Bethel anniversary services on Sunday and assisted with the musical part of the worship both morning and evening. He spent the day visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Shortt.

WEDDINGS

BRUYEA—MARSH

St. Patrick's Church, Napanee, was the scene of one of the prettiest weddings of the season at eight o'clock, Tuesday morning, when Miss Mary Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Marsh, Napanee, became the bride of James Garfield, son of Mrs. James Bruyea, and the late Mr. Bruyea, Deseronto.

The attendants were Miss Edith Bruyea, sister of the groom, and James Goulin, Deseronto, while the nuptial mass was sung by Rev. Dean E. M. Leacy, parish priest, The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a gown of aqua blue, with black hat and accessories and wore a corsage of roses. The bridesmaid was gowned in soldier blue with hat and accessories to match, and wore a corsage of roses. The church, which was nicely decorated, was well filled for the event, and Miss Agnes Cavanaugh presided at the organ. During the mass, the choir contributed appropriate numbers.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was held at the home of the bride's parents, at which thirty-five guests were present. The table was prettily decorated with carnations and centred with a lovely wedding cake.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Bruyea left for points west and upon their return will reside for a time in Napanee. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bishop and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop, Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Fleming, Stoco, Mrs. Bruyea and Harold Bruyea, Deseronto, Private Jack Bruyea, Petawawa and Percy Lougheed, Centreville.

W. C. T. U.

The October meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union took the form of a social gathering with the Field Secretary Miss Rosamond Duff as guest speaker. Guests from Trenton Union were present and welcomed.

Mrs. (Dr.) Baker presided and urged co-operating with the large delegation to secure war time restrictions in the sale of beverage alcohol.

The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Coulson. Psalm 91 was read and extracts for the deepening of the spiritual life with a season of prayer following.

Twenty-five dollars was voted for the Provincial Budget.

The Temperance Educational campaign in Sunday schools, being carried on this month, was discussed and the city schools asked to join in this study of alcoholic education.

It was urged that letters be sent by individuals, especially mothers of soldier boys, and many groups to Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National Defence, Premier King and the local Federal member, asking that the four point request of the large deputation of church leaders and the Temperance Federation, receive urgent action.

Miss Duff in her address read from a minute book of 1886 of the Provincial convention held at Owen Sound, when the Unions, of Madoc, Belleville and Trenton, report an active interest in the work.

At this convention a petition was sent Hon. G. W. Ross, asking for a text book for public schools on alcohol education and this was granted,—the beginning of this work.

A very interesting parlor meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Weir, 86 Bridge Street West, at which Miss Duff was guest speaker. She reviewed some of the problems faced today in regard to child life. She spoke of the funnies, the movies and much which have such a large place in the child's life.

"The child faces life, as we have made it. Let us seek to make a better world for them", she said.

Mrs. Cordes read the Scripture and prayer was offered by Mrs. Morris.

Mrs. Sweetman contributed a touching temperance reading depicting some of the suffering from Drink.

Mrs. Lloyd and her group were in charge and served a dainty lunch at the close.

S. C. JOHNSON & SON, LTD. BRANTFORD, CANADA

Douglas Dumbrille, Jon Hall, Olympe Bradna, Victor McLaglen and Frances Farmer, principals in Edward Small's romantic adventure of the South Seas, "South of Pago Pago," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE McCARTHY

"South of Pago Pago"

More than a five-cent cigar at this particular time the public needs film entertainment that will help it forget current chaotic conditions, and Jon Hall, Frances Farmer and Victor McLaglen in Edward Small's adventure drama of the South Seas "South of Pago Pago" now showing at the McCarthy theatre, is a choice candidate to fill that necessity.

Not since "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Hurricane" has there been a film in the same category that has captured the primitive beauty and epic romance of the South Seas so much as this one.

Skilfully directed by Alfred E. Green, its story develops logically and smoothly, maintaining maximum interest to the end. It would be difficult to single out any one player for acting laurels, since all are uniformly good. But the swaggering, blustery, good-natured, yet heartless Victor McLaglen is capital in the type of role in which only he excels. Frances Farmer, brings to the picture a performance that's sincere and convincing and Jon Hall, doing a characterization similar to that in "Hurricane" lives a role which will not soon fade from one's memory. Other principal players in the production are Olympe Bradna, Gene Lockhart, Douglas Dumbrille, Robert Stone and Francis Ford, all of whom deserve special credit in making "South of Pago Pago" the thrilling colorful adventurous entertainment which it is, and which is recommended as a "must see" for every member of every family here.

Wife Preservers

Coffee pots need frequent thorough cleansings. Clean the spout with a stiff brush, dipped in cleansing powder, then rinse in plenty of boiling water. Invert to dry. Air pot in sun at least once a week.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE SHOWDOWN"

Clarence E. Mulford's famous cowboy character "Hopalong" Cassidy galloped into town this afternoon, and proved himself by far and away the most satisfactory all around he-man of the West that ever disported himself in front of a movie camera.

The occasion was the showing of "The Showdown", at the Capitol Theatre and, as usual William Boyd came through like a trouper in his portrayal of Cassidy. With him, and also as usual, rode Russell Hayden in his characterization of "Lucky", and Britt Wood, once famous in vaudeville, and now making a name for himself as a film comic. Lovely Jane Clayton, Morris Ankrum and "The King's Men", singing cowboys, round out the cast.

"The Showdown" is a story of crooked gamblers and horse thieves who descend on a frontier town and plan to take over—until "Hoppy" gets on their trail. The story is fast moving, crammed with action, and has enough horse in it to satisfy the most rabid of horse and action fans.

On The Same Program.

The added attraction "Women in Distress" starring May Robson with Irene Hervey and Dean Jaggers will thrill you from start to finish and give you plenty of laughs throughout.

The "Baer-Comiskey" fight pictures will also be presented as well as Universal News of the day and the third chapter of our thrilling new serial "Tim Tyler's Luck" makes it an ideal program for the entire family.

AT THE BELLE

"I MARRIED A NAZI"

Hailed as a drama of unmatched appeal, the new 20th Century-Fox film, "I Married a Nazi" now on the Belle Theatre screen, audiences will be stirred by its dramatic revelation of a beautiful girl's experiences with the husband she thought she knew.

Based on Oscar Schisgall's powerful story in Liberty Magazine, "I Married a Nazi" is rich in possibilities for dramatic entertainment. The film's unique and unforgettable characters are played by some of the top names on Hollywood's horizon, including Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan and Anna Sten—all of whom are starred.

Joan's performance as the young and beautiful wife who suddenly finds her husband a stranger has received much favorable advance comment, while Francis Lederer, in his portrayal of the husband, is said to provide one of the film's outstanding highlights.

Lloyd Nolan as the American foreign correspondent and Anna Sten as the "other" woman are said to give sterling performances in exacting roles.

The cast of "I Married a Nazi" was selected by Producer Darryl F. Zanuck. Others who are featured include Otto Kruger and Maria Ouspenskaya, two of the screen's most adroit interpreters of difficult character roles, and Ludwig Stossel and Johnny Russell. Irving Pichel directed the film from a screen play by Oliver H. P. Garrett while Raymond Griffith was associate producer.

"Yesterday's Heroes."

All the thrills of football touchdowns, roaring crowds and the real drama behind them are shown in "Yesterday's Heroes", 20th Century-Fox film announced as the companion feature. A different football film, it tells the real "inside" story of modern big-time football.

"Yesterday's Heroes" has a strong featured cast including Jean Rogers, Robert Sterling, Ted North and many others.

"Land of Flowers", a beautiful traveltalk in technicolor will also be exhibited.

Stop-Watch Math

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

I must have been about twelve years old when in the little country school we had verbal (reading) problems in arithmetic. The teacher dictated them from a book and we were supposed to solve them on the board. Three of us in the class—Almeta Sosey, Charley Atkinson and I. Charley and I waited until "Meta" began so we might know whether to add, subtract, multiply or divide. "Meta" seemed always to know. She was a whizz at arithmetic and spelling. She was a few years older than Charley and I and I always thought her very pretty. Some years earlier I used to have to go sit beside her for punishment. But as I grew older this was no longer punishment! Today she is married and has a lovely family of her own and some gray hairs and that's more than I have of any shade.

It was years before I gained any confidence at solving verbal problems. I made progress when we used the book and had the problems right before our eyes, with lots of time to read and study it carefully. But when we used to try to carry the whole thing in our little heads I felt confused.

Down with Dictation

Fewer teachers now than then dictate verbal problems in arithmetic, but too many still do. Down with all dictation! What is worse than dictation of verbal arithmetic problems is having youngsters work such problems from a printed or mimeographer page against the watch. Pressed for time, the hurried child short-cuts, takes a chance and gambles on the answer. Instead of reading the whole problem carefully and taking enough time to ascertain what it means he will look hurriedly from one number to another and guess whether it is an add, subtract or multiplying problem. Often in this column I have condemned stop-watch drills in adding, subtracting and the like of "bare" numbers. Still more to be condemned is doing of verbal problems against the watch.

Parents May Help

Your child might be highly accurate in adding, subtracting, multiplying or dividing. Even then, he may, in attacking a verbal problem have trouble knowing which process to employ.

Have you watched a child play with numbers before going to school? Have you ever seen him adding when he should subtract or vice-versa? Or dividing when he should multiply? You have not. He doesn't have such confusions until after he enters school. At leisure in play, he senses the real situation. Under presusre at school he does not often have a real situation, nor does he have time and motive to use his imagination.

Now you can help him with verbal problems by inducing him to take plenty of time, by creating a calm and serene atmosphere for him, by leading him to read the problem slowly and carefully. You also can make up interesting verbal problems for him from vivid experiences of his and from facts in the newspaper.

Questions and Answers

Q. Do you think parents ever should conspire to make dates for their sons and daughters?

A. Yes; they often should, especially for the daughter. Such co-operation by the parents has great possibilities but requires enormous tact and social skill. Parents do most good in this direction whose most effective efforts are least apparent to the youths concerned.

Q. After spanking a child of three or four, should he also have to sit in a chair or stay indoors as additional punishment for the same offense?

A. No; employ one form of punishment for an offense. End it there and never bring the matter up again. In case the same offense is repeated, repeat the same punishment. With no apparent results after several such procedure, lengthen or intensify the punishment. The certainty of punishment is more powerful than its intensity, as a rule.

Q. If my youngster, serving sentence as punishment, sitting in a chair, asks me a question, or desires to talk to me on matters unrelated to his offense or punishment, what should I do?

A. Answer him, or converse with him as calmly and naturally as if nothing irregular had occurred. Merely let him serve his time.

AN EXCITING and lively day, both in private and business affairs, is the augury based on the lunar and mutual transits. New and important projects are under high stimulus for initiative and constructive developments, but these may not be without setbacks, delays or disappointments as well as some financial problems.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the brink of a very lively and challenging year, with much in business as well as private life to test the capacity for control, prudence, calm judgment and restrained tactics.

A child born on this day should have much ability and force of character.

Attention to Details of Dress Spells Good Grooming

Go to the dressing room when you want to make yourself a new face.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Good grooming calls for fastidious attention to many small details of dress and get up. If the beauty class will permit, teacher will ask a few questions. You can keep your answers a dead secret, but be faithful to yourself and answer truthfully.

Do you have the taps of your heels straightened the moment they show signs of being run over and do you look-see that the seams of your stockings are straight?

When you open your purse do you display a holy mess of junk? If so, that's bad. Do you tag around with powder and stray fuzzers on your shoulders? No, of course you don't.

Apply Lipstick in Private

Do you apply lipstick after you have eaten a meal in a public place and do it right before the public eye? Let us hope not. Go to the dressing room when you want to make yourself a new face.

Are your slips plenty short so the hem will never show below your skirt and are shoulder straps properly adjusted? Are you fussy about keeping neckwear and gloves scrupulously clean? Do you put your shoes on shoe trees, and keep your dresser drawers in apple pie order?

x x x

When you've been hoofing it over shopping trails give feet a little comforting care.

Bathe them with clear cold water, not hot; they're already feverish. Have a brisk friction with a coarse Turkish towel, massage with mineral oil. Place the fingers under the waist of the foot, thumbs above, rotate the thumbs from toes to ankles. Keep on until the oil has disappeared. Fluff on borated talcum.

When the Higher Grade Pupils Lag in Reading

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Beyond the fourth and fifth grade, and even in high school and college, there are some very poor readers. The books from which they are supposed to read and learn facts are far too hard for them. For anyone to make progress at reading skill, he must practice on materials easy enough for him to read with effectiveness.

You can help the poor reader if you can induce him to read to you or someone else from books several grades lower than where he is at school. If, for example, he is in the sixth grade he might profit most by reading from a book easy enough for the average second grade child.

Be sure his pals are not present when he reads from such "easy" materials. Help him save his face and never to feel ashamed of his reading lag. Better still, you can induce him to read to a younger child to entertain this child.

Reading Difficulties Cause Failure

If he has trouble with geography, history, science, his trouble is with reading. Children don't fail in these subjects, as a matter of fact, they fail in reading. Most of the school work above the first grade consists of reading. Preparation of a lesson is an exercise in silent reading, as a rule. Many high school and college failures are reading failures.

If your child finds his text books hard for him to read, you should read his assignments to him. Help him turn each paragraph into a sentence or two of his own as he listens while you read. In like manner help him gain the contents of a whole assignment. Occasionally he may be glad to read some in the text to you. As he does so you will be impressed with the magnitude of the task he has when he tries to prepare his lessons.

So also with his assigned poems or books in English. Read them aloud to him. Anyway he will gain more from rhythm and style as he listens than from reading it silently.

Many a youth in high school, even in college, could make great improvement in his grades through such assistance. I should like to see hundreds of parents help their high school students in this way.

In addition to this procedure, the poor reader in the upper grades and high school should read aloud for at least half an hour a day from easy materials. He might profitably read aloud from the Bible, since the vocabulary is easy and the style simple.

The poor reader should be induced to browse in the public library and find things that appeal to him. Magazines have possibilities. For the child between eight and twelve, books with sleight-of-hand tricks are popular. Excellent for motivating silent reading since in order to do the trick the child must dig out the directions.

Toronto Argonauts Must win Against Ottawa on Saturday To Have Chance to Finish First

Friction Between Teams Over Injury to Tony Golab is Running High

SARNIA HAS CHANCE

Must Defeat Balmy Beach to Make Sure of Playoff Berth in O.R.F.U.

Return games always are full with the flavor of possible revenge and, even if the Ottawa-Toronto dispute wasn't there to add more zest, next Saturday's matches still would hold interest today as the focus in the east's regular football schedule.

For one thing, there are perhaps more "ifs" attached to these games in both the Provincial and Ontario Union than at any other time in the season. First place and possible play-off opponents all will be thrown into the scramble as both leagues start the second half of their schedules.

Besides the matter of first place in the Interprovincial Union, there's the friction arising from the Tony Golab injury to settle when Ottawa Rough Riders invade Toronto to meet the Argonauts. The starry Ottawa half-back was injured when Rough Riders beat the Argonauts last Saturday and the Ottawans have been most insistent about an investigation by league officials.

Must Win Contest.

In addition, Toronto needs to capture this one to hold any sort of a chance of wresting first place from the unbeaten Rough Riders. At the same time, an Ottawa victory coupled with a Montreal triumph would leave the Argonauts tied with Montreal for the second playoff spot.

Montreal will be trying to make it two in a row at home against Hamilton Tigers meanwhile. Coach Bill Hughes put the Montrealers through a two-hour drill last night, after which he announced them ready for a second straight victory that would eliminate Tigers altogether from the playoff race.

The situation is no less critical for the Ontario Union's teams. The unbeaten Balmy Beach of Toronto take on Sarnia at the soldiers' home field. Another victory by the Beaches following that last week over Sarnia would assure the Toronto club of first place in the league, while Sarnia can practically make sure of a playoff berth by winning.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

The "big two" of the National Hockey League—New York Rangers and Boston Bruins—both will start the season with the same fifteen men they finished one-two with last time.

• • •

Lester Patrick already announced that his only change will be the elevation of Frank Boucher from assistant to full-fledged coach of the Rangers. Now Boston's Art Ross says the Burins will be intact from last year for their opening game in Montreal Nov. 3.

• • •

Only one important lineup change has appeared in Toronto Maple Leafs' pre-season training at St. Catharines, Ont. The former Americans left winger, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, was shifted to centre in yesterday's workout. Schriner twice led the league in scoring with the Americans before Leafs purchased him for last season. In the shift to centre, he was flanked by Red Heron and Lex Chisholm yesterday.

• • •

With other changes in Montreal Canadiens' policy, apparently has come a loosening up of purse strings. Two players have signed contracts at the St. Hyacinthe, Que., camp—Elmer Lach, an amateur from Moose Jaw, Sask., and the all-star left winger, Hector (Toe) Blake. Toe is reported to be getting one of the highest salaries in the N.H.L.

• • •

Art Ross, who announces his Boston Bruins will start this season with the same fifteen men that finished the last one, believes the competition will be stiffer all through the league this time. He lays it to the training that most of the players took during the summer with the non-permanent active militia.

• • •

When Buzz Boll scored a goal in Regina Tuesday night to help New York Americans beat their intracity rivals the Rangers, his father, Frank Boll, and a supporting group from Boll's home town of Fillmore, Sask., were in the rink to lead the cheering. Three former Regina players, goalie Earl Robertson, defenceman Pete Slobodzian and centre Murray Armstrong, were given loud applause by their home fans.

• • •

Aldridge (Baz) Bastien, a French-Canadian rookie from Timmins, Ont., has blossomed as a rival to Turk Broda for the net-minding job on Toronto Maple Leafs. Bastien has been going particularly well in the Leafs practices at St. Catharines, Ont. He was elevated to the position of full-fledged understudy for Broda with the sale of goalie Phil Stein by the Leafs to New Haven of the American League.

New York, Oct. 24.—(AP)—New fangled stuff: Golfer Jug McSpaden has been given what amounts to a life time contract by Boston's swank Winchester Club . . . and Mose Simms, colorful coach of the St. Mary's (Texas) Football team, has guaranteed New Yorkers their dough back if they don't like the way his cowboys go against Long Island University, Sunday.

Vicious left of heavyweight Billy Conn is here shown glancing off jaw of Al McCoy during ninth round of their bout at Boston Gardens which came very close to sending McCoy to the canvas. AS FORDHAM DEFEATED PITTSBURGH IN SNOWSTORM

Battling through a snowstorm that covered the Pittsburg gridiron with a muddy blanket, Fordham's Rams scored four touchdowns to topple Pittsburgh 24-12 and remain undefeated and untied. Jim Blumenstock, star Fordham back, is shown going through the Pitt line in a prelude to his 40-yard run that gave the Rams one of their touchdowns.

Goalie Bert Gardiner Got a Real Break In Trade to Canadiens

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Oct. 24 (CP)—Product of the New York Rangers chain system, goalie Bert Gardiner figures he got "the biggest break in the world" when traded to Montreal Canadiens and is quietly determined to make good in his first crack at a National Hockey League berth.

Gardiner was traded to the Canadiens at the close of last season after five years with the Philadelphia Ramblers, where he was American League understudy to the Rangers' Dave Kerr. During that time, he was called up for only seven games when injuries forced Kerr from the Rangers' lineup.

"That Davie Kerr looks like he's going to play in the New York nets forever—he's getting better all the time," said Gardiner. "A fellow doesn't want to play minor league hockey forever, so I figure I got the biggest break in the world when I was traded to Canadiens."

The seven games that Gardiner did play with Rangers would have been enough to gain him a regular berth on almost any other N.H.L. team. All of them were against Boston, and six were in the playoffs against Boston two years ago when Kerr was injured after the first game.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Willyum, we really must have the Hewses here for bridge, we were at their house the last 2 times, I mean it's a social obligation, Willyum, what do you think?

I think so, pop said, and ma said, Then I'll call Maud up and invite them over this evening. Or come to think of it, perhaps you'd prefer to see the French Follies this evening, Willyum. The show is only in town for one week and it's suppose to be the last remnant of real imported French gayety. What do you think, Willyum? she said.

I think we better have the Hewses over, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum how can you be so inconsistent?

For Peet sake let's review the bidding, pop said. Didn't you say we owe the Hewses some bridge? he said, and ma said, Of course I did, and that's what makes you so inconsistent. I mean you'd genrelly move heaven on earth to get out of a bridge game, and now when you have the golden alternative of going to see a show like the French Follies you actually choose bridge. If that's not inconsistency what does the word mean? she said.

It means suggesting having the Hewses over for bridge and then trying to argue me out of your own idea, pop said. I can read all about French follies in the daily papers, and besides, the show proberly has acquired a German accent by this time, he said, and ma said, Oh all right for land sakes I'll call Maud up this minute if you're so set on it.

Who said I was set on it? pop said. I'll stop for the tickits on my way to the office, he said, and ma said, Now that sounds more like you, at least that's consistent. I'll call you up at the office to make sure you remembered, she said.

Wich she proberly did.

STARRING WITH OTTAWA

BOSTON BRUINS READY FOR GRIND WITH SAME TEAM

Art Ross Will Use Same 15 Players Who Won the N.H.L. Title Last Year

CLAPPER CAPTAIN

Bill (Flash) Hollett Will Hold Down Utility Berth on Squad

Boston, Oct. 24—(AP) — Boston Bruins will rely this year on the same fifteen players who carried the club to the National Hockey League championship last season, only to drop the Stanley Cup series to New York Rangers when the Boston team was crippled by injuries.

"This team should be as strong as last season's club," says General Manager Art Ross. "Of course, we expect much stiffer competition all through the league. But every club should contribute to the fastest breakaway in league history with the players reporting in such advanced physical condition due to military training."

Ross feels that the coming schedule is to the disadvantage of the Boston team with several double week-end contests on the road. "If we are going to repeat, it will require greater hockey than the team played last season," he said. "The Rangers should be as strong as or stronger than last year and the break in games on the schedule imposes a handicap on us."

Ross took 12 amateurs to the Hershey training camp and also worked the flashy Hershey bear line of Terry Reardon, Pat McReavy and Gordon Bruce but finally decided to stand pat on last season's line-up.

That will put Frank Brimsek in the nets with Captain Dit Clapper and Jack Shewchuk forming one defence tandem and Jack Crawford and Des Smith making up the other. Bill (Flash) Hollett will hold down the utility berth.

He'll use the same three forward lines. The high-scoring line centred by Milt Schmidt with Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer on the wings; the trio in which veteran Bill Cowley is flanked by Roy Conacher and Mel Hill and last season's surprise third line made up of Art Jackson at centre and Herb Cain and Eddie Wiseman at the wings.

That places a question mark squarely after the name of Robert (Red) Hamill on the Bruin roster. The big red-head, used alternately at defence and a wing berth last season, has been flashing great form in pre-season drills. It may be that his spirited play will induce Ross to carry a 16-man squad, as was done in the closing weeks of last season when Hamill was recalled from Hershey Bears.

Ross feels that this is the strongest team he can assemble.

"CLOTHIERS OF QUALITY"

CALLING [illegible]

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

"How about organizing a Belleville hockey club and getting some of our business and industrial men interested in the game in the same manner that was in vogue years ago, when we had some good hockey teams in Belleville?" S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, member of the Ontario Hockey Association executive committee, asked us earlier in the week. Mr. Burrows is possessor of all the equipment previously owned by Eddie Thomas and the Redmen and is willing to pass along such paraphernalia to a local hockey club for use in O.H.A. circles this winter. There has been considerable comment heard up and down the main street in Belleville relative to the future of hockey for the coming season, but nothing concrete can be obtained. Looks as though they're waiting and doing a lot of wishful thinking, some of which is being heard in a whispering campaign.

What's the use of beating around the bush, why not face the facts? If Belleville hopes to have an intermediate hockey team to cope with Peterboro' or the Air Force, we've got to go out and bring in six tried and proven pucksters. That is to say a full team, including goalkeeper, two defencemen and a high-class trio of forwards including a centre and two wing players. Perhaps the alternate positions could be taken care of by those players who are now in the city. It must be remembered that the Redmen failed to win a single intermediate O.H.A. contest last winter. If the team representing Belleville couldn't win last season, how can we expect the same players to accomplish something better this season when they failed so miserably last year? As for Peterboro, the Petes are Eastern Canadian intermediate hockey champions and they'll be just as tough to beat in 1941 as they were in 1940, so if Belleville hopes to compete with the higher bracket clubs, we simply must bring in the players and when importing players the only successful method is to bring in good ones.

It is not expected that either the Air Force or Belleville will be represented in the Van Horne Memorial Cup series in Kingston this semester, although the Kingston moguls would welcome a local junior entry. The Quintes will be minus several of their last season's players, which is apparently of some concern to Prexy Cook and Secretary Yanover. However, if a Belleville junior squad was entered in the Kingston pre-season hockey group the local management could try out as many new aspirants as they wished and no doubt strengthen their club. Annually Wally Elmer looks over the junior clubs in the Kingston league and by the time New Years rolls around Coach Elmer has a fairly good idea where and what material is available for a Kingston junior squad. Efforts to open the Van Horne series earlier this year in order to complete the finals before New Years are being contemplated by the Kingston moguls, intimates Kingston Scribe Bill Walshe, which should prove most acceptable to all concerned.

Congratulations are being accepted by Mrs. Archie Duffield and Joe Legault, 1940 winners of the two-ball foursome golf title at the Belleville Golf Club. Mrs. Duffield and Mr. Legault beat Mrs. Dunlop and Harry Ridley, two up and one to go in the club finals this week. Incidentally Mrs. Dunlop is a niece of Premier McKenzie King. In a challenge return game, that had all of the markings of a grudge match played yesterday, Mrs. Duffield and Mr. Legault proved their championship qualities by defeating Mrs. Dunlop and Mr. Ridley in a friendly return match for good measure.

Do you remember when Joe DiMaggio, whose bat earned him the circuit's batting championship and helped New York Yankees to a fourth straight world series tilt, was voted the most valuable player in the American Baseball League, a year ago today?

A veteran addict of the McGraw school of play, according to the New York Sun, calls attention to the following lapses in the 1940 World's Series, which, the paper states, no one else seems to have observed collectively:

1. That Bartell held the ball while McCormick scored.
2. That Newsom held the ball while Wilson walked to second.
3. That Rowe forgot to cover first base.

His conclusion is that such slips are nothing to get excited about in the American League, where slugging is the rule and a base or two, here and there, means little.

SPORT SPICE—Now that Joe Medwick is headed westward and leaving St. Louis, the famous "Gas House" is closed up and forgotten. . . . It is rumoured with a degree of certainty that Joe DiMaggio is the only member of the Yankees sure of his position in 1941. . . .And how the mighty have fallen, from heroes to hoboes in one short season, so to speak. . . . See where Hensall beat the Columbus Grads 16 to 0 to knot the intermediate O.B.A. finals at one game each. . . Perhaps it is just as well the South Hastings nine was eliminated, rather than wait a full month, as have Carmen Bush's charges. . . . Umpire - Referee Bill Stewart will be the guest speaker at the annual Niagara Falls Baseball Association banquet on the 8th. . . . He replaces Joe Cronin, manager of the Red Sox, who was forced to cancel the engagement. . . . "Peanuts" O'Flaherty, former Toronto amateur, scored a goal for the Amerks, as they beat the Rangers 5-2 the other night.

Hershey Bears Defeated By Boston Bruins 7-2

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 24—(AP)—The Boston Bruins went back to their workout routine today after taking a second successive exhibition tilt from their Hershey Bears farmhands, turning on the power this time for a 7-2 decision.

Today and tomorrow they will have the regular double drill, one of the sessions being devoted to scrimmage. Saturday night they meet the Bears for a third time in an exhibition encounter.

The Bruins were slow to get under way last night and were held to a lone tally in the first 23 minutes of play. In the third period they turned on the heat and piled on the goals for the top heavy victory.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 24—(CP)—Mining and Western Oil stocks weakened in the early session on Toronto Exchange today and the Industrials registered a modest advance in slow action. Aggregate turnover in the first three hours totalled only 89,000 shares.

Some of the Golds traded in fair volume with price declines developing for Powell Rouyn, Cochenour Willans, Pamour, Pickle Crow, Malartic Gold Fields, Kerr-Addison and others.

Noranda and Sherritt were stronger Base Metals while Jack Waite, Pend Oreille and Smelters were lower.

Few Industrials recorded changes. Bell Telephone was up and Steel of Canada down a point. Senior Oils held steady along with the Utilities and Foods and the Papers were a bit heavy.

Foothills and Anglo-Canadian dropped 2 cents and other Western Oils showed no changes at early afternoon.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 24 (AP)—Stocks held moderately firm today in the face of considerable profit cashing on the two-day advance.

While the trend was irregularly lower from the start, weakness was a rarity and, here and there, modest gains were to be seen near the fourth hour. Volume dwindled after a short period of early activity.

Among laggards the greater part of the session were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Anaconda, Consolidated Edison, Texas Corp., Great Western Sugar and American Can.

Dome Mines, in the Canadian list, improved slightly. Canadian Pacific, Walker and Distillers Seagram held unchanged. Canada 4s, among Bonds, advanced 3-8 point.

Butter Prices Fractionally Better

Toronto.—Butter prices moved up fractionally on the Toronto open produce market while eggs remained quietly steady. Trading was not heavy.

Light offerings kept the butter market firm. Early sales of first-grade Ontario creamery solids were made at 28 3-4c, with supplies clearing easily at this level. Later in the day the price advanced to 29c. Receipts were very light. Demand was not heavy, but appeared sufficient to keep offerings moving steadily.

Eggs were steady. A quiet feeling was in evidence. Receipts were light, but demand was only fair. A-large eggs stayed unchanged at 43c in the graded section and 46c in wholesale-to-retail trading.

Espionage Trial Court Decides On Separate Trials

London, Oct. 24 —(CP)— The court hearing the espionage trial of Tyler Kent, 29-year-old dismissed sypher clerk in the United States Embassy here, and Anna Wolkoff, daughter of a former Czarist, Russian admiral, ruled today the defendants should be tried separately.

After the decision, the woman left the dock and the Crown opened the case against Kent.

Huge War Industries Plant May Cost Nearly Ten Million Dollars

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)—Construction of a huge war industries plant in the Toronto vicinity is now being planned, it was learned unofficially last night. It was said the plant might cost between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000, but plans for this extension of the explosives program now being carried out in Canada had not reached the stage where any details could be disclosed.

'UNPLEASANT WINTER' FOR HITLER, SAYS DAUGHTER OF WRITER

New York, Oct. 24 (CP)—Britons look forward to a land attack on Germany and are sure Hitler will have an "unpleasant winter," Erika Mann, daughter of the exiled German writer, Thomas Mann, said here Wednesday on her arrival from London. AIR MINISTER possibly be made from the ranks of infantry battalions.

When a parachutist landed, added Maj. Power he naturally became a machine gunner, a bomber or perhaps a sniper and thus this corps would not fall completely under air force jurisdiction.

About a dozen reporters heard the Air Minister answer questions in his downtown office.

He told of the need of funds for wartime research purposes and said public gifts were more to be desired than the granting of funds for research by parliament because in many cases research failed to produce anything and it was difficult to justify the expense. On the other hand research might produce something of paramount importance in the winning of the war.

Graduation at Trenton

Maj. Power referred to the graduation at Trenton, Ont., this morning of the first brood of air observers under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan and said they were the beginning of a steady stream of reinforcements for the defenders of the United Kingdom.

Graduations, said the Minister, will continue every four weeks and trained men will go forward to bolster forces steadily gaining against the German air power.

Acceleration in establishment of training plan schools was steady. Instead of a scheduled 25 schools in operation on September 15, there were 32 and at the end of next month the number would be 40 rather than 32 previously planned and 48 at the end of the year rather than 36.

Expenditures naturally were accelerating rapidly and the expenditure on air during the year might run to $260,000,000 as suggested by Defence Minister Ralston. Part of this, Maj. Power said, would be accounted for by expenditure for aircraft which had been expected from the United Kingdom.

Airdrome expenditures currently run to $20,000,000 but the Minister said this did not have to be paid immediately.

Lack of Equipment

Maj. Power said the R.C.A.F. still suffered from lack of equipment though there now is plenty of personal equipment. He was not prepared to say how much training courses in service flying schools eventually will be reduced but the intention is to reduce them somewhat further than as previously announced, from 16 to 14 weeks.

Replying to a question Maj. Power said it was not contemplated to ask reduction in Trans-Canada Air Lines services which were "rendering a national service" in favor of obtaining instructors and personnel for the Air Force. He felt the "usefulness of T.C.A. as it is probably outweighed" any advantage which might accrue from its discontinuance.

600 Shipyard Workers At Georgian Bay Port Want Higher Pay

A Georgian Bay Port, Ont., Oct. 24 —(CP)— Demanding a higher standard wage scale and double time for Sundays and holidays, 600 workers at a shipyard here went on strike today, paralyzing work on several large government jobs.

Machinists, boiler workers, steel workers and steamfitters followed up a meeting last night, at which a strike vote was taken, by not working today. The workers charged that skilled men in Toronto and Kingston shipyards were getting a higher rate of pay.

Government officials were reported to have arrived here to attempt a speedy settlement and a resumption of the work on government contracts.

PETAIN LEAVES

Spain struck at Britain's trade with South America as well as her sea link with India by way of the Cape of Good Hope.

The bases involved in the agreement reported now under consideration by the French Government are strategically situated in the Mediterranean.

The agreement, which would supersede the existing Armistice terms, would make the French fleet responsible for defence of the naval bases and would not otherwise involve its use by the Axis powers for war against Britain, these sources declared.

Would Move Frontier

In return, it was said, Germany would release all French war prisoners and would move the frontier of the area of France unoccupied by German forces northward from Tours and the Swiss frontier to the Seine River.

Paris, which straddles the Seine would be placed under a special regime, with part of the city ruled by the Petain-Laval Government and part by German authorities, it was said.

The French naval bases which would fall to the Axis under the projected agreement were described as Dakar, capital of French West Africa; Toulon, on France's Mediterranean coast; Casa-Blanca in French Morocco, and Bizerte, in Tunisia.

Bases Used In North Africa.

Air bases would be given the axis in North Africa and Syria—strategically situated for a possible assault on Egypt and the Near East, observers believed.

Diplomatic sources described the projected agreement with France as purely a "transitional arrangement" and said the Germans had made it clear that final peace terms would depend upon France's "loyal collaboration" in the axis-planned new European order until the end of the war.

Laval who said Hitler Tuesday was represented as anxious for a definite peace settlement, but Petain and others, it was said, flatly refused to pay the price—an outright alliance with Germany against Britain.

Chose Lesser of Two Evils.

Petain therefore was reported to have been persuaded to accept the projected new agreement as the lesser of two evils. His only alternative was said to have been German-Italian occupation of all France.

Laval, who returned to Vichy yesterday to confer with Petain and other government officials, was expected back in Paris today.

French sources said one argument used by the Germans in an attempt to obtain France's co-operation was that the conquered republic might starve this winter unless the British blockade were broken down.

These sources also suggested that Hitler might have used similar arguments to persuade Spain to accede to axis desires.

Before Hitler talked with Franco it was reported the Spanish leader was reluctant to drag his country into the war by making it a party to a drive against Gibraltar, despite Spain's long-cherished desires to regain this stronghold.

Important Decisions

Rome, Oct. 24—(AP) — Fascist quarters said today that important decisions designed to restore to Spain a position of power in the Mediterranean may result from Hitler's meeting yesterday with Spanish dictator Franco.

In the absence of more specific information, foreign observers interpreted this as suggesting Spain's early collaboration with the axis in the war preliminary to an axis attack on the British stronghold of Gibraltar.

The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma boasted that "deeds will spring forth from the conversation" without indicating what they might be.

Il Messaggero said the conference was evidence that Spain had decided "to regain her autonomy, power and liberty in the Mediterranean."

"In this sea," the latter newspaper added, "Spain has the right to wield an influence conforming to her geographical position and glorious past."

(In the past it has been the Italian custom to refer to the Mediterranean as "mare nostrum" or "our sea.")

Conference Ended

Berlin, Oct. 24—(CP)—The German propaganda agency announced today that Hitler's conferences with Spanish dictator Franco, presumed to have as their object enlistment of Spain as an active ally of the axis, had ended and that Hitler had left the meeting place in Spain.

The agency did not indicate where Hitler had gone, although its announcement was datelined "in France." Nor did it offer any speculation regarding the nature of the conferences or the degree of success they attained from Germany's standpoint.

(In neutral sources at Berne, Switzerland, it was believed Hitler was seeking to gain a measure of collaboration from the Petain-Laval regime in France as well as from Franco with a view of trying a three-way offensive from French ports in the Mediterranean, Spanish ports on the Atlantic and in the Canary Islands and French African air bases which might be used as springboards for an assault on Egypt.

Trying to Mask Britain's Gains

(Observers believed the axis partners were anxious to get some action in progress quickly to mask the Royal Air Force's blighting of Nazi invasion plans against the British Isles and the bogging down at Sidi Birrana of the Italian land drive in Egypt.)

For a long time the German press has been stressing the "impossibility" of Britain maintaining Gibraltar which, the papers said, "by indisputable natural right belongs to Spain."

The Nazi spokesmen asserted that Germany had given Spain "conclusive proof" of her friendship for the Franco movement in the Spanish Civil War and said there "has been a de facto comradeship in arms" between them.

They said British opposition to "Spain's renaissance, which was visible during the Spanish Civil War, continues today even to such an extent that Spanish Reds are to be found in the forces of De Gaulle."

Laval Returns to Paris

Vichy, France, Oct. 24 AP) —Vice-Premier Pierre Laval returned to Paris today from Vichy with Premier Philippe Petain's answer to Hitler's proposals for a French reply were not made known. (A paragraph was censored here.)

Although Laval was scheduled to return to aris last night, he was delayed in his departure.

Unconfirmed reports in Vichy were that Hitler's proposals advanced in Paris in conferences with Laval contained nothing so definite as peace terms and entrance of Vichy, France into the war.

These reports said, however, he asked for a general alignment of Vichy, France in the "new European order" as envisaged by Germany and Italy.

It was reported the same general proposition was presented to the Spanish Chief of State, Francisco, in border conferences yesterday.

Hitler is seeking, it was said, to form a general continental bloc against Britain. (One line censored.)

What remains of the French fleet and air force will remain under Vichy's control, official sources repeated. (Three lines censored).

Yesterday, semi-official sources declared there was no question of these forces being used against Britain.

LONDONERS ENJOY

Frequent bomb blasts heralded the on-schedule arrival of the raiders shortly after dark but the attack quickly tapered off and a "raiders passed" signal sounded not long after midnight, as on the previous night.

The Germans renewed their assault shortly before dawn and Archies barked sporadically but the all clear sounded again a short time later.

The air ministry describing the night's aerial activity as "not on a heavy scale," said the only bombs dropped were in London, the counties around the capital, a town in northeastern England and a few in southern Scotland.

R. A. F. bombers, meanwhile attacked "objectives in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany," the Air Ministry announced.

Air Raid Claim in Berlin

Dangerous landing weather in northern France and the soupy sky over the channel were credited widely with forcing the German air force to pull its punches for the second night in succession. Londoners had time for a long, uninterrupted sleep between the night alarm and the one near dawn.

"Houses and shops were damaged at several points," the government said in a communique describing the night's Nazi activity, "but up to 5:30 this morning no reports of extensive damage had been received and the casualties reported were not numerous though some persons are known to have been killed."

A second communique of the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security said late reports on the night's raids showed that in the London area damage was slight and the number of casualties small.

Some Houses Demolished

A number of houses were demolished in one area by high explosive bombs.

A doctor and a nurse, with shell splinters falling around them, worked for several hours with the aid of a flashlight to reach a woman buried in the debris.

Later a rescue squad extricated her and she was taken to a hospital in serious condition.

Eighty persons in a pub escaped injury when a bomb burst in front of the building. Another hit a garage across the street and a third wrecked a neighboring house, but no one was killed.

Bombs were dropped on 10 districts of Scotland early today. First reports indicated damage was slight and casualties were few.

Britain Continues 'Daylight Saving'

London, Oct 24 (CP)—Britain will maintain daylight saving time throughout the winter, Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, informed the House of Commons today. It had been scheduled to end Nov. 17.

Under the daylight saving time London is five hours ahead of eastern standard time.

(In Canada places in Ontario and Quebec which observed daylight time during the summer will remain on it indefinitely under an order of the government.)

LARGE FLAX CROP

Winnipeg, Oct. 24 (CP)—Western Canada's 1940 flax crop, largest since 1930, is also of excellent quality, according to a statement issued here today by the Board of Grain Commissioners' Laboratory. Although only 40 samples have been analyzed so far, results indicate the linseed oil content will be about one per cent. higher.

DUNCAN PRESENTS

With the Deputy Minister at the presentation table were Group Captain J. A. Sully, officer commanding the base, Group Captain W. Curtis and other members of the station staff. Flight Lieut. F. L. Smallman assisted the Deputy Minister in the presentation ceremony.

The greater majority of the graduates who will be assigned to squadrons prior to their departure for overseas for duty with Canadian fighting squadrons and those of the Royal Air Force were from the western part of Canada with a sprinkling from the eastern provinces. A native Czecho-Slovakian Leading Aircraftsman J. Gee marched proudly to receive his "wing" as did J. A. Jepson, of Atlanta, Georgia. All graduates wore the propeller on their left arms, emblematic of the rank of leading aircraftsmen.

Drawn from all over Canada, they were the "pioneers" of air crew students in the early stages of the Air Training plan. With their contemporaries among the wireless operators and pilots and air gunners due to graduate shortly they spent a month at No. 1 Manning Pool, Toronto, and another month at the Eglington Hunt Club Training school.

They had their first taste of flying in the Air Observers School at Malton. Here they underwent a course of two weeks' instruction in photography, reconnaissance and air navigation. The student navigators set courses for seasoned pilots. They took aerial pictures, learned to sketch charts and to read maps and charts.

Followed a six-weeks' course in bombing and gunnery at Jarvis, Ont. They used modern bomb sights and dropped scores of practice bombs on targets floating offshore. Their four weeks' course at Trenton was an advanced course in the exact science of air navigation. Now they are the highly trained members of a closely coordinated unit, the modern air crew.

In a brief address to the graduates, the Deputy Minister told them they were "the fore-runners of that great host of young men . . . whose ever-growing strength will turn the tide of history."

"This great enterprise in which we are all associated and upon which the success of our cause so greatly depends, is now underway ahs reached the production stage," he said.

"The important fact is not that you have graduated, but that you are the first class to be graduated under the joint air training plan—the first of an endless chain of classes, Mr. Duncan told the observers.

"This is an occasion of great significance, an important day in your lives. It is far more than that—it is a great day for Canada, a great day for the British Empire and for those stricken peoples of the continent of Europe, whose release from bondage is solely dependent upon the success of our arms."

"There will be hardships and difficulties and danger will always be your companion. In those distant flights you will find below you not the peaceful farm districts of Ontario but the stricken ruins of France, Norway, Belgium and Holland. You will not be flying alone for with you will be the hearts of all Canadains as well as those of the Empire."

Following the presentation, the Deputy Minister with the Commanding Officer of the station and his staff took the salute as the personnel of the base swung by in march-past formation. Overhead the engines of training planes, fighters and bombers roared in salute. Duncan concluded his visit with an informal inspection of the base.

Many Sidelights

There are many interesting sidelights to this campaign now entering its final phases with Roosevelt and Willkie carrying on a last-minute tour which has them playing hide and seek through eastern States adjacent to the capital.

For instance the recently-passed Hatch Act limits the parties to a total maximum expenditure of $3,000,000. In the campaign four years ago the Republicans collected $8,000,000 and the Democrats $6,000,000. The Act limits contributions to $5,000 from any one source and there will be lean picking for political hangers on.

All 435 seats in the House of Representatives are in jeopardy but only 32 of the 96 Senate seats are to be filled in this election. One third of the Senate is elected every two years for six-year terms.

Present standing in the Senate is Democrats 69, Republicans 23, others four, total 96; in the House Democrats 260; Republicans 168, others seven, total 435.

Five Other Candidates

Although little is heard of them there are five other candidates for President of the United States. Their chances of obtaining any electoral college votes are very slim but they are in the fight.

The Socialist Party, something like the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation in Canada in its ideas of economic and industrial reform, has again nominated Norman M. Thomas for president.

Earl Browder, Communist leader in the United States is his party's candidate for president and has a negro, William Ford, as his running mate and candidate for vice-president.

Other less prominent organizations are the Socialist-Labor party whose candidate is John W. Aiken Massachusetts cabinet maker, the Prohibition Party seeking to elect Roger Babson, famous statistician and the National Greenback party led by John Zahnd, Indianapolis horticulturist and Monetary Reform advocate.

No Comment in Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—(CP)—External affairs and navy authorities professed no knowledge today of any possibility that some reconditioned submarines of the United States navy might join 50 over-age American destroyers now being transferred to the Canadian and British navies.

A navy spokesman, commenting on a Washington report that 36 American submarines were being reconditioned and might follow the over-age destroyers, said "No such report has come to our attention previously, officially or unofficially".

ROOSEVELT

Says Nation Closer to War

Mr. Willkie added:

"If his promise to keep our boys out of foreign wars is no better than his promise to balance the budget, our boys are already almost on the transports now."

It has been a hard fight waged by the Republican nominee and in the last two weeks or so his followers claimed he was scoring success after success. There was no question but that he was attracting large and sometimes boisterous crowds.

So "The Champ", President Roosevelt, came out of his Washington corner last night to make it a fight on the hustings. He came out fresh and admittedly eager for the fray because, he said, a series of "Republican falsehoods" needed refuting.

Until a few days ago the President had stood by a plan to refrain from intensive campaigning on the grounds that administrative duties did not permit it. He had made only a few speeches and called most of them "non-political."

The Republicans claim one success anyway—they got "The Champ" into the ring.

At Philadelphia last night, addressing the first of five gatherings he is scheduled to face in the next few days, Mr. Roosevelt said: "It is for peace I shall labor all the days of my life."

To statements by some Republican speakers that secret agreements existed with foreign governments, he replied:

"I give you this most solemn assurance: There is no secret treaty, no secret obligation, no secret commitment, no secret understanding in any shape or form, direct or indirect, with any other government, or any other nation in any part of the world, to involve this nation in any way or for any other purpose."

Then he attacked Willkie assertions that the United States still is in the depth of the depression with this declaration: 9,000,000 more persons are employed than in 1932, mine and factory production is 13 per cent. greater than in 1929, corporation profits are running $4,000,000,000 annually as compared with a $4,000,000,000 loss in 1932.

The President may have taken off his coat for the fight because he recognized Willkie popularity was on the upswing.

Two days ago Dr. George Gallup, head of the American Institute of Public Opinion, reported that the trend toward Mr. Willkie had gained momentum in the two-week period Oct. 18. Still, this latest Gallup poll had 55 per cent. of the popular vote for the President and 45 per cent. for Mr. Willkie.

If the present trend toward Willkie continues, Dr. Gallup predicts a close race——perhaps the closest since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson defeated Charles Evans Hughes, not long before the United States entered the First Great War.

HON. D. McARTHUR ELECTED MEMBER OF SIMCOE CENTRE

Minister of Education Unopposed at Nomination Meeting Wednesday

PREMIER SPEAKS

Barie, Ont., Oct. 24 (CP)—Hon. Duncan McArthur, appointed Minister of Education in the Ontario Liberal Government four days after the death last Aug. 18 of Hon. J. L. Simpson, succeeds the late Dr. Simpson as member of the Legislature for Simcoe Centre. He was elected by acclamation at a nomination meeting yesterday.

The nomination meeting was held without speeches. An election rally was held later in Barrie Collegiate Auditorium where Dr. McArthur, Premier Mitchell Hepburn and D. C. McCuaig, Liberal Member of Parliament for North Simcoe, addressed the meeting.

Dr. McArthur told the gathering that pupils in the schools of Ontario should be given a thorough grounding in the principles of democracy. Children should become familiar with the extent of obligations which the people of Canada and the other dominions owe to Great Britain "for the enjoyment of the democratic way of life," he said.

Mr. Hepburn lashed out at the apathy of the people of Canada in the war and urged Canadians to give whole-hearted support to Great Britain in the "present dangerous situation."

"She has defended us," he declared, and added that "I wish we had 10,000 Churchills in Canada."

The Premier said his complaint of Canada's war effort was not against the Dominion Government which is "doing better" now.

HELD INNOCENT IN AUTO DEATHS

James Wallace of R.C.A.F., Acquitted at Cobourg—Jury Deliberates Five Hours

Cobourg, Oct. 24 (Special)—An Assize Court jury last night acquitted James Wallace, a member of the R.C.A.F., of manslaughter and of reckless driving.

The jury deliberated five and a half hours. The charges against Wallace followed an accident in which two women, passengers in the car he was driving, were fatally injured.

"I am not going to read you a lecture," said Mr. Justice McFarland to Wallace. "You are a member of His Majesty's forces, and I hope you will be a credit to them. I trust you will not get into any more incidents such as these."

Wallace testified yesterday he didn't see the truck until he was seventy-five feet away from it, and at that distanc he was not able to define it as more than an object on the highway. When he saw it was a truck he swung out, but was unable to clear it.

"The trees overhang the highway at that point, and it seems like a tunnel," testified Wallace. "My car was going forty-five miles an hour, and just before the accident I started to slow up to conform to the town speed limit. Then I saw an object seventy-five feet away, but when I saw I couldn't stop in time I swung to the left but caught the side of the truck," Wallace said.

Sergt.-Major Perry, transport officer of the R.C.A.F., testified he regarded the place where the accident occurred as a danger spot because of poor visibility, and had issued warnings to all his drivers to be careful at that point.

F. B. Goodike, surveyor, also testified visibility was poor owing to overhanging trees.

TRIBUNE FORUM ADDRESSED BY NAVY MINISTER

Hon. A. L. Macdonald Says Democracy Can Only be Maintained by "Vigilant and Vigorous Effort"

FACES STERN TEST

New York, Oct. 24—(CP)—Democracy and the rights granted under democracy can only be maintained by "ever vigilant and vigorous effort," Hon. A. L. Macdonald. Canadian Navy Minister, said today in an address prepared for delivery before the New York Herald Tribune forum.

"For more than a year, we in Canada have been in the lists in defence of democracy against its deadly enemies," Mr. Macdonald said.

"We have sent men and ships and guns and planes over the seas, and we shall send more and still more so long as there is a single Canadian dollar left to be spent or a solitary Canadian citizen to take his stand in defence of freedom."

Meantime, United States citizens are girding themselves to defend their shores and to defend their rights and privileges as free Americans.

"These are our material preparations to defend democracy," Mr. Macdonald continued, "but let us remember that the struggle to establish democracy in the western world, while it had to be fought with arms, was also fought with a burning faith in the rights of the common man, in his capacity to govern himself, and to create a society in which ordinary men and women could live in decency and dignity.

"No matter how rough the road or how steep the path, so long as that faith endures democracy will not perish on this continent."

Democracy Facing Stern Test

Democracy—by which he meant government of the people by the people—faces today its sternest and most crucial test, Mr. MacDonald said. Even before the war democracy was under serious challenge. After hostilities began, democracy was in many cases forced to abdicate by the superior might of autocratic states.

Today, there were only two great and genuine democracies left—the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations. Now the peace and freedom of the world depended on a close understanding between Canada and the United States, and between the British Commonwealth and the United States.

"We shall meet our responsibilities first, I think, by continuing to show to the world ...The magnificent spectacle of peace which we have preserved for 115 years," Mr. MacDonald continued.

"We shall discharge our responsibility in the second place by adhering faithfully to the democratic tradition, to all that is best in that tradition."

He said democracy is a machine which "must be constantly watched and tended, if it is to discharge its function, if it is not to be broken and thrust aside." He added that democracy and the rights granted under democracy are only to be maintained by ever vigilant and ever vigorous effort."

Duke of Windsor Purchases Bicycle

Nassau, the Bahamas, Oct. 24.—(CP Cable)—Conforming to the custom of the country, the Duke of Windsor, Governor of the Bahamas and commander-in-chief of its forces, Wednesday purchased a bicycle.

Although motoring is permitted in the Bahamas, in contrast with Bermuda where even the Governor may not own a car, the Duke has chosen the most popular Bahamian method of conveyance to take him to work. He will cycle four miles daily to his office from his temporary residence at Cable Beach, and back.

There are 3,048 bicycles registered in the Bahamas.

Trenton Water Rates May be Increased

Trenton, Oct. 24—Trenton water rates are expected to be revised in the near future, following the report of consulting engineers from Toronto indicating that the rate is too low. Gore & Storrie, consulting engineers, Toronto, handed their report to the Public Utilities Commission this week.

The engineers were ordered on June 21, by Mr. E. R. Smithrim, Secretary and Manager of the Trenton Commission to make a study of the existing rate structure of the Water Works Department.

In commenting on the existing rates, the engineers point out that the net cost of producing water, including interest and fixed charges has varied between 9 3-4 and 10 3-4 cents per 100 cubic feet. The selling of water at any rate below these figures indicates that the water is being sold at less than actual cost. A five-cent rate such as is being paid by the Trenton Airport for all water used over 16,000 cubic feet per day does not even pay for the annual interest and fixed charges on the outstanding debentures.

The metered domestic consumers paid during 1939 on the average of $17.92 per meter and this based on the quantity of water registered by such meters indicates they paid at the rate of 40 cents per 100 cubic feet. Fify-five per cent of such metered consumers did not use the minimum quantity allowed of 500 cubic feet per month. Turning to the metered commercial consumers the average rate per meter for 1939 is $33.67 and this is based on the quantity of water registered by such meters indicates they are paying at the rate of 14 1-2 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Remembrance Day Service

Plans have been completed by the legions for the holding of the annual Remembrance Day Sunday Church Service. On Sunday, Nov. 10, all veterans in the town and district are invited to meet at the market square at 10.30 a.m. Members of Headquarters' Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Second Battalion, at Trenton, will march with the veterans to St. George's Anglican Church. The parade will be led by the R.C.A.F. band, by the consent of Group Captain J. A. Sully.

A service will be held at the Memorial Arch at Bayside Park, on Nov. 11. All veterans, soldiers, airmen and civilians are asked to attend this important service.

Rental Administrator to Visit Town

Word has been received here that W. A. Martin, rental administrator, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Ottawa, will visit Trenton on October 30 and 31. The administrator will hold a hearing to consider individual complaints which have been received by the mayor.

MOTORCYCLIST HURT IN MINOR CRASH

Howard Hall, 76 Geddes Street, motorcyclist, sustained minor injuries and bruises when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a north-bound automobile at the intersection of Campbell and Pinnacle Streets early today. The motor car was driven by C. R. Lucas, 10 Patterson Street and was about to pass a truck when the motorcycle drove out of Campbell Street and crashed into the rear fender of the motor car. Mr. Hall was hurled to the pavement as the result of the impact and sustained arm and leg bruises and other minor abrasions. P.C. Taylor, who investigated, reported it was apparent, that Hall did not stop at the designated "stop street" intersection. The front wheel of the motorcycle was badly damaged and the machine removed to Riggs Garage.

County Road System Being Prepared for The Winter Season

The usual Autumn improvements on the county roads system are going on apace although the work is made more difficult this year due to the absence of the annual fall rains, Roads Superintendent W. L. Langlois stated today.

Most of the gravel roads in the southern section have been bladed by power graders, and many miles of rough roads two weeks ago are now in better shape. The last of the shouldering, erections of guard rails and installation of culverts along the newly paved section of the Madoc road near Ivanhoe have been completed. Regrading of some five miles of county road between Eldorado and Malone has also been finished. This section is now being resurfaced with crushed rock from the county quarry north of Eldorado.

Another crusher is working in Rawdon Township on the road between Ivanhoe and Harold. Both machines will finish work for 1940 within a week.

Power grader improvement on the sandy section of the road running through Coe Hill village and extending for three miles west of that point has been done. A coat of pitrun gravel is being placed on the county road from Highway No. 2 to Detlor.

Other than some gravelling of the Flinton road and districts east of Frankford, and culverts and ditching on two or three locations, the road work for the season is practically over, Superintendent Langlois said. Labor has become noticeably scarce during the past six weeks while farmers appear to be busier than usual at this time of the year.

Young People of Kingston Presbytery Hold Fall Rally

The annual Fall rally of the Presbyterian Young People's Societies of the Kingston Presbytery was held at St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, on Tuesday evening, October 22nd.

Delegates from Burnbrae, Madoc, Picton, Roslin, Stirling and Trenton were present. The president of the Belleville Y.P.S., Bob Kidd, extended a word of welcome to the visiting societies.

After a very enjoyable supper, the business meeting took place. An invitation from the Burnbrae Society was extended to the Presbytery to hold the annual Sunday rally at Burnbrae next June. It was also decided to hold the Fall rally at Trenton on October 21, 1941.

Rev. J. D. McDonald, Roslin, brought a word of greeting to the rally and spoke on "The Work of the Church." The Provincial President, Mr. Dan Firth, Toronto, was present and gave an interesting talk on Young People's Work.

The guest speaker of the evening was Miss McConnell who has been a missionary in India for the past thirteen years. Miss McConnell gave a very intereting address on her work in India.

Rev. Dr. Boudreau, Burnbrae, was in charge of the recreational period and introduced a group of new and interesting games.

The rally closed with a worship service and Rev. W. J. Walker, Belleville, formally installed the officers for the coming year.

Police Blotter

Three motor vehicles, two large trucks and a motor car, were involved in an accident on Front Street last evening when a transport driven by Thomas Duggan, 184 James Street, collided with a parked truck, operated by Thomas Orr, 51 Cannifton Road, with the result that the Orr vehicle bounded forward and collided with the rear of a parked motor car driven by William McKenna, 149 Burnham Street.

The rear platform of Mr. Orr's truck was struck by the truck driven by Duggan in such a manner that the middle vehicle bounded forward striking Mr. McKenna's vehicle. Damage amounting to nearly $100.00 resulted to the vehicle driven by Duggan, while ten dollars was the estimated damage to both other vehicles, police stated after investigation.

Detective Fred Isard questioned a local juvenile lad yesterday relative to the stealing of money at the Belleville General Hospital and his investigations culminated in a fantastic tale being revealed by the youth. The lad admitted he was operating with an accomplice within the institution, the latter admiting him through the elevator door.

Once inside of the building the youthful "Raffles" made his way to an adjoining office, where he rifled filing cabinets, in which were secured envelopes containing cash. The lad told Detective Isard he removed only small amounts from each envelope and resealed the paper in order to cover up his thievery. The matter will be further attended to in juvenile court.

Delivery of apples by trailer was halted by police on Coleman Street yesterday when a Sidney farmer was found hauling apples with a farm tractor, upon which there were no commercial vehicle licence plates.

Three inebriates shared the cell block at the police station last evening along with seven transients.

Four-Man Canadian Board On Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin Committee Appointed

Well Known Power Men Will Act With Similar Number from U.S.

STATEMENT ISSUED

Ottawa, Oct. 24—(CP)—Appointment of the four-man Canadian temporary Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin Committee, to work with members of a similar United States Committee on early development of power resources in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River was announced today.

The appointments were made known in a statement from the Prime Minister's office which said, "Arrangements will be made to convene this committee without delay and also for consultation with the United States committee with which it will be co-operating."

The announcement added that President Roosevelt had announced appointment of the United Sates committee.

Members of the Canadian committee:

Chairman: Guy A. Lindsay of Ottawa, engineer in charge of general engineering, Department of Transport.

Thomas H. Hogg, of Toronto, chairman and chief engineer, Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

Oliver Lefebrve of Montreal, member of the Quebec Electricity Board.

J. E. Read of Ottawa, legal adviser, Department of External Affairs.

Members of U.S. Board

Members of the United States committee:

Chairman: Leland Olds. Chairman of the Federal Power Commission. A. A. Berle, assistant Secretary of State. Brig.-Gen. Thomas M. Robins of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. Gerald V. Cruise, representative of the trustees of the Power Authority of the State of New York.

Aside from naming the members of both the Canadian and United States committees the statement from the Prime Minister's office said:

"The governments of Canada and of the United States have recently announced their agreement with regard to the desirability of taking immediate steps looking to the early development of certain portions of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin project.

Indicate No Objection

"The government of the United States indicated that it would interpose no objection, pending the conclusion of a final Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin agreement, to the immediate utilization for power at Niagara Falls by the Province of Ontario of additional water equivalent in quantity to the diversion to be made by the Province of Ontario into the Great Lakes system from the Albany River basin.

"The two governments have also agreed that each will appoint a temporary Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin Committee and that the two committees will co-operate in preliminary engineering and other investigations of that part of the project which is located in the international rapid section of the St. Lawrence River, in order that the entire project may be undertaken without further delay when a final decision is reached by the two governments.

Much Data Assembled

"The president of the United States has announced the appointment of a committee for this purpose".

On October 14 Washington and Ottawa released a simultaneous announcement that "in order to assure adequate power supplies to meet the requirements of defence production in the northeastern part of the United States and Canada, steps have been taken by the governments of United States and Canada to initiate immediately engineering and other investigations for that part of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin project which is located in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River".

Engineers here explained that during the many years the St. Lawrence Seaway scheme has been under consideration a great deal of engineering data has been assembled concerning the International Rapids section which extends from Prescott to Cornwall, Ont. This data however was for the purpose of arriving at a decision as to the feasibility of the scheme. Much more engineering investigation and plans will be necessary before construction contracts could be awarded.

Much Surveying Needed

A great deal of land surveying also will be necessary because large stretches of land on the north bank of the river will be inundated by the power development which envisions a power dam near Cornwall which would stop up the entire flow of the river and a controlling dam farther up stream.

Estimates have placed the possible power development on the International rapids section at 2,000,000 horse power which would be divided between the two countries.

President Roosevelt last week announced $1,000,000 had been allocated to cover the United State share of the cost of these investigations. It was intimated in Ottawa that steps were being taken to cover Canada's share of the expense.

FIGHTER SQUADRON ENJOYS RESPITE

Royal Canadian Air Force Group Has Been for Seven Weeks Helping Repel Nazi Air Attacks

By Sam Robertson Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Oct. 24 (CP Cable) — After seven weeks of helping to beat back the German air attacks on London, the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadron is enjoying a much-needed respite from action at a new station far from the capital.

Their main chore is to fly a dusk patrol in search of Nazi hit and run raiders but in the fortnight they have been at the new base not a single enemy plane has been spotted.

The breathing spell is providing an opportunity for completion of the training of six recruits the squadron has just received from the R.C.A.F. army co-operation units over here. The pilots who have come up to the fighter unit from the presently inactive branch of the air force are flying officers F. H. Hillock, Toronto; I. D. Watson and N. R. Johnson, Winnipeg; J. D. Morrison and J. B. Reynolds, Regina, and B. A. Hanbury, Vancouver.

Incidentally, it is reported that Sqdn.-Ldr. Ernest McNab of Regina, commander of the squadron, will shortly be gazetted wing commander. Possibly the officer, who recently received the Distinguished Flying Cross for skill and daring in operations against the enemy, will soon return to Canada to fill a post in which he could pass on to Canada's young airmen the valuable experience he has gained in aerial combat.

Former Polish Army Chief Arrested by Rumanian Police

Bucharest, Oct. 24 —(AP)—Marshal Edward Smygly - Rydz, former Polish army chief, who fled to Rumania after the German invasion of Poland, has been arrested by Rumanian police.

His arrest followed the jailing of Josef Beck, former Polish foreign minister, several days ago and the reported discovery of three secret radio stations broadcasting "anti-regime propaganda."

A number of other prominent Polish refugees and senior members of the Polish Embassy staff in Bucharest have been taken into custody.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By HAROLD FAIR

Awakened by the noise of anti-aircraft fire and dropping bombs, a west London man leaned out his window. A moment later a bomb fell on the house, taking away the entire bedroom except a narrow ridge on which he stood. The fire brigade rescued him.

To meet the menace of the time bomb, the War Office has decided to form civilian time-bomb squads from railway and A.R.P. workers and war police. The Royal Engineers will train them. They will be taught how to recognize the bombs and take preliminary steps to deal with them until the engineers arrive.

Britain's Sea Power Still Has Axis Worried

(By Kirke L. Simpson)

Washington, Oct. 24.— (AP) — Prospects that France will re-enter the war as an ally of her German-Italian conquerors have been dimmed by an authoritative disavowal from Vichy. Therefore the Hitler-Laval conferences loses significance in that respect; but it gains importance for Britain in another.

There remains a possibility that Hitler is bidding for use of French warcraft and naval bases in the Mediterranean. If Germany is offering peace-table concessions to France for that purpose, it would decisively indicate that Hitler and Mussolini now are doubtful of defeating Britain by air power. It would be an Axis confession that British sea power still is the dominant factor in the war, East or West.

Unless some such deal is in the making, neither the Hitler-Laval nor the Hitler-Franco conference can greatly disturb London. If they were merely to implement the "new order" in Europe by political understandings, London can forget them. The British Fleet has a ponderous veto power to exercise.

If those meetings had a military objective in view, however, it must be ways and means of trying to checkmate British sea power in the Mediterranean. There is ample evidence that whatever plans for an Axis drive eastward this winter were hatched at Brenner Pass nearly three weeks ago are encountering serious obstacles, of which the most formidable is the British Mediterranean Fleet.

Whether Italian naval strength, supplemented by French ships operated by German or Italian crews, could match British sea power available on that front is conjectural. The obvious fact, however, is that the bogging down of the Italian drive in Egypt, sailed for five weeks at Sidi Barrani, the resistance of Turkey and Greece to Axis schemes, and even the uncertainty as to Russia's course, are all traceable to British sea power.

Rome has found it expedient to offer, for home consumption, apparently highly colored accounts of Italian naval "victories" in both the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. The London Admiralty flatly contradicts Rome and announces these incidents as Italian disasters.

The plain fact is that Britain continues to use the Mediterranean and the Red Sea almost at will. Even the Rome accounts of the Red Sea fight tell of British troopships bringing reinforcements to Egypt.

What that means is that British forces in Egypt have been and are being increased under naval protection, while the Italian column there probably has received no substantial reinforcements since its jump-off from Libya.

Hitler's personal pilgrimage to France and Spain is rather meaningless unless it has immediate military objectives. Obtaining use of French war craft and inducing Spain to facilitate an attack on Gibraltar are about the only military motives that would warrant Hitler's personal appearance on the scene so far from home. And if that was his mission, it only strengthens the conclusion that Britain's sea power is the big stumbling block in the Axis pathway wherever its leaders turn.

Bancroft, Oct. 24 (Special)—Mrs. Martin Fransky passed away early Tuesday morning after a lengthy illness at her home in Bancroft. The late Mrs. Fransky was in her eighty-seventh year having come to Canada some sixty years ago from Poland. She was predeceased by her husband, Martin Fransky, sixteen years ago. The late Mrs. Fransky is survived by four daughters: Miss Amelia Fransky of Ottawa, Mrs. Arthur Mountney of Bancroft, Mrs. V. F. Lengthy Docket at Bancroft Police Court

Alvin Beaudrie of St. Ola was found guilty of allowing his cattle to run at large on Highway No. 62 and was fined $1.00 and costs.

Thos. Wryteman was charged with careless driving as the result of an accident, which took place south of Bancroft and assessed $10.00 and costs.

Archie Kehoe was charged with non-support and was given two months in which to provide a reasonable living for his family.

Three juveniles, all residents of St. Ola, appeared in a special sitting of the court charged with breaking and entering a cottage owned by John Parks of Ormsby and which is situated on Salmon Lake. Two of the lads were dismissed with a warning, while the third teen-aged youth was given a year's suspended sentence.

The above cases were disposed of before Police Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, County Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson of Belleville and Captain T. D. Ruston of Belleville.

Hitler Fails To Drag Spain in, View in Berlin

'It is Too Much to Expect Spain to Join War, at Least for Present,' Say Berlin Sources—Spanish Economic Position Stressed

Berlin, Oct. 24.—(CP)— A hint that Hitler's attempt to drag Spain into the war has failed was dropped tonight by informed circles in Berlin where they said Germany has a "complete understanding" of the economic position of Spain as the result of her civil war.

"It is too much to expect Spain to join the war—at least for the present," these sources added.

Hitler's talks with Franco ended unexpectedly last night—they had been expected in some quarters to continue today—and Hitler has left the Spanish frontier, according to a German News Agency announcement.

Willkie Claims Roosevelt Evaded Issues of Campaign

Harborcreek, Pa., Oct. 24 (AP)—Wendell Willkie asserted today that if President Roosevelt did not remember his promises of today longer than he did his pledges in 1932 he feared "our boys" would soon be put on transports bound for combat.

In a broadcast reply to Mr. Roosevelt's campaign address in Philadelphia last night, the Republican presidential candidate also charged that the "third term candidate" had evaded the issues of the 1940 campaign and that the President's speech was like the country's military defence system—"either obsolete or on order."

Gayda Admits U. S. Could 'Perform Miracles of Rearmament'

Rome, Oct. 24 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, the editor who often speaks for the Fascist regime, asserted today that the United States' rearmament efforts are part of an Imperialistic program under the mask of national defence.

The new American Imperialism, he declared in Il Giornale D'Italia, has progressed from the former "dollar Imperialism" to a "political and military monopoly of positions and bases shown in ever vaster constellations around the starry republic."

The Fascist editor interpreted the recent statement of Frank Knox, secretary of the navy, that the United States would obtain additional Pacific bases as evidence that Washington is "preparing to lend another hand to the progressive destruction of the British empire by constituting herself heiress to the positions and riches which formerly formed a part of British power."

He said there is no question that the United States "is floating in gold" and could perform miracles in rearmament."

For the first time, the Axis attitude toward the United States was described as one of "non-belligerency" by another prominent commentator, Mario Appelius, writing in Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia.

Outlines Attack on Britain

Appelius outlined a vast plan of attack on the British Empire which he said ties "together in a single pattern the destructive efforts of war with the constructive ones of politics."

The plan, he said, is not merely to occupy the Suez Canal, "but to bring down the whole superstructure of the British Empire, expel England from the Orient and expel the English fleet from the eastern Mediterranean and Red Sea."

The alliance with Japan he described as the "lacing in of Brenner and Fujiyama." (Japan's sacred mountain.)

Describing Moscow as a "centre of bizzarre Anglo-North American intrigue," Appelius said axis relations with the Soviet were based "upon the common ground of anti-plutocracy, recognition of imperial Russia's vital space and economic intercourse."

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Hitler was still buzzing about Europe today while rumors were current he was seeking collaboration of both the Vichy regime and that of the Spanish dictator, Franco, in an attack on Gibraltar, British South Atlantic shipping and British naval superiority in the Mediterranean.

The German leader was reported to have offered concessions to Vice-Premier Pierre Laval of the Vichy administration in return for unmolested use of ports in unoccupied France and French African colonies, as well as use of unoccupied French air bases.

He was reported to have offered concessions—in the future and if he should win the war—to Spain in return for use of Spanish Atlantic coast ports and bases in the Canary Islands off the coast of West Africa

None of the participants in conferences between Hitler and Laval and Franco gave a hint of what had happened, but the Italian press loudly forecast that "great deeds" would come from the meeting with Franco which ended unexpectedly last night. It was noted that a member of the German delegation was Friedrich Gaus, Foreign Under-Secretary who attends meetings with his boss only when legal documents are to be drawn up.

Rumors arising from the conferences, possibly inspired by the Axis, puzzled non-Axis observers. One question which arose was: Why should Hitler want new naval bases when he has lost most of the small fleet he had at the start of the war?

If he plans that the Italian navy should use them to harass British shipping, how is he going to prevent the Italians from being blockaded when they have shown so little inclination to leave port and fight the British navy in the Mediterranean?

Should he gain collaboration of the Spanish and Vichy regimes Hitler will have made "friends" of two countries at least as bankrupt as his own, France through the action of German troops, Spain as a result of a civil war which Hitler helped Franco to win.

Hitler was said to have offered in return for France's passive help release of 2,000,000 French prisoners of war and return of some territory taken under the terms of last June's armistice. He was believed to have offered Spain Gibraltar and a greater share in Mediterranean affairs.

Some observers were inclined to believe the diplomatic scurrying in Axis circles was due mainly to three factors: The defeat by the Royal Air Force of German preparations for an invasion attempt on Britain; Bogging down of the Italian offensive in Libya and Egypt at Sidi Barrani, and the necessity of getting some Axis action started to bolster military and home-front morale.

Beating a band of crooked gamblers at their own game and then putting the fear of the law into them occupies "Hopalong" Cassidy for several reels in his latest adventure, "The Showdown," which is now showing at the Capitol. Here you see him assisted by Britt Wood, convincing a miscreant that crime does not pay. Others in the cast are Jane Clayton, Morris Ankrum and "The King's Men." On the same program "Women in Distress" starring May Robson.

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XXIV.

After Anthony Swan's death, the management of his family's affairs seemed to pass involuntarily into the hands of Attorney Quinn. There was no one else to whom Martha and Audrey could turn and Victor was always available.

Anthony had left a modest amount of money and securities and the farm was unencumbered. It was Martha's idea to convert all the stock and equipment into cash and perhaps sell all the land except that occupied by the house and stables. She wanted to remain in the home during her lifetime.

But Victor had another suggestion. "I imagine it would be a good idea to get rid of your horses," he agreed. "I don't know anything about values, but I presume you can get pretty nearly what they're worth. At the present time, you will lose on the land. What had you planned to do, Audrey, to keep yourself busy?"

"Then why don't you carry on for your father? On a small scale. Here's what I've been thinking. Keep Jim Sweet to do the work. Give him his house rent free and let him farm the land on a share basis. He would be glad to do that. Don't ask me how I know."

"I hadn't thought of that," Audrey mused.

"Then," Victor continued, "I was thinking that you could keep a horse or two for your own use, board some and give riding lessons. From all that I've been able to learn, you are more than qualified. I might even buy a horse and let you teach me. How's that?"

"The ultimate in confidence, Vic." She turned to Martha. "What do you think of that, Mom?"

Mrs. Swan was crocheting and she worked without looking up. "It sounds like a good plan," she said, when she came to the end of a row. "You'll never be satisfied if you don't have horses to fool with. I know that. And I think your father would have liked it."

"Then we'll call that settled," Victor decided. "When you get ready for action, I'll be glad to help."

"We'll wait until after the first of the year," Martha offered unexpectedly. "Friday will be Christmas. It will be just another day for us, Mr. Quinn, but I'd be pleased if you would have dinner with Audrey and me. If you're going to be in town."

"Thank you, Mrs. Swan. I shall be glad to come." He was more than repaid for the simple answer by Audrey's eyes.

The role of being family counsellor had not been easy for Victor Quinn, and it was daily becoming more difficult. If only Audrey had admitted a return of his love it would all have been so different. Her manner, when he was with her, had been as poised as that of her mother. But there had been moments when her eyes betrayed her, their clear depths filled with utter loneliness. Those were the times that Victor longed to take her in his arms and attempt comfort. To refrain required all the self-control he could muster.

As matters stood between them, he scorned the slightest suspicion that he might be attempting to trade on her grief. Perhaps all this would count in his favor as time passed. He appreciated that invitation to the first Christmas dinner in the Swan home without its master. He told himself that he must not overvalue the incident, but he was aware that Audrey had been consulted and that she approved.

It was Christmas, after all. After considerable thought, he decided upon a modest gift for each of his hostesses, something to which no sentimental value could be attached. He was glad that he had when the mail brought him a little parcel —a woollen muffler from Mrs. Swan, a dozen fine handkerchiefs from Audrey.

The dinner, too, was saved from being a momentary ordeal when Audrey took occasion to tell him in a matter-of-fact fashion: "You're sitting in Dad's place, Vic. We thought it would be easier."

If only he could have read a particular meaning into that! By this time he might have hoped for some encouragement in his suit. But Tony Swan stood between him and his desires as inexorably as death itself. The affair had been grimly ironical from the beginning. Falling so desperately in love with a strange girl. All their contacts shadowed by another man. And a man now married and supposedly out of the picture. There was many an occasion when he could have echoed Jeffrey Castle's sentiment with whole-souled fervor —it WAS hell to be a gentleman.

At this same time, Jeffrey was being put to it to uphold a reputation of that sort. For Olive had undertaken to punish him for his Parville trip by remaining coldly aloof. Jeffrey had done his best to ignore her attitude and to maintain a friendly footing, although some instinct warned him that he would be making a mistake in going too far in the matter of reconciliation. An abject surrender would make the future more difficult than ever, and if there must be another unpleasantness he was in favor of postponing it as long as possible. He did attempt a casual report of his journey, only to receive a smilingly cool: "I suppose we'll be buying a new country place in Parville now . . . to help the widow and the orphan."

He let that one pass without comment. However, the incident started Jeffrey upon some constructive thinking. If he could find some legitimate excuse for spending his days out of the house, it should help considerably. Olive seemingly had given up her search for an apartment and the couple were still living with the Harrisons'. Harvey Harrison was old-fashioned enough to believe that he must be at his office early in the morning when he was in town. Mrs. Harrison lived a life of her own, completely absorbed in social affairs, clubs and charities. It was only occasionally that the four met for a formal and somewhat silent dinner, since Olive managed to have an endless round of engagements for herself and husband.

Jeffrey wanted very much to escape his father-in-law, but Olive always had some legitimate reason for postponing the position he was supposed to accept with Harrison Products. This might be a propitious time to go after the job on his own. Accordingly, he presented himself at the general offices of the corporation and sent in his name. He waited nearly an hour before a secretary advised that Mr. Harrison could give Mr. Castle a few moments.

Harvey Harrison was a lean man with a somewhat dour expression and the look he gave his son-in-law over the top of his spectacles was not particularly encouraging.

"Well, Castle," he said, "what's on your mind this morning?"

"A job," was the business-like reply. "Olive has told me that you believe you can find something for me. I'd like to get to work."

"I did tell Olive that we would try to fix up something for you, but I didn't go into details. I can place you in the sales, the same as any other probationer. We have a regular course of instruction for beginners that will meet your ambitions . . . if they last. If you want to try it, drop in and talk to Mr. Michelson."

"I'll talk to him now, if he isn't busy. Thank you very much."

"Oh, Castle, the pay won't suit you particularly. I don't know anything about your finances, but I can't give you a good salary to start with. Those things leak out and I don't wish to stir up any discontent."

"Of course. Whatever you give me will be more than I earn."

"We'll see." Harvey Harrison watched Jeffrey leave the room, then reached for his telephone. "Get me Michelson," he told the operator.

After dinner that evening Jeffrey strolled into his wife's boudoir. "I've got some news that may soothe your nerves," he said.

"Well?" Olive reached for a cigarette and lighted it. She felt that it would emphasize her attitude of complete indifference.

"Nothing startling, dear. Your old man's going to work. Had a good confab with your dad this morning. I'm starting in on Monday. Have my pail packed, will you?"

"What are you going to do?" Olive's dark eyes narrowed a trifle.

"I don't know. Going to take the usual course for salesmen . . . a matter of studying, more or less."

"What did Father offer you? How much?"

"No figure named. He did intimate, though, it would be the same as the other recruits get. Doesn't want any hard feelings."

"In other words, you gave him a story of wanting to work up from the foot of the ladder without any favors."

"Not at all. That's the story he gave me."

"You seem to be going out of your way to humiliate me of late."

"For Pete's sake! I can't loaf all my life, Olive, and I don't intend to! Besides, it was your idea in the first place . . . where are you going?"

"I'm going down to have a little talk with my father. He doesn't seem to understand. Quite."

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

I Am The Newspaper

BORN of the deep, daily need of a nation — I am the voice of Now — the incarnate spirit of the Times —Monarch of things that Are. My "cold type" burns with the fire-blood of human action. I am fed by arteries of wire that girdle the earth. I drink from the cup of every joy and sorrow. I know no death, yet am born again with every morn — with every noon — with every twilight. I leap into fresh being with every new world event. Those who created me cease to be — the brains and heart's blood that nourish me go the way of human dissolution.

Yet I live on — and on.

I am majestic in my strength — sublime in my power — terrible in my potentialities — yet as democratic as the little boy who sells me for a penny.

I am the consort of Kings — the partner of Capital — the brother of Toil. The inspiration of the hopeless — the right arm of the needy — the champion of the oppressed — the conscience of the criminal. I am the epitome of the world's Comedy and Tragedy.

My responsibility is infinite. I speak — and the world stops to listen. I say the word and battle flames on the horizon. I counsel peace, and the war lords obey. I am greater than any individual — more powerful than any group. I am the dynamic voice of Public Opinion. Rightly directed I am a Creator of Confidence. A builder of happiness in living. I am the backbone of Commerce. The trail-blazer of Prosperity. I am the teacher of Patriotism. I am the hands of the clock of Time — the clarion voice of Civilization.

I AM THE NEWSPAPER.

Results of Hitler-Petain Meeting Are Shrouded in Silence

One-Plane Dive Attack Reopens Nazi Offensive

Nation Committee Has Wide Powers To Settle Dispute

Could Assume Control of Any European Possessions In the Western Hemisphere

Washington, Oct. 25.—(AP) —France's fate—and hourly expected developments which might have a vital effect on United States interests—were under close State department study today following the conference "Somewhere in Occupied France" between Hitler and Marshal Petain, chief of the Vichy Regime.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, and Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, conferred at the State Department last night after swiftly-moving diplomatic moves abroad indicated a major decision concerning Europe's future might hang in the balance.

No official announcement of the Welles-Henry-Haye talk was made, but it was understood in informed quarters they had engaged in a general discussion of problems which might arise as a result of closer collaboration between conquering Germany and conquered France.

Examples Suggested

The Hitler-Petain conference assumed additional significance in the eyes of American officials in view of the similar secret meeting between Hitler and Franco of Spain, another possible active Axis collaborator or ally.

Officials here were particularly intent on any factual developments, resulting from the Hitler-Petain

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Saving the crop! That is the story of a 24-hour rain in 1900: it was worth over $80,000,000 to the farmers of Nebraska and Kansas. Rainfall in small amounts or poorly distributed spells failure of the crops, and may bring on a financial depression. It is said that in Australia the size of the wheat crop is in direct ratio to the annual rainfall. In Australia and in Argentina, the number of sheep that can be raised per acre is determined by the rainfall. More destructive than lack of rain are hot winds, which may cause a practically complete failure of the crops over very large districts.

MURDERED MAN FOUND IN WATER

Gruesome Discovery Made at Sunnyside Beach by Two Children

Toronto, Oct. 25.— (CP)—Police officials reported Thursday night the body of a man, aged about 45, had been found on the shore of Lake Ontario at Sunnyside Beach. They believed he had been beaten before being placed in the water several days ago.

The body apparently had been washed ashore and, according to a pathologist's report, had been in the water one to four days.

Police said no persons answering the description of the man had been reported missing in recent weeks.

The victim was badly battered about the head, mouth and chest, a post-mortem examination showed. The right eye had been blackened by a blow, probably from a fist.

The body was that of a man five feet, six inches in height, with brown hair greying at the temples. The clothes included a brown, herringbone suit, blue shirt with white stripe, brown double-breasted topcoat and light brown shoes.

The shoes had been purchased in a Toronto departmental store and the only article found in the man's clothing was a souvenir cigarette case from Havana, Cuba.

Discovery of the body was made by two children.

Italian Planes Join Nazi Raiders Says Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP)—The German High Command asserted today that Italian planes for the first time have joined German raiders in operations against Britain.

The Italians started from bases in "occupied territory in the framework of the German air force's fighting operations" against the British, a communique said, adding:

"Through well aimed bombs they scored great successes against port facilities in the east of the British Isle."

AP Reinforcements Are Sent to London

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—The bombing of London has put the staff of The Associated Press there under such a severe strain that reinforcements are being sent to permit the men there longer periods of rest in the country.

William Wesley White and Alfred E. Wall have sailed to join the 14 Associated Press Staff men in the British capital. The Canadian Press staff in London, which normally numbers seven, was increased for a short period recently to permit the staff men to have their summer holidays, postponed when the battle of Britain opened.

CHASE NAZIS HOME

London, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Air Ministry News Service said today that three times within recent weeks Spitfire pilots have chased German raiders across the English Channel and shot them down within range of Nazi anti-aircraft guns.

Former King Carol Appeals to U.S. On Behalf of Himself and Friends

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP).—The exiled former King Carol of Rumania appealed to the United States government today to intercede in behalf of himself and members of his party now held under detention in Seville, Spain.

Carol's request was transmitted to the State Department by the United States legation in Lisbon, Portugal, after Jean Pangal, former Rumanian minister to Portugal, had asked the legation to forward the appeal to President Roosevelt.

State Department officials had no immediate comment to make on the request, or on what action, if any, the United States government might take.

Carol, his friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu, and Ernst Urdareanu, former minister of the palace in Bucharest, were placed under virtual arrest Tuesday and are under guard at their hotel in Seville.

STRING OF BOMBS HITS STREET CAR IN EARLY HOURS

Score of Persons Killed or Injured as Nazis Come Over After a Quiet Night

2 ALARMS IN NIGHT

Many Persons Caught in the Debris and Rescue Squads Work Feverishly to Free Them

London, Oct. 25—(CP)—Bombs rained out of a cloud-flecked sky in a series of daytime raids on London today, smashing street cars and buses during the city's morning rush hour.

One bomb crashed between two street cars, wrecking them and killing and injuring more than a score of persons. Other explosives hit behind the street cars, damaging a third street car. A bus was wrecked.

Other high explosives struck near a police station, wrecking nearby structures, and near an air raid shelter, leaving many injured in the street.

Flats and shops were demolished and large buildings jarred by the blasts.

Reports from widely scattered areas indicated that the attacks spread from one end of London to the other.

Bomb Wrecks Row of Shops

In one section a bomb wrecked a row of shops over which there were apartments in which some persons were injured. Shopkeepers joined householders and air raid precautions workers in attending the injured. One woman tore up part of her clothing for bandages to give first aid to those needing it.

At least three Nazi planes were shot down and the Royal Air Force fended off numerous raiders before they reached London. Others, taking advantage of clouds, knifed through the defence lines to drop their bomb loads.

Flow of Traffic Nearly Normal

The flow of traffic in most sections was maintained at nearly normal.

It was not until late afternoon that the "raider passed" signal marked the end of a lengthy attack which occasioned the third air raid alarm of the day.

The Press Association said about 100 raiders in all, believed to be fighter-bombers, crossed the coast in today's raids.

The Air Ministry said 12 German planes were destroyed in the day's battles, while eight British

Toronto, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Department of Mines announced today that in the first nine months of the year, 65 Ontario gold mines produced a record output of 2,354,434 ounces of gold and 433,214 ounces of silver, valued altogether at $90,830,330.

The yield came from treatment of 8,697,385 tons of ore. The department said the figures represented an increase of 9.68 per cent in tonnage milled, increases of 5.67 per cent in gold and 14.30 per cent in silver recovered and an increase of 14.43 per cent in value over the comparable period of 1939

Commenting on the production, the newly-appointed Minister of Mines, Hon. Robert Laurier, said: "By producing $90,830,330 of new wealth during the first nine months of 1940, the gold mining industry of Ontario has furnished Canada with millions of dollars of much-needed foreign exchange.

Mussolini and Petain May Meet Shortly, Says Berlin Report

Italian Dictator May Also Confer With Hitler and Franco on Axis Campaign for 'New Order'—Rome Expects Further Meetings — Vichy Population Awaits in Suspense for Definite Information as Result of Conferences

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 25 (AP)—Diplomatic sources here said today a meeting between Mussolini and Marshal Petain and another conference between Mussolini and Hitler are likely in the near future as the Axis campaign to establish a "new order" for Europe develops.

Reports reaching Berne by diplomatic channels despite the secrecy maintained by Berlin and Vichy said the Italian Premier might meet the French Chief of State on the border of the small Italian-occupied zone of France just as Petain met Hitler yesterday in a border zone.

Some diplomats believed that conversations between the French Vice-Premier, Pierre Laval, and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, might lay the groundwork for a Mussolini-Petain meeting.

It also was reported that a meeting of Mussolini and Franco, leader of Spain, was a possibility, supplementing Wednesday's conference between Hitler and the Spaniard.

Petain Expected Back at Vichy

Vichy, France, Oct. 25 (AP)—Marshal Petain, France's 84-year-old Chief of State, was expected to return to Vichy today to inform his ministers on the outcome of a meeting with Hitler upon which, a Government announcement said, "the situation of the nation and its future in large measure depend."

Official silence cloaked the nature of the negotiations which took place in a railway car somewhere in German-occupied France yesterday, but the public guessed from Petain's unprecedented action that major changes in France's position were brewing.

Hidden also were the results of Hitler's conference Wednesday on the French-Spanish frontier with Spain's Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

DANUBE PARLEY IS REPORTED

Despatches Say That Russia, Germany, Rumania and Italy Will Participate

London, Oct. 25. — (CP) — A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Moscow today said the Soviet Russian Foreign Office had named delegates to a Danubian conference to be held next Monday in Bucharest. It said the other participants would be Germany. Rumania and Italy.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Moscow earlier reported that Russia had named delegates to such a conference to be held in Bucharest.)

It was recalled here that Italy was a member of the former Danubian conference which dealt with navigation on the great waterway linking central Europe with the Black Sea.

Organization of navigation as far as the Rumanian frontier was discussed at the previous conference, it was said, leaving the question of shipping through Rumania for consideration at the forthcoming meeting.

DECLARATIONS BY CLARENCE HEBERT TO BE ADMITTED

Judge Decides They Are Admissible in Trial of Accused for Murder

READ IN COURT

Sweetsburg, Que., Oct. 25.—(CP) Judge Louis Cousineau today decided three declarations made to police by Clarence Hebert, 27, of St. Alban, Vt., charged with the murder of his wife, the former Phyllis Upton of Guelph, Ont., were admissible as evidence at his trial.

Mr. Justice Cousineau's decision came after ten days of argument and evidence in which Crown and Defence counsels debated the admissibility of the alleged declarations. During that period of the trial the 12 jurors were absent from the courtroom.

Hebert's three declarations, made after his detention as a material witness, will be read to the jury during the afternoon session.

The judge said alterations would be made in the first and third to eliminate sections which were irrevalent or prejudicial to Hebert. In these declarations, according to witnesses at the inquest into Mrs. Hebert's death, Hebert referred to a penitentiary term.

No Evidence of "Staging"

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Cousineau reviewed the circumstances surrounding the three declarations. In the case of the second, written in Hebert's handwriting, there was no evidence that the police had "staged" anything, he said. That declaration had been made "in the most natural way possible".

Hamm Most Bombed Target in Germany

London, Oct. 25—(CP)—Hamm in Germany was a place most Britons and Canadians had never heard of before the war.

But the name is familiar now, for Hamm is the most-bombed target of the Royal Air Force in its raids on enemy territory. The R.A.F. has struck at Hamm more than 45 times.

Explaining why, the Air Ministry News Service says it has the largest and best-equipped railway marshalling yard in Europe. The yard and its connections cover an area four miles long by about three-quarters of a mile wide.

This network of tracks, sidings, engine houses and repairs sheds is capable of dealing with and dispatching more than 10,000 freight cars every 24 hours. It is situated in an economically vital position at the eastern entrance to and exit from Germany's greatest industrial area, the Ruhr.

Dislocation caused by frequent heavy bombings of this nerve-centre of German rail transport is believed here to be tremendous.

TORONTO HOSPITAL SCENE OF BREAK OF NAZI PRISONER

Carl Rabe of German Navy in Hospital for Treatment at Time of Escape

DRESSED IN UNIFORM

Believed Wearing Medium-Blue Uniform When He Left Hospital

Toronto, Oct. 25 —(CP)— A young German war prisoner wearing a medium-blue naval uniform escaped early today from Christie Street Hospital here where he had been under treatment for the past three weeks.

How the man escaped is not known but he was last seen about one a.m. He speaks English but with a slight accent.

The prisoner, Carl Rabe, a medical doctor believed to have been a member of a submarine crew, was brought from a Northern Ontario internment camp three weeks ago to undergo an operation. However, by dietary means his trouble was remedied and he was to have been returned to his internment camp yesterday.

In preparation for that return, his German naval uniform was placed near him yesterday, facilitating his escape sometime during the night.

Thirty Years Old

Rabe is described as 30 years of age, five feet eight inches tall, 135 pounds, slim build, long black hair, sallow complexion, dark eyes, angular features. He was wearing a navy blue pullover sweater under his naval uniform.

Italian Fliers 'Bravely' Drop Bombs in London Streets, Newspaper Says

Rome, Oct. 25. —(AP)— The newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia reported today that an Italian air base has been established on the English channel in France and that Italian bombers have come back with "marks of combat" for forays on London.

The Italian airmen returned "with joyous certainty of their first victory", the paper's correspondent wrote from "an Italian air base on the English Channel".

The Fascist bombs, marked "made in Italy", exploded in London streets "to the Churchill crowds' desperate stupor", the correspondent declared.

He described the Fascist forces as "a tremendous mass of men and material", commanded by Gen. Rino Corso Fougier, of Corsican origin and an Italian flier in the Spanish Civil War.

Italians said Mussolini offered his air force and the Germans who have suffered heavy losses, accepted eagerly.

Equipment and supplies were said to have been shipped by rail to the Channel base while the pilots flew their planes.

The Italian air corps on the Channel was described as a complete unit with its own ground crews, repair shops and munitions depots.

New Spinal Anesthesia Technique Permits Prolonging Operation Time

By Howard W. Blakslee Associated Press Science Editor.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP)—A new medical science, anesthesia styled to fit each individual patient during a surgical operation, was described to the American College of Surgeons today.

In some of the most progressive institutions of the United States, it was shown, the anesthetic may even be changed from time to time during a single operation; to fit the patient's response, or the surgeon's momentary need for more complete immobility of organs near his instruments.

This new science of styled anesthesia comes from two fairly recent developments. One is the larger number of new and varied anesthetics. The other is the rise of a profession of scientifically trained men and women who devote all their time to study of anesthesia.

Dr. Virginia Apgar of New York said that her group is trying out what is known as continuous spinal anesthesia. This is the shot in the spine, which stops feeling in part of the body, but leaves the patient conscious. The usual way is one massive shot of anesthetic. The effect lasts two or three hours, too short for some operations.

It is dangerous to give a bigger shot. So the anesthetists are using a continuous drop of small amounts of the anesthetic into the spine all through the operation. This preserves the lack of feeling indefinitely. Dr. Apgar said that in more than 50 cases, no bad effects have been noticed, but that more trial would be necessary.

Dr. F. W. Hartman of Fort Hospital, Detroit, showed that all anesthetics reduce the brain's ability to use oxygen and that some cut the brain oxygen to a dangerous limit. He said that alcohol, in excess, has the some effect on the brain as the anesthetics which are the more dangerous in this respect.

Widespread Raids Smack Vital German Centres

British Bombers Fly Low, Drop Salvoes Of High Explosives On Berlin Railway Yards

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—Britain's fiercely sustained air offensive blasted at the foundations of German war power last night with squadron after squadron of heavy bombers delivering destruction not only in Berlin and Hamburg but in a dozen other vital centres as well.

The Air Ministry news service said that the British fliers in an attack on Berlin lasting nearly three hours, came down low to make sure of their targets and smacked the Pulitz-Strasse and Lehrter railway stations for the second night in succession in this, the 23rd raid on Berlin.

(The number of killed in Berlin and Hamburg was "extremely high" said a German broadcast heard in New York).

Bombers Fly High

The German capital was completely overcast with clouds extending from 12,000 to 4,000 feet and this forced the R.A.F. bombers to come down at a "considerably lower level" than in most of their raids on Berlin.

The first wave of raiders reached Berlin just after midnight and attacked the railway yards with salvoes of high explosive bombs which added to the "extensive damage" inflicted the previous night, the news service said.

A second wave of bombers then hit the same targets half an hour later.

Huge Fire Started

Still others started a "huge fire" on another military objective and guided succeeding waves which

JAPANESE SUB LOST AUGUST 29

Engaged in Manoeuvres South of Tokyo Bay When Accident Occurs

New York, Oct. 25 — (AP) — Twelve officers, 38 warrant officers and an undisclosed number of seamen perished when the Japanese submarie 1-67 was lost in manoeuvres south of Toyko Bay on August 29, the Japanese Navy Ministry announced today in a communique broadcast by Domei, Japanese News Agency.

London, Oct. 25 (CP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Tokyo said the loss of the Japanese submarine 1-67 was disclosed today.

It said the vessel was lost Aug. 29 while engaged in manoeuvres south of Tokyo Bay.

The submarine, built in 1931, had a surface displacement of 1,638 tons and underwater displacement of 2,100 tons. She was 321 1-2 feet long.

Sunk in Heavy Storm

The communique said the 1-67 disappeared during a heavy storm and an intensive search over a radius of 100 miles from where she was last seen failed to "yield any hope of locating and rescuing the crew of the ill-fated warship".

"The search continues, however," it added.

Japanese submarines of the size of the 1-67—she displaced 1,638 tons on the surface—usually carry about 100 officers and men.

They increased their subscription to the exhibition from twenty-five to fifty dollars. NEW COAT OF PAINT IMPROVES APPEARANCE OF FRONT ST. STORES

A number of Front Street shops are undergoing an Autumn "face-lifting" and in the near future will present a bright attractive appearance in their new garb of fresh paint and other decorative effects.

WIRING CREWS START WORK ON NEW LINE

Wiring crews started operations on the new hydro line now in the course of construction from Beauharnois to Toronto and which cross es Hastings County from Marlbank to Campbellford. A new camp has been constructed in the former place and the heavy cables and wires are now being placed in position.

Other crews are still working on the erection of the steel towers in the Hastings section of the line.

SUNFLOWERS GROW TO 12-FOOT HEIGHT

Those tall plants growing in the garden of Robert Otto, Bloomfield, under the care of Elmer Biddle are not young palm trees, just sunflowers which have reached an abnormal growth. The plants tower to a height of twelve feet and have tops on them as big as dishpans.

From the same garden were dug some fine specimens of carrots, some of them weighing well over a pound each, while the "granddaddy" of the flock tipped the scales at a few ounces over two pounds.

BOY LEADS BEAR CUB DOWN FRONT ST.

A young bear club scarcely a few months old, and led by its youthful master by means of a chain, excited a lot of interest on Front Street last night. The cub entered restaurants and confectionery stores where it hungrily accepted favors of ice-cream cones and other goodies from interested patrons.

The animal appeared to be tame and allows anyone to stroke its fur. It was followed down the main thoroughfare by a large group of excited youngsters all of whom clamored for the privileged of leading the bear along the street.

EXPORT OF APPLES OVERSEAS BANNED UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

Prohibition of the export of apples overseas until further notice has been announced by the Federal Government according to a communication received by Department of Agriculture representatives here.

The edict will affect many organizations whose Autumn plans included the shipment of the fruit to the troops overseas. The prohibitive measure, however, will be lifted, it is believed when certain data regarding crops and distribution of markets has been ascertained.

The apple crop in this district is well below that of a year ago. Frosts have not affected the crops to any great extent, the majority of the fruit having been picked and stored before the damaging frosts came.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC DURING LAST SUMMER BETTER THAN AVERAGE

Residents of this city did not let the war interfere with their travel the past summer, an official of a city ticket office stated today.

"Business was, as good if not better than the average peace-time year", he said, "while vacationists indulged as much as ever in the faraway spots".

The war, if anything has had an accelerating effect on travel, it was stated, due to the fact that soldiers wives and sweethearts are not letting distance stand in their way when they desire to visit their relatives in the army, navy or air force.

Police Blotter

East Dundas Street residents complained to police today that a careless motorist drove over the street curb and struck several garbage cans, strewing the contents over the street some time last night. The cans had been placed along the street curb for collection early today.

Police authorities thoroughly probed the matter, as this practice of knocking over garbage cans has been reported elsewhere throughout the city of late, and at noon today Chief Kidd intimated his department had met with some success in the matter. "I believe we have the names of the guilty culprits, but I'm not at liberty to reveal such names as yet. If our investigations prove our suspicions, charges will definitely be laid," assured Chief Kidd.

A motor car driven by Douglas Lancaster, 39 Cannifton Road, collided with a parked transport on Pinnacle Street shortly before 4.00 a.m. today. Lancaster was proceeding southerly and apparently did not observe the parked vehicle in the darkness, Constables Evans and Arnott reported. Considerable damage resulted to Lancaster's car and charges have been preferred.

Edgar Stapley, proprietor of a city delivery service, reported the theft of a parcel taken from one of his trucks, which was parked in a city parking lot. This is twice this week parcels in transit have been stolen from the same vehicle, which prompts police to wonder if persons are purposely following the city delivery service with the purpose in mind of petty thievery.

The Cheering Section

Arrangements are being made to take the cheering section and band to Cobourg for the football game. The cheering section have secured new suede skull caps which set off the rugby atmosphere. The section are very proud of these. We would like more students to take part in this activity as it makes a name for a school. The credit that has gone to cheerleader Bill Boyle was not only for him, but for the students who form this organization and they have really showed their progress as a fine section. If any student in the school has some yells which have not been used, please give them to the cheerleader.

In connection with the National Appeal for funds for the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The Motive Power employees of the Canadian National Railways employed in this city, which includes 200 Enginemen and Shopmen contributed $1,226.05. This comparing very favourably and a little more than the $1,203.45 which was contributed by the same employees to the 1939 appeal in December.

The above money donated entirely optional on the part of the men and was given of their own free will.

Reformatory Sentences Given 2 Residents Of Tweed District

Reformatory sentences were given two residents of the Tweed area in Tweed police court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in that village yesterday, while a third individual was remanded in custody pending medical examination.

Percy Green, Tweed, was sentenced to serve from three to four months in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of the theft of $9.00 from his employer, C. E. Way. On a second count charging him with the theft of a battery, Green received the same term, which is to run concurrent with the initial sentence, however. A third charge of theft from his employer was dismissed.

Charged with a serious offence, Isaiah Woodcock, Tweed, was sentenced to serve from five to seven months in the Ontario Reformatory. Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson revealed to the court that the offence had taken place some months ago, but had not been brought to the attention of the authorities until recently. His Worship severely admonished the accused for his actions before passing sentence however.

Robert Rogers, also of Tweed, appeared on a charge of indecency and was remanded to the custody of the county jail without bail, for observation.

Several minor liquor cases were heard and fines levied and paid. Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed, perferred all of the more serious charges.

Matthew T. Stone, Bancroft, was fined $500.00 and in addition sentenced to six months in the County Jail, after being convicted of a second offence of being found in possession of a still, suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. Stone intimated he was unable to meet the assessed fine and he was sentenced to one year in all.

John W. Baumhauer, Bancroft, an alleged accomplice of Stone's was committed to the County Jail for three months after being convicted of a similar charge and in default of the payment of a $100.00 fine. The charges were preferred by the R.C.M.P.

Stone solicited a ride with Provincial Constable Palmateer along the Monk Road one week ago today and it was while riding with the officer that his suspicions were aroused by the rattling of bottles in a bag, which Stone was carrying. Investigations proved the bottles to contain moonshine and the charges followed.

REINFORCEMENTS BEING RUSHED TO U.S. OUTPOSTS

Will be Ready for Anything That May Develop in Atlantic or Pacific

NEW AIR CORPS

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 25 (CP)—Reinforcements are being rushed to the outposts of the United States in readiness for anything that may develop in the Atlantic or Pacific.

Coupled with Henry L. Stimson's announcement this week that two squadrons of the Army Air Corps are being sent to the Philippine Islands was a casual observation by the War Secretary that developments are going forward on a defence position in Newfoundland.

The reference to Newfoundland, where the United States has obtained bases, was not elaborated, but it presumably was associated with the recent agreement under which Canada is spending $1,000,000 on facilities for defending that dominion, in co-operation with the United States if necessary.

Marines Go To West Indies

It was reported unofficially that the Fifth Battalion of the Marine Guards would move shortly to a defence post in the West Indies and that 34 "Flying Fortresses," giant four-motored bombers which were rumored to be destined for Great Britain, would leave this week for Porto Rico.

The latest moves of American defence forces came as the United States was reported reliably to have plans ready for occupying French territory in the Caribbean area in case such a step is deemed necessary from the viewpoint of defence of the western hemisphere. Any such move would be made in co-operation with other American republics.

A new Air Corps organization aimed at having more than 18,000 planes ready for the defence of any threatened point in the western hemisphere was announced yesterday. Four major air districts in continental United States will be created, increasing the number of combat groups from an existing 25 to 54. This force will be ready "some time in 1942."

Set Up Home Guard

Meanwhile the United States is moving somewhat along the lines of Canada in setting up a Home Guard Force to take the place of National Guard units which may be called for active service. Stimson said there are 1,000,000 rifles available to arm Home Guards, which would be set up in every state. State governors are being asked to organize these Guards, with arms and equipment to be provided by the War Department.

Two pursuit squadrons are leaving for the Philippines where there are only one squadron each of bombers, observation and pursuit planes. This move will add 30 planes and 320 men to the Air Force there. New squadrons will be equipped with some of the 110 planes manufactured for Sweden and confiscated by the Army.

As general army aviation objectives, the War Department listed:

Active training and organization for approximately 12,800 planes of all classes and types, including trainers. The remainder of more than 18,000 planes ordered since July 1 will be held in reserve.

12,000 Pilots a Year

Increase in the annual output of trained pilots from 7,000 previously contemplated to 12,000, along with an expansion of total personnel to 163,000.

Additional technical schools and instructors to provide sufficient skilled mechanics and specialists.

Acquisition of many new stations for combat groups to be created as personnel and planes become available. Existing military, state and local airports will be used as far as practicable.

Aside from planes, pilots and mechanics, the War Department noted that the expanded air corps would require air base groups, signal, ordnance, quartermaster and engineer companies, and medical corps personnel.

Tweed-Yarker C.N.R. Branch Losses $90,654 In Past Four Years

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 25.—(CP)—The 34-mile Yarker to Tweed subdivision of the Canadian National Railways showed a deficit of $90,654 during the past four years, R. E. Laidlaw, K.C., told the Board of Transport Commissioners here Thursday when application for abandonment of the line was filed.

Revenue from all branches on the sub-division in 1936 was $47,271 and in 1939 it had dropped to $44,264. Expenses for operation on a direct "out-of-pocket" basis amounted to $76,340 in 1936 but these had been reduced to $66,467 in 1939.

J. F. Pringle, General Superintendent of the Southern Ontario division of the Canadian National railways, said the loss was larger than on an average sub-division. Mr. Laidlaw said that during the four-year period, the loss amounted to $47 for each car of traffic moved over the sub-division.

Falling off of revenue was attributed to a diversion of traffic due to improved roads and commercial and private car facilities rather than a decline in industry.

15 Witnesses Testify

Testimony of 15 witnesses representing municipalities that would be affected by the proposed abandonment of the 34-mile Yarker to Tweed subdivision of Canadian National Railways was heard by the board. Decision on the application for closing was reserved until the evidence had been reviewed and possibly some further written submissions considered.

Shipments of livestock, wood products, cheese and grain comprised the principal traffic and it was said that no substantial inconvenience would be placed on drovers or dealers if they had to go short distances over improved highways to other rail accommodation, in comparison to the enormous operating losses being experienced by the company.

Cheese shipments had been practically zero this year in comparison to 42 carloads out of Tweed in 1939 but this was attributed to a marketing scheme of one Belleville buyer who had contracted with the Minister of Food in the old country to supply 5,000 weekly. This cheese was picked up by truck and taken to Belleville from where it was transhipped by boat to Montreal.

I. D. Corcoran, counsel for the municipalities, said the trend of rail business was upward as shown by the company's figures for 1938 and 1939 and that the revenue was $150 a month higher up to the end of August 1940 than in any month during 1939.

He objected to any decisions that would affect or hinder production of war materials or farm products and the tendency during this war duration will be for increased production.

With the testimony of merchants in business along the line that removal of the service would result in advanced prices to the consumer he questioned the saving to the people even if the line was closed.

Beaverbrook Praises Workers Who Defy 'Imminent Danger'

London, Oct. 25.—(CP)— Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft production, praised today the workers in an "important industrial firm" in northwest England who volunteered to continue work even when rooftop spotters report "danger imminent" during air raids.

"Theirs is the spirit which makes our victory certain", the minister said in a statement.

D. S. T. LIKELY TO CONTINUE INDEFINITELY

Will Remain in Force Until End of War at Least—Scope May be Extended

POWER IS SAVED

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (CP)—Daylight Saving Time, now in effect in many Ontario and Quebec municipalities as a power conservation measure, will probably be continued indefinitely in those centres, government circles believed today.

The general opinion on Parliament Hill was that "fast" time likely would remain in effect for the duration of the war, and there were some officials who thought it might be extended to other cities and towns.

It was said that power companies have suggested that Daylight Saving Time should be made more general, but it was not known if H. J. Symington, K.C., Power Controller for the Department of Munitions and Supply, had made any recommendation along that line to the government.

Last Sept. 20 Ontario and Quebec municipalities which had been on Daylight Saving Time during the summer months were ordered to continue on "fast" time indefinitely.

A statement issued then said it was estimated the move would release 189,000 horsepower of electrical energy for industrial use by reducing consumption of power for lighting purposes, and by staggering the hours at which generating plants are required to deliver peak loads.

Around Original Estimate.

No definite figures are available on th actual power saving effected, but it was learned reliably that it is around the original estimate.

The extension order was confined to Ontario and Quebec because mushrooming war industries in those two provinces accentuated the power situation more than anywhere else in Canada. The government considered the order was one means of avoiding a powr shortage that might interrupt the output of essential supplies.

As another move of the same type Canada and the United States have appointed temporary committees to carry out engineering and other investigations leading to early power development on the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River.

Increase Power Output.

But whereas extension of daylight saving time provided additional power immediately, the St. Lawrence power moves are aimed at increasing power output by about 2,000,000 horsepower several years hence. Half of this amount would go to the United States.

For the more immediate future, plans are going ahead to provide Ontario with 300,000 additional horsepower through diversion into Lake Superior of water from Long Lac and the Okoki river in North Western Ontario, generating power there in the process, and diverting an equivalent amount of water at Niagara Falls for power purposes in addition to the amount Ontario now is permitted to divert.

800-Pound Moose Shot in North By Picton Hunters

Back from a hunting expedition in the wilds of Northern Ontario, two Picton residents, F. L. Ward, K.C., and Clarence Jones, are proudly displaying as a trophy of the chase a large 800-pound moose. The fine specimen was on display in front of a Picton store earlier in the week and attracted much attention as many had never seen a moose.

Mr. Ward and Mr. Jones motored to Sudbury, leaving Picton on Sunday, October 13th. From there they travelled by train to Gogama, one hundred miles north and then twelve miles into the bush by canoe and portage to a hunting camp at Beaver Lake Lodge, arriving there on the eve of October 14th.

Bright and early the next morning the party set out on the hunt and after considerable stalking brought down their quarry. Both Mr. Ward and Mr. Jones put shots into the moose, testifying their ability as marksmen. The hunters use Mauser sporting rifles, Mr. Jones' being 7 m.m. and Mr. Ward's 30-06 calibre. Two experienced guides accompanied the Picton men on their expedition.

BRITISH SEAMEN TAKE A PEEK AT LIGHTS OF N.Y.

Reluctant to Talk About Their Experiences on High Seas

ONE ON "HELLSHIP"

(By Foster Barclay)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 25.—(CP)—Seventy British seamen, most of them youngsters, forgot about the war last night to take a peek at Gotham and the bright lights on Broadway.

Reluctant to talk about their experiences on the high seas, but full of questions about New York and all its wonders, the seamen crowded into a bus, drove down swank Park avenue, stopped at the bundles for Britain organization and then headed for a movie on Broadway.

The seamen were part of a crew of more than 100 aboard a British ship that arrived here about a week ago. The voyage took ten uneventful days. They don't know when they will leave. "We're waiting sailing orders", one veteran with 31 years' service said.

At the bundles for Britain shop each was given tobacco, cigarettes and knitted woollen garments.

George Lipscombe, who had a hand in sinking a submarine at Narvik, wanted to talk about New York rather than relate his experiences at the far north Norwegian port.

"That's history now," he said. "I've been here before, but I'd never leave the ship. It's different this time though—it's swell."

"That's right," a mate interjected. "We never could get him away from the nearest bar to port. Now he's galloping all over town."

Aboard "Hellship"

Then there was H. E. Rodgers, 19-year-old Londoner who spent six months aboard the German "hellship," the Altmark, supply ship to the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee. Rodgers' ship was sunk off Spain by the Graf Spee and along with other members of the crew Rodgers was imprisoned aboard the Altmark.

The Graf Spee was driven into Montevideo and scuttled. Rodgers was rescued with some 300 other British merchantmen at Tromsoe, Norway, when seamen from the destroyer Cossack boarded the hellship.

Father and son shipped together on the trip across the Atlantic. Frank Murray, who has just passed his 15th birthday and making his first trip, complained that there was not "enough excitement" during the crossing. "I hope we run into those Germans soon," the young apprentice said.

His father, Robert, has seen plenty of excitement since the war started. Except for about three weeks leave, he has spent most of his time aboard ship. He was at Narvik after the Germans invaded Norway and then was present at the evacuation of Dunkerque.

"That was a swell job," he said. "But gosh, we should have had more planes. But we're getting them now."

George Telfer, a Londoner, had no tale to tell. But he would like to get back to Canada.

"That's a dandy country—I want to get back there sometime. I've harvested in the west, picked apples in the Okanagan, fished off the Maritimes and looked for gold around Dawson and I've never had a better time since."

Aerialist Injured As 'Accidental' Fall Proves Too Real

Toronto, Oct. 25 (CP)—Twenty-three-year-old Bernice Stankevich, of Trenton, N.J., pretty star aerialist of Bob Morton's Shrine Charity circus, suffered a brain concussion here last night when an "accidental" fall proved real and she plunged fifty feet to a concrete floor. Medical authorities expected she would be able to leave hospital in two or three days.

AIR OBSERVERS GRADUATE AT TRENTON

The first group of air observers to graduate under the Empire training scheme received their observer's insignia from the hands of Deputy Air Minister J. S. Duncan in a brief ceremony at Trenton. Mr. Duncan told the graduates, "You are the first of an endless chain."

Incorrect Addresses On Soldiers' Mail Cause Confusion

Despite the fact that the public has been well-informed through the newspapers and by post office lobby notices, as to the proper method of addressing mail intended for soldiers overseas, the attention of local postal authorities has been brought to several instances where letters and parcels posted in this district have gone astray and not having reached the person to whom they were addressed.

These unfortunate circumstances have undoubtedly been caused by the articles in question bearing insufficient or incorrect addresses, state postal officials, and it is pointed out that even though the postal service does everything possible to search military records and complete the addresses, delay is inevitable, with subsequent disappointment and anxiety to the soldiers.

In order that the Canadian Postal Corps may handle soldiers' mail promptly, the co-operation of the public in properly addressing letters is required. Remember, the complete address is essential!

When addressing mail for soldiers overseas always indicate the regimental number, rank, name and details of the unit, ie company or section, battery, holding unit, etc., in addition to the regiment or service. All letters must be addressed to the Base Post Office, Canada. Properly addressed mail for soldiers overseas should read as the following example: L9049 Pte. John Doe, 1st Medium Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, C.A.S.F., Base Post Office, Canada.

If the addressee is still in Canada the mail should not be addressed to the Base Post Office, but directly to the unit of camp in Canada.

In the case of mail being sent to members of the R.C.A.F. who are stationed overseas, it is essential that care must be taken to distinguish between the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force. All mail for R.C.A.F. unit overseas is handled through the Base Post Office at Ottawa and address must include the number, rank, name, squadron or other unit designation, R.C.A.F., overseas. For members of the R.C.A.F. still in Canada, the address includes the number, rank, name, R.C.A.F., correct designation of school or training centre with the post office and the province.

POLICE COURT

"Well, I guess not," haughtily replied William Green, Belleville Indian youth, in reply to the question of whether or not he was prepared to pay a fine and costs, amounting to $37.75, which had been assessed him after Green had been convicted of taking a motor car without the owner's consent. Green appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. and pleaded guilty, but when a fine of $20 and costs was imposed, amounting to $37.75, Green made it quite evident he could not and would not meet the assessed fine. A month's jail term in default was imposed by His Worship. Green was charged with taking a motor car the property of Cecil Jones of this city, and without his owner's consent.

"He drove to Picton and back, damaged the vehicle and abandoned it on West Moira Street", testified Detective Fred Isard.

Three citizens appeared charged with failing to procure their 1940 city dog licences. Numerous excuses were brought forward by the alleged delinquents, one going so far as to say the dog in his possession belonged to a relative in Trenton. "Check on this story", Magistrate Butler ordered Thomas Thorne, city dog catcher, as he ordered the other two to procure their dog tags, or else suffer the consequences of the court.

A non-support case was listed for trial, but the husband concerned failed to put in an appearance. "Bring him in under a warrant", ordered His Worship, after learning the man was in arrears with the weekly payments he had agreed to pay his wife. Two charges of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated were listed for trial, but both were adjourned for one week. R. A. Pringle, barrister for one of the accused men, being present to speak on behalf of his client.

Dr. Samuel Levine Sentenced to Term Of Six Months

Toronto, Oct. 25 (CP).—Dr. Samuel Levine, suspended from the staff of the University of Toronto, today was sentenced to six months imprisonment on each of two charges under the Defence of Canada Regulations, the sentences to run concurrently. Communist literature had been found in his house.

Magistrate J. L. Prentice said he disbelieved the evidence of Levine, a fellow in geophysics, and his witnesses. "It is in my opinion incredible for the accused to have eleven different documents on Communism in his desk and dining room and have two well-known Communists in his home for two weeks and not know it. There will be a conviction."

Levine's counsel announced notice of appeal would be filed at once. The Crown indicated $3,000 bail would be asked. Levine denied any knowledge of the Communist literature, claiming it belonged to two men in his home. The two have since been interned.

Turks Says Hitler's Manoeuvres Indicate Nazis Are in Trouble

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Ankara radio said tonight that Hitler's "trip to the Spanish border shows that Germany's position is difficult."

"If the situation were as the Axis newspapers try to portray it," the wireless added, "would the Axis attempt so many political manoeuvres at once, and would Hitler make such a trip?"

The Ankara commentator said Germany has run into difficulties in the attack on Britain and wants "to use all European nations in this attack."

The broadcast also quoted an editorial by the Ankara newspaper Ulus, which said:

"The small countries which so far have been asked only to stay neutral now are asked to make geographical changes based upon very vague foundations and sometimes directed against England. If the countries still out of the war have blood to let, it is left to them and it is yet to be seen if they (shall) bleed for themselves or other countries."

47,000,000 CHURCHILLS

Count Ciano's newspaper cannot understand the British for it asks, "Is it really true that 47,000,000 Britons are 47,000,000 Churchills, all determined to die under the ruins of the British Empire, rather than give in?"

This is unconsciously a fine tribute to the British people, says the New York Times.

It is also evidence that even Count Ciano knows by this time, as does Hitler, what one Churchill is, let alone 47,000,000 Churchills. One Churchill leading 47,000,000 Britons will defeat the iniquitous dictator alliance which would carve up liberty as a dish for the Huns and the Italians.

One Churchill is seen as the leader against whom the Axis has to exert all its power and then with no hope of victory. The remark in the Telegrafo indicates that Mr. Churchill is a match for the Hitler-Mussolini gang. And with every Englishman, Irishman Scotchman, Welshman and Britisher abroad, a Churchill, what hope is there for the Fascists and Nazis?

Count Ciano shows he does not love his Italy as Churchill loves his British Isles and Empire. Churchill and the Britons love Britain and British liberty more than life itself. They are willing to die for it. But that sublime love of country is far beyond the reach of an Adolf Hitler or a Mussolini, who are out for personal aggrandizement and revenge, and are out to rob and loot the world if they can.

The Italian newspaper in its remark shows that the stout hearts of the British people have caused wonder even in the Fascists.

ODORATED MOVIES SHOWN

The old stage which has ruled for centuries has always approximated life except in its abbreviation of time and its lack of the characteristic odor of the scenes in the play and the temperature which have had to be left to the imagination.

And the stage got along fairly well without them for no one ever thought that in a tavern scene there should be the odor of beer and wine and of smoke or that a scene in an old style play should have the scent of lilacs pervading the theatre.

But with the coming of the motion picture and especially with the advent of sound, there has been talk of two likely innovations, the sense of depth or the fourth dimension and also the odor of a scene to add to the realism of the picture. The picture which is said to be possible with the sense of depth has not made its appearance.

But the Brandon Sun tells of the place of odors in the movies, which it calls the "the smellies." "In New York there have been shown and smelt the new odorated talking pictures. They were sent over from Switzerland. A voice in "My Dream," an odd little trifle, said this was to be a "new frontier" which would "satisfy the demand of the public for new thrills and would give the absolute illusion that is the basis for all successful entertainment."

"In the picture the leading lady is seen smelling lilacs and next one sees the juvenile lead spraying his apartment with cologne. There are quarrels and misunderstandings all scented and they end at the altar with incense floating about. Many scents, sharply accurate, amused the audience. Peaches, bananas, lemons, honey, coffee, bacon, sausages, varnish, newmown hay, pine trees, wood shavings tar, carbolic acid. The odors were more insistent than they would ordinarily have been in real life.

"The showing under the auspices of the commissioner-general of Switzerland, Dr. Victor Nef, was attended by the inventor of the "smellies," Hans E. Laube, and his assistant, Robert Barth. Mr. Laube says the odors came from an apparatus installed on the stage near the screen. It's the loudspeaker idea of disseminating—like music, relayed and reinforced by odor waves made by an electro-cremical apparatus. There are no bottles of perfume used. The odors are produced by turning dials like those on a radio—all batteries and wires—there are no liquids or substances which give off odors. The switchboard can send off odors to an audience of 4,000. There are 3,000 to 4,000 odors recorded.

How will the public react to the odor pictures? There are odors which are pleasant to the great majority of people and yet unpleasant to a few others. Odors will undoubtedly add realism all right and undoubtedly create a suitable mood for a picture. Then what of those people who are very susceptible to the delicious odors of the kitchen? In a scent picture a hearty gourmand could be overcome by a most voracious appetite for a steak which only the steak itself in a restaurant could satisfy. And what of the women who are forced to spend much of their time in cooking and who never want the odor of the preparation of meals to invade their homes, how will they take to cooking scenes if they get the familiar odors into their nostrils in the theatres?

With the advent of smells in the movies, will the advent of atmosphere be next? A winter scene should require chill and a sense of cold. Could an audience stand that in a theatre for the mere sake of realism? Does not a winter scene in the movie itself cause even in the warmest day in summer a sort of reaction in the spectator indicating chill? Will the movies produce scenes some days in the Sahara in torrid temperatures and then have the theatre turn on the heat? So far the audience has been protected from the temperature except as far as instinctive reaction goes and yet the audience has seemed to be satisfied with the pleasure it has received from the pictures.

Frenchmen See Sole Salvation In British Victory Over Germans

By P. J. PHILIP.

New York, October 21. — These past four months have been for every one living in France, whether French or foreign, a nightmare and a torment that has grown constantly worse as the hope that it would end seemed every day to recede further and further away.

On that day in June when the German troops entered Paris an American going to his office, himself anxious and with a heavy heart, met on the street a little old lady who had just left her apartment to do her morning shopping. She had not permitted events to disturb the course of her life—possibly, like nearly everybody else, she had continued hoping that some miracle would happen. Was not General Maxime Weygand in charge? And (here was perhaps the greatest illusion) would not the United States intervene?

Then, just as she passed the American business man on the sidewalk, she suddenly stopped. He saw her look toward the end of the street, hesitate, half turn and finally come toward him trembling.

"Excuse me, monsieur," she said, with a choking voice. "Is that a German soldier?"

She looked toward the green-uniformed young man who stood beside a machine gun at the corner where the street runs into the Champ Elysees.

"He is a German soldier," the American answered, and, so he tells the story, as he spoke the tears leaped into her eyes and began pouring down her cheeks. His own eyes, he confesses, were wet as they stood there for a minute silent.

"Merci, monsieur," she whispered, for even then her natural politeness did not desert her, and she slipped still weeping back into her home.

That was four months ago. Since then she has seen the German soldiers parade every day up the Champs Elysees with their brass band punctually at noon, and most probably she is of that vast majority of French people who stay indoors when this happens, fall into stony silence when a German enters the subway or a restaurant, listen furtively to the British radio in the evening and pray before the statue of St. Joan for General Charles de Gaulle and the Royal Air Force.

For her, since that morning, shopping has become more and more a problem; her probably slender resources have dwindled, for there is no way of making any money; almost certainly she has some son or nephew a prisoner in Germany. For her, as for millions of others, the bottom was dropped out of her whole existence and life has no flavor except the salt flavor of shed and still unshed tears.

Tragedy for Everyone

There is no end to the stories of the individual tragedies that defeat has brought. Every one's life has been torn to pieces. The businessman has no more business or, if he has a little, it has been made immensely complicated and unsure. The doctor and the dentist go on with their work, but their chances of being paid are more slender than ever. The lawyer cannot discover where one law ends and another begins. The house owner cannot collect his rents. The tailor has no more cloth to make clothes. The shopkeeper has little to sell and no prospect of getting new stocks. The taxi and bus driver are idle because there is no more gasoline, and to every man's personal anxiety is added the haunting fear, the deadly oppression of mind and spirit, of the constant presence of the "enemy."

In the "unoccupied" zone, life has still by comparison some appearance of reality, some object, some independence, but even there every day is filled with anxiety, with fear and, especially in the homes of those thousands of demobilized men who cannot find work, with the beginning of want. No one who has not seen or known it can imagine the unhappiness of life in a country which has been defeated and is held prisoner.

From Norway to the Spanish frontier all Europe is in this plight, and to a European the argument that the United States should not get "entangled" in this war sounds as inhuman as the attitude of the man who stands on the bank and watches another man drown because he thinks that perhaps that man deserves to drown, and anyhow he would ruin his clothes if he tried to save him.

More and more, as these months have passed, the French people along with the Belgians, the Dutch, the Danes and all the others, have reached the conclusion that their only hope lies in Great Britain.

As long as the British hold, there is still some hope that the war may still be won. But the French know better than any how strong the Germans are. They see every day the smooth working power of Adolf Hitler's immense war machine. The German soldiers may be depressed looking and almost cowed, but they are strong, courageous and terribly numerous.

That procession with its bands playing which marches up the Champs Elysees every day is only a surface demonstration of the force of the organization. Planes fly overhead in hundreds. There are guns to spare for every purpose. The French and German civilians may go short of food but the German soldier does not.

Sometimes he presents a comic figure with his routine mechanical obedience. At Biarritz this past summer the French could not refrain from giggling when they saw successive squads of Germans being marched down to the sea to bathe. Every man took up his position in line, four feet apart, and went through the business of undressing with uniform precision.

Every belt was undone, every tunic and pair of trousers stripped at exactly the same second with the same gesture. They "clicked" their clothes off, one woman said, stood up in line and threw themselves into the water with the precision of a parade. They all swam the same distance, returned in line and dressed as precisely as they undressed.

To the French, accustomed to seeing every man take his own time and go his own way, it was all immensely funny, but they have come also to realize that this machine-like obedience and movement is not just funny. It is frightening. Along the shores everywhere, this machine is being trained for the invasion of England.

The first wave of men leaps from the boats and throws equipment ashore. These men know that that is all that is expected of them. That action is likely to be their last, for they are almot sure to die, but behind them comes a second wave without equipment, which leaps forward and seizes the machine guns and bombs that the first have thrown and carries them ten or twenty yards up the beach. They too, will probably be killed, but behind them, covered by an intense bomb, shell and machine-gun barrage, hidden by a smoke screen there will be a third and a fourth wave.

The Germans assert that although 1,000,000 men may be killed the second million will succeed in the invasion of England whenever Hitler orders it.

When the collapse came in June there were a great many Frenchmen who shared the view of the new Government that the wisest course for the British to take would be to accept the inevitable and seek a negotiated peace with the Reich while the forces of the Empire were still intact.

By doing so, they argued, the British would be able to prevent the catastrophe of the defeat of France from becoming a world catastrophe, and they would be able to help France rebuild. That view was in keeping with the general attitude of many Frenchmen throughout the course of the war, and was undoubtedly one of the primary causes of the collapse, for it showed to what an extent the French were divided in mind about the real character of the war.

The cause of that division of mind is not difficult to find. It lay in the general dissatisfaction that all classes felt with the excessively political character of life in the Republic, which had crept even into primary school education Everybody had begun to lose faith in his country because of the identification of the interests of that country with those of some political doctrine.

Sectarianism Danger

Sectarianism was rampant. The Royalists had become more strident than ever in the claims that the only hope lay in the re-establishment of the monarchy. The Socialists and the Communists differed violently on the degree to which the Marxian principle should be applied as a remedy for all ailments.

The Radical Socialists, who had lost ground in the elections of 1936 to both the more extreme Right and the more extreme Left and yet managed to obtain control from 1937 onward, had sacrificed a great deal of their traditional role as defenders of individual rights in their opportunist alliances, now with the Socialists and then with the Right in which opposition to Communism had developed certain Fascist sympathies.

Amid all this political confusion France was more nearly ripe for internal political revolution than for an international war. The great difficulty was that only a very few felt clearly in which direction they wanted that revolution to go. The vast majority wanted a political revolution to get rid of politics and permit that pleasant life without doctrine and without excessive taxation which had characterized the early years of the Republic.

It was, of course, a vain hope, and those who like hypothetical speculations can work it out for themselves whether the present fate of France is worse now under German domination than it would have been if it had been torn by civil war and reduced to such distress as has befallen Spain.

What is very obvious is that out of all this political quarrelling and its consequence on the conduct of the war it is the non-political man in the street who is the greatest sufferer. He has lost everything or nearly everything, and it is among this vast majority of sufferers, from the taxicab driver who believed himself to be a Communist to the manufacturer who believed himself to be a Fascist and are now both ruined and sometimes hungry, that the conviction has grown that the British were right to go on fighting for their crooked roads, their open fireplaces, their beefsteak, their boiled potatoes and all the little things that make life pleasant.

For these past four months of enemy occupation have shown to every man, woman and child in France that it is only the little things of life that matter, its small accomplishments and small possessions, quiet at night and the good smell of breakfast. All the dividing "isms" from which France was suffering have been swept away, at least for the moment, and the people who wait in queues outside the shops are no longer concerned with these doctrinal remedies and high-sounding formulae of government that sounded grand as long as there was plenty to eat and security of labor.

In the long lines of patient, hungry people outside the shops in Paris and on the green chairs in the park at Vichy, where formerly the people taking the cure used to sit and discuss their ailments and the qualities of the various curative waters they were drinking; the only subject of conversation now is: Can the British hold and will the Americans throw their immense weight into the struggle in the next few months?

No one has the right to criticize people for thinking, talking and hoping like that. When a man has lost everything serving what he believed to be the common cause he is justified in hoping that his friends will help him, and it is true of these French people that they now feel themselves urged of most, if not all, of these weaknesses and faults for which they have been much criticized.

That little old lady who cried that first morning when she saw a German soldier on the Champs Elysees, these workmen in the airplane and tank factories who did not do their tremendous best while the war was on because they were not quite sure what they were fighting for, those sectarian politicians who knew better than every one else how France and the world should be governed, those people of all classes who took the war casually and felt that France had done enough last time and some one else could do their fighting for them—all have come to realize that the only thing that matters is personal freedom, and that they will never have that under the Nazi system.

They have no idea what kind of government they will make for themselves if and when the Germans are dislodged. They have no idea how long it will take to get free from this oppression. But where their sympathies now lie is clearly shown in the way they cheer the Royal Air Force in the cinemas in Paris, despite the German threat to close the theatres if these demonstrations continue, and their calm acceptance in the north of the bombing of their ports and houses by the British if only that way they can be ultimately rid of these green-uniformed Germans and the Gestapo who represent Hitler and the Nazi conception of life.

It is far too remote yet for speculation as to what will happen, but on these green chairs in the park at Vichy it is interesting to note how often the conversations end with some expression of admiration for the British monarchial system. It would be rash to deduce from these remarks that the French are turning monarchist. Yet the drift of opinion seems definitely to be for the creation of some symbolic form of government and some impersonal leader to take the place of the now tattered figure of Marianne.

For that reason the Vichy Government under Marshall Henri Philippe Petain's leadership has won a certain popular support by calling for the restoration of family life and dignity of labor. Where it has failed is in its opposition to Britain. With that attitude the great majority of French people are not in sympathy, for they know that if the British lose, all the plans of the Vichy Government will be swept away. These four months of Nazi occupation have proved to them that this war is not an international war in the old sense nor even a doctrinal war, but has become part of that everlasting inextricable human conflict between good and evil in which all men fumble blindly but in which the only honorable role is that of the man who goes on fighting.

That is why, vaguely and without prospect of being able again to take part for perhaps years to come, the great majority of the French people are on the side of General de Gaulle and the British.— Montreal Gazette.

Curing Bed Wetting—Enuresis

One of the gratifying discoveries in recent years is a method or methods of curing bed wetting or enuresis. Even after children reach their teens, they may be embarrassed by this distressing condition. That it is due to nervousness or emotional disturbances in the majority of cases is true and many have been cured by frank talks by the family physician. Punishments and rewards are not now used to any great extent in the treatment.

In young children, liquids are cut down toward evening, the child is made to pass his urine before going to bed and as the parents are retiring the child is awakened by his parents and walks to the bathroom to pass his urine. This gets him completely awake and is considered an important part of the treatment. Formerly the parent carried the child to the bathroom and in many cases he was not completely awake when passing his urine. Part of the treatment also were methods to prevent the child lying on his back during sleep—knot in tail of sleeping garment, narrow space in bed preventing him lying on his back.

A great advance in the treatment of older boys and girls is the eating of the salt sandwich. No liquid of any kind is allowed after 4 p.m. and a sandwich of bread and butter with a layer of table salt, or salt fish, or salt meat is given at bedtime. As salt holds 70 times its own weight of water, this great amount of salt at bedtime holds the water in the tissues till morning, thus preventing it going down to the kidneys and thence to the bladder.

However there are some cases of bed wetting that are not due to nervousness or to emotional disturbance, but to some condition of the kidneys, bladder, or the generative organs themselves. The editor of the Journal of The American Medical Association advices that before any treatment for bed wetting is begun, a thorough examination of the kidneys, bladder and generative organs be made including Xrays to determine whether cause is organic or functional (due to nervousness). Thus if the home treatment as outline above is not effective, examination by a genito-urinary specialist should be given.

Navy men in Washington are more than doubtful of the Axis' ability to gain control of the Suez canal by way of the eastern end of the Mediterranean. All their information indicates that British war craft dominate that sea very effectively. The Italians claim a few successes against John Bull's fleet, but U. S. experts don't believe them. From the accounts they get, their impression is that Signor Mussolini is bottled up pretty tightly, so far as the surface of the water is concerned. That he has a good air force is recognized, but it's reasoned that it must be insufficient to offset his enemy's maritime superiority or it would have done so already. And Germany doesn't signify at all in the Mediterranean. It has planes, to be sure, but they're overly busy elsewhere.

There are, indeed, alternative routes from Axis soil Suezward, one of them entirely overland — across the Balkans and southern Russia, between the Black and Caspian seas, over the Caucasus mountains and then through Turkey and Syria. But that's an impossible distance. Moreover, Russia most probably would object, and Turkey most certainly.

Or the Axis forces might traverse the Balkans to the Black sea; thence by water to the northern Turkish coast.

Or, again, they might trek through the Balkans to the Bosphorus, the Mediterranean's subsea of Marmora or the Dardanelles and ferry themselves over to Turkey.

Russia a Thorn

The Axis gang probably could navigate the Black sea without any British interference, though it's not unlikely that Comrade Stalin would object, despite his tie-up with Herr Hitler and Benito. And maybe Axis fighters could get across the Bosphorus, Marmora or the Dardanelles. Those are wee bits of water.

However, the little Balkan countries are first to be reckoned with. Hitler and Mussolini have some of them already actually occupied or intimidated. Others, though, like Yugoslavia and Greece, act scrappy. Still, it's no safe bet that they, too, can't be bulldozed — provided they don't get backing from Russia. That they won't get it is no safe bet, either.

But, finally, how about Turkey? The Turks behave as viciously anti-Axis as so many fighting cocks.

The Balkan peoples can scrap formidably among themselves, but they're unequal to wage up-to-date warfare and they know it; they can be scared. The Russians, also good scrappers, are incompetently led. If undistracted by a western war, the Germans presumably could lick 'em.

The Turks, though? Those birds have been underestimated. They've been misrepresented likewise. They are nice folk normally. I visited 'em while they were having their revolution, which overthrew Adbul Hamid. Louis Einstein, a subsequently very distinguished career diplomat, was the first secretary of the U.S. embassy in Constantinople (now Istanbul). A mild kind of anarchy reigned. There wasn't any government. Yet there wasn't any disorder. I asked Louis how he accounted for the respectability of everything. "It's due," he said, "to the natural peaceful nature of the Turks." And he knew the country.

Tough When Aroused

But "beware the fury of a patient man." When those Turks take the warpath they're a sure-enough handful. In the last war they were on Germany's side, the British tried to lick 'em, at the Dardanelles, and Winston Churchhill himself couldn't do it.

This time they're committed to the democratic defence of Suez, and they number 1,000,000 bayonets.

Oh, yes, Hitler and Mussolini left to themselves, no doubt can wallop Russia or Turkey, either one of them. U. S. military critics, though, say it's no 100 per cent. gamble that they can wallop the Turks alone, at such long range, with Britain chewing at 'em from the opposite direction.

Hence, the experts guess that Suez will be no easy grab for the totalitarians.

Gibraltar, at the Mediterranean's western end, is different. The Fascists and Nazis, with France conquered and the Spanish in no fix to do any resisting (even if they want to) can jump on Gibraltar from its landward side, perhaps getting it.

As for Suez, the average expert surmise is that the Turks will hang on to it as long as the British are able to hold out elsewhere.

Scott preached a splendid sermon, taking his text from the first verse of 107th Psalm "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever." His sermon on praise and thanksgiving was very impressive, pointing out what Thanksgiving should mean to each one. If the gift of God, His son, Jesus Christ our Saviour, who saves us, and leads us on the life everlasting, were only now appreciated, thankgiving would have a deeper meaning in hearts of each individual, and there would be more praise and thanks given Him. Special music was given by the choir and at the close of the service communion service was conducted by the pastor.
